GIANT MOON HAUL

Apollo 14 Speeding To Earth's Gravity

SPACE CENTER, Houston (UPI)—Apollo 14's sleepy astronauts sped into the welcome gravity of the "shimmering crescent" earth today with a bonus that could hasten the day when men in space work for men on the ground.

Alan B. Shepard, Edgar D. Mitchell and Stuart A. Roosa passed a point 161,512 miles in space where earth's gravitation pull becomes stronger than the moon's and began accelerating toward their South Pacific splashdown about 4 p.m. EST, Tuesday.

Enroute home the moon pilots issued a plea for world peace and understanding and voiced the hope their space mission could contribute toward the "solving of the problems of the world."

They carried a record haul of 109 pounds of rocks and soil collected from the moon's Fra Mauro Valley Friday and Saturday. Scientists hope some of their samples are fossil chunks of the primitive lunar crust.

With the moon shrinking behind them, Shepard and his crew turned their attention to earth Sunday night with a television demonstration of ways to use space to manufacture exotic materials.

They awoke "grumbling" today after a 10-hour rest period, but ground communicator Fred W. Haise told them the "banker's hours" had to end so they'd be back on schedule for Tuesday splashdown maneuvers. The astronauts reported they had slept for only four hours.

Mitchell said they were "very comfortable" as they began their last day in space. When told chilly temperatures prevailed at the Manned Spacecraft Center, Mitchell asked: "What's wrong? Did they move Houston to the North Pole?"

Ground controllers still didn't know which side of the international dateline Apollo 14 would be on when it splashes into the warm, gentle waters of the South Pacific. It could land on either the Tuesday or Wednesday side of the line.

It will make little difference to the astronauts, however, since the recovery carrier will head toward American Samoa where it will still be Tuesday. They will return to Houston early Friday.

During their telecast, the pilots carried out four experiments which could lead to space manufacture of exotic materials and Shepard said they hoped spaceflight would "go a long way toward solving the problems of the world, problems of understanding between people of different nations."

"We are reminded, however, as we look at that shimmering crescent tonight—which is the earth on our way back—that there is still fighting going on."

Saying he spoke for the whole crew, America's space pioneer added:

"The three of us all have acquaintances, friends and even relatives in Vietnam. We are reminded that some of the people, some of the men who have gone to Vietnam have not returned and are still held there, listed as missing in action, or as prisoners of war.

"It is our wish tonight that we can in some way contribute through our effort through the space program to promote a better understanding and peace throughout the world and help to rectify the situations which still exist."

The astronauts, now returning to normal work schedules for the first time since the launch Jan. 31, began a 10-hour sleep period early today. Before turning in, the spacemen broadcast some music on tapes in their cabin.

"Sounds like you're having a party up there," said ground communicator Gordon Fullerton.

"That's the only ingredient we have for a party," Mitchell replied.

Today was one of rest for the pilots before the start of final earth-entry preparations early Tuesday. One event on their schedule was a televised question and answer session with newsmen at 6:30 p.m. EST.

Nixon: Pay For Polluting

WASHINGTON (UPI) —President Nixon proposed today a broad, stringent air and water pollution control program and a national land use policy as a major federal commitment to win the battle for a better environment.

In an 18-page message to Congress, Nixon asked for tough controls to combat air and water pollutants by imposing charges on sulphur oxides and a tax on lead in gasoline to supplement present regulatory controls.

He also called for:

—More effective control of water pollution through a $12 billion standard-setting national program.

— Comprehensive improvement in pesticide control authority.

—A federal program to encourage re-cycling of paper.

—Regulation of toxic substances and noise pollution.

—Further legislation to restrict ocean dumping.

—A greatly expanded open space and recreation program to bring parks to the people in urban areas.

—Advance public agency approval of power plant sites and transmission line routes.

—Regulation of environmental effects of surface and underground mining.

In his message, Nixon said "there can be no doubt of our growing national commitment to find solutions" to the destruction of the environment.

"The program I am proposing today will require some adjustments by government at all levels, by our industrial and business community, and by the public in order to meet this national commitment," he said.

Nixon signaled his intention to intensify the anti-pollution fight in his State of the Union and budget messages.

Sen. Edmund S. Muskie of Maine, considered the current front-runner among possible Democratic presidential candidates for 1972, introduced a package of environmental proposals last week.

Nixon said his proposals would be costly, then added: "But as we strive to expand our national effort, we must also keep in mind the greater cost of not pressing ahead.

"The battle for a better environment can be won," he told Congress, "and we are winning it. With the program I am outlining in this message we can obtain new victories and prevent problems from reaching the crisis stage."

The President cited news of more widespread mercury pollution, smog alerts last summer in much of the east and repeated episodes of ocean dumping and oil spills.

He commented: "No part of the United States has been free from (environmental problems) and all levels of government — federal, state and local —have joined in the search for solutions.

Nixon said at another point: "We must have action to meet the needs of today if we would have the kind of environment the nation demands for tomorrow." Nixon stressed that sulphur oxides —emanating in large part from industrial plants —are among the most damaging air pollutants and have been linked to incidents of such diseases as bronchitis and lung cancer.

"In terms of damage to human health, vegetation and property, sulphur oxide emis-

Assault Begins On Ho Chi Minh Trail

U.S. Aids Attack By Air

SAIGON (UPI) — U.S. helicopter gunships and fighter-bombers led elements of a 20,000-man South Vietnamese force into Laos today in a long-awaited offensive against the North Vietnamese Ho Chi Minh supply trail and bases. Heavy groundfire brought down six U.S. helicopters, killing two crewmen.

First reports indicated that Communist forces dug into the hills in Laos just across the border from the reactivated U.S. base at Khe Sanh were putting up stiff resistance against the Allied thrust.

"We took so much fire, I couldn't believe it," said Capt. Jasper Sander, 31, of Shrewsbury, Mass., a helicopter pilot who was shot down and made it back to Khe Sanh in South Vietnam's northwest corner. "There were a lot of Communists all over the place."

No U.S. ground troops took part in the cross-border drive in obedience to Congressional strictures but a 9,000-man American force was supporting the campaign from positions along the border. The administration has pledged that unlimited U.S. airpower will be used to protect American lives.

Field reprots said 5,000 South Vietnamese paratroopers and tank troops ere involved in the drive into Laos. The paratroopers were reported to have been flown into five landing zones as far as 12 miles inside Laos in scores of U.S. Army UH1 helicopters. South Vietnamese armored cavalry-men crossed the Xe Don River beginning at 7 a.m. three hours before the thrust was officially announced, field reports said.

There were conflicting reports on the use of American artillery in support of the campaign. U.S. headquarters in Saigon acknowledged American helicopter and tactical air support but denied that U.S. artillerymen had fired into Laos. But a U.S. military spokesman in the field said the first American artillery shell crashed into Laos at 8:18 a.m. today. Two hours later, UPI correspondents Kenneth J. Braddick and Robert E. Sullivan reported seeing U.S. 175mm guns and eight-inch howitzers opening up on positions in Laos.

Laos, technically neutral, immediately protested the campaign, although Premier Souvanna Phouma has tacitly approved American air operations against the Ho Chi Minh supply trail which runs from North Vietnam through eastern Laos into South Vietnam and Cambodia.

The South Vietnamese government said the Laos campaign was fully justified because North Vietnamese troops were using bases in Laos to launch attacks against South Vietnam. A Saigon announcement said the operation was limited "in time as well as in space," and President Nguyen Van Thieu said all South Vietnamese troops would "withdraw completely" when they complete the job of "disrupting the supply and infiltration network of Communist North Vietnamese troops" in Laos.

The Soviet Union denounced the offensive as "a dangerous new stage" of U.S. involvement in Indochina which has opened "a new front of war."

The Viet Cong issued a similar denunciation and charged that troops from Laos and Thailand were joining the invasion.

Britain said the drive was

Pentagon's Bureaucracy Is Attacked

WASHINGTON (UPI) —A General Accounting Office (GAO) study of Defense Department management says indecisiveness and layer upon layer of bureaucracy have cost the taxpayer endless millions as the military buys weapons.

The study covered weapons developed during the 1960s and concluded that while the original estimates said they would cost $83 billion, they were now up to $117 billion.

That 40 per cent increase in the 1960s was an improvement over cost overruns in the 1950s when, according to a study by two Harvard Business School researchers, final costs more than doubled original estimates. Figures for both decades included inflation costs as well as alleged management bungles.

The new study by the GAO, congressional watchdog agency, had some praise for the department. For example, it said money was being saved because the armed services were now telling manufacturers to demonstrate that a weapon worked first rather than ordering billions of dollars in goods that worked only on paper.

The management study, still in draft form, is expected to be released in about a month. GAO officials said the report to Congress scored the Defense Department for alleged duplication of effort, indecisiveness and for compounding its own problems with countless layers of bureaucracy.

They pointed out that in a management study these are the problems usually uncovered and added that Pentagon management was improving.

Soviets Awaken Robot On Moon

MOSCOW (UPI)—The Lunokhod One moon robot has awakened from two weeks of mechanical hibernation and begun prowling through the craters of the Sea of Rains, the Soviets said today.

The Tass News Agency announcement said the eight-wheeled buggy was reactivated by space controllers Sunday, one day after the Apollo 14 astronauts blasted off from their landing site far to the south.

"During the session, the moon vehicle covered 323 meters (353 yards) in a northerly direction, moving on a surface... with craters from 30 to 40 meters in diameter," Tass said.

"During the second half of the communications session, the Lunokhod entered an area of a big crater where there were many boulders of different sizes," it said.

During the five-hour session, Tass said, Lunokhod also photographed its delivery ship, Luna 17, which brought it to the moon last Nov. 17, and took pictures of the sun.

The Soviets announced Friday night, while Alan B. Shepard and Edgar D. Mitchell were taking their first walk on the moon, that Lunokhod was getting set for another period of

Juvenile Court Bar To Over-18s Urged

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Legislation limiting the criminal jurisdiction of juvenile courts to persons under 18 years old was proposed today by Assemblyman Frank Murphy.

The Santa Cruz Republican, former chairman of the Criminal Justice Committee, released a committee report saying that presently "children of the white middle class" involved in drug cases benefit most from the law allowing judges to send suspects aged 18 to 20 to Juvenile Court.

His proposal would also repeal a part of the law allowing teenaged runaways and truants to be jailed with murderers and armed robbers.

"Under this bill the courts will retain jurisdiction over such minors but they will have to rely more on social resources and less on penal controls when trying to cope with their problems," Murphy said.

The committee report said that in cases where the court had the power to refer a criminal suspect either to juvenile authorities or to adult court "the greatest proportion" of the cases sent to juvenile court involved minors over 18 arrested for drug abuse.

"In effect, the Juvenile Court is being used to avoid what many people consider to be the unnecessarily harsh consequences of our drug laws," it said.

The document went on to point out that many young drug suspects have a "middle class background" and no serious earlier record. "Since these are more likely to be white middle class children it is consequently the children of the white middle class who benefit most from the court's good intentions."

Protest At Stanford To Laos Action

STANFORD (UPI)—Roving bands of young people smashed windows and hurled rocks at Stanford campus police Sunday night following a mass rally to protest the allied invasion of Laos.

New left activist Tom Hayden, one of the "Chicago Seven" riot conspiracy defendants, addressed 600 young people at Dinkelspeil Auditorium shortly before some 200 began their rampage across the campus.

"Roving groups are breaking windows at the Hoover Institution annex, the Graduate School of Business, the School of Engineering and administrative offices," a university spokesman reported from campus police headquarters.

"It's pretty much a repetition of what happened here after the Cambodian invasion," he said, "but apparently much less serious. We don't think we'll have to call in outside help."

However, at least a busload of Santa Clara County deputies were reported dispatched to the campus and police from Palo Alto and San Jose were on standby.

"We don't know who the leadership is," the spokesman said. "there's a hard core of 20 to 25 people moving from point to point, some of them wearing ski masks. Campus police are reporting on their movement and taking photographs."

The window-smashing started at 8:30 p.m., after the mass rally began to break up.

No arrests or injuries were reported.

Flying rocks broke windows in two campus police squad car, one of which was flashing a spot light on demonstrators and several fights broke out between "trashers" and members of the Free Campus Movement.

A false warning that a computer building would be bombed proved unfounded.

Two arson attempts at destroying buildings on the Stanford campus occurred during a 24-hour period over the weekend.

A fire bomb was hurled into the first floor of the campus athletics building Saturday night. The structure houses ROTC classrooms on the second floor.

CONGRESS REACTS

Critics Protest Laotian Invasion

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The United States insisted today that the American-supported movement of South Vietnamese foreces into Laos was not a widening of the Indochina war. But Sen. Frank Church called it "the opening of the third front."

The State Department issued a lengthy statement at midmorning to justify the Laotian operation. The statement stressed what the department said was the limited nature of the operation and the limited area involved as well as reiterated that no American ground forces would be used.

But Church, D-Idaho, a cosponsor of legislation that banned use of U. S. troops in Cambodia, said it was enlargement of the war. Sen. Harold E. Hughes, D-Iowa, said "drastic means" were needed to end all U. S. involvement in Indochina.

Sen. John Sherman Cooper, R-Ky., the other main sponsor of the Cooper-Church amendment on limiting the U. S. role in Iambodia, said that if the Laotian operation was "limited to stopping supplies and men" from moving from North Vietnam down the Ho Chi Minh Trail, he would not object.

The State Department, in its statement, emphasized that "the operation will be a limited one both as to time and area."

The statement said: "The principal new factor is the South Vietnamese forces will move in against the enemy on the ground to deny him sanctuaries and to disrupt the main artery of supplies he has been able to use so effectively against the American and South Vietnamese forces in the past."

It said the action would be confined entirely to that portion of Laos between the 16th and 17th parallels, where it said major Communist concentrations were located.

Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R-N. Y., criticized the Laotian operation and said: "The only answer is a U. S. policy to withdraw from Vietnam without regard to Vietnamization," President Nixon's program for turning the burden of the war over to the South Vietnam.

A group of peace organizations made an appeal for demonstrations Wednesday against the U. S. involvement. A spokesman said demonstrations had been scheduled for New York, Washington, Chicago, Boston, Santa Barbara, Calif., and Kent State College in Ohio.

Sen. George Aiken, R-Vt., said the latest action "was not unexpected. The rumors indicated the movement would come. They've (administration) assured me time and again that no (U.S.) ground troops would cross the border."

Aiken said he hoped the move "will help us with the withdrawal program."

The White House also declined to comment early today on the border crossing, referring all inquiries to the Defense Department.

Assistant Defense Secretary Daniel Z. Henkin said, "I want to emphasize that no U. S. ground combat personnel or advisers will be involved."

WIRE NEWS BRIEFS From Everywhere

Korean Takeover

SEOUL (UPI)—U.S. combat troops will not be manning the Korean truce front beyond June and the defense of the entire border will be left to South Korean forces, President Park Chung-Hee said today.

Park issued a special statement on the recently concluded negotiations between the United States and South Korea on the modernization of the Korean armed forces and reduction by 20,000 of the 64,000 U.S. troops in Korea.

Agnew Change Seen

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (UPI)—Gov. William G. Milliken, who disagreed frequently with Vice President Spiro T. Agnew during the 1970 campaign, believes "the vice president is already beginning to move in different directions."

"He's the President's primary advocate for revenue sharing and he's going to be doing a great deal of travelling abroad," Milliken said Sunday on a taped broadcast of "The Governor's Report" on WOOD-TV. "Yes, I think we'll see quite a different picture of the vice president."

However, Milliken said talk about whether Agnew would be picked as the vice presidential candidate in 1972 should wait until 1972.

Gomulka Bounced

WARSAW (UPI)—The Central Committee of Poland's Communist party criticized former party leader Wladyslaw Gomulka for "serious mistakes" Sunday and dropped him from its rolls.

The demotion of four of Gomulka's chief lieutenants was also announced.

Gomulka, 65, has deen under treatment for circulatory troubles and loss of vision since he was succeeded as party chief by Edward Gierek after last December's riots in which 45 were killed. The committee took note of his poor health in announcing the suspension.

Press Freedom Bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Rep. Edwin B. Forsythe, R-N. J., announced today he was introducing legislation to bar federal officials from forcing newsmen to disclose confidential information or sources of information in most cases.

The exceptions would be cases involving threats to national security and certain defamation proceedings, Forsythe said.

Forsythe said official attempts to obtain the notes, unedited film and tapes of newspaper and broadcast reporters "represent a serious threat to freedom of the press and the time-honored rights to newsmen to protect confidential sources."

Women Get Vote

ZURICH (UPI)—Switzerland has become the last major European country to grant women the right to vote.

"It was high time," said a 30-year-old housewife in commenting on the "women's liberation" national referendum Sunday in which almost a million men voted 2 to 1 in favor of female suffrage. "I always was in favor but my husband still voted against it."

The constitutional amendment also gives women the right to hold federal offices.

Sees Setback

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, says the Nixon administration request for a defense budget increase is a setback for domestic needs.

Muskie said Sunday President Nixon was using money saved from Vietnam cutbacks to finance new military projects.

The $229.2 billion budget sent to Congress last month includes a $1 billion increase in defense spending.

Pope On Apollo

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — Pope Paul VI, one of the most vocal fans of the astronauts, sees the Apollo 14 moon mission as part of man's search to know himself and to know God.

The poniff has received all the astronauts who have visited the Vatican. He has praised them, blessed them, given them medals and discussed all their flights during his public appearances.

Sunday he devoted most of his speech during his traditional noontime blessing to pilgrims and tourists to the latest lunar landing which he said "once again fills us with astonishment and admiration "for the achievements of man.

Apollo Prayer

WASHINGTON (UPI)—President Nixon attended worship services at the White House Sunday devoted to prayers for the safe return of the Apollo 14 astronauts.

Nixon said the service was "quiet, eloquent and timely." Dr. Jacob A. O. Preus, president of the Missouri Synod of the Lutheran Church, delivered a sermon while evangelist Billy Graham sat among the congregation.

CANDLELIGHT — Caught in the lobby of the Barclay Hotel by a power blackout in New York City, this man appears uncertain about what he should do next. Heavy Snow, Rains Plague East; Tornado Injures 250 In Florida

By United Press International

New York City police called for boats to rescue stranded motorists from flooded expressways, heavy snow piled up in upstate New York and New England and up to four inches of snow caused hazardous driving in parts of the southeast today as winter weather continued to plague the nation.

The upper midwest was so cold even the Detroit Zoo's polar bears didn't like it.

The national weather service posted heavy snow warnings for a large area from western Massachusetts and southern and western New York south to Virginia. By early today Binghampton and Albany, N.Y., each reported seven inches of new snow and several other upstate cities had as much as four inches.

Travelers warnings were posted as far south as the gulf coast states.

New York City and Long Island had heavy rains. As much as four feet of water stood in some expressways in the area and police called for small boats to rescue drivers on the Southern State Parkway. Parts of the Belt Parkway and the Harlem River Drive also were closed because of high water. The national weather service issued flash flood warnings for an area from New Jersey to South Carolina.

A tornado spawned by the same frontal system ripped through Gulf Breeze, Fla., Sunday, destroying an apartment complex and injuring 250 persons.

"I looked out the window and saw things were flying by real fast," said Terris Neuman, 19. "It sounded like a train coming, it was rumbling and rumbling and your ears kept pressing."

Damage from the twister was estimated as high as $5 million. There were no fatalities.

Snowfall Sunday prompted travelers warnings for parts of 12 states from northeast New Mexico across the Texas Panhandle and into Ohio and Maryland.

Blackout Darkens City, Leaving Chaos, Frolics

NEW YORK (UPI)—A large area of midtown Manhattan went dark Sunday night when electric power failures blacked out blocks of office buildings, disrupted radio and television broadcasts and affected subway and train service.

Four large neighborhoods were blacked out for several hours, Broadway's "Great White Way" flickered dimly, traffic was snarled and hundreds of extra police were called out in a near-freezing rain to unravel the chaos.

The power system was crippled from 7:12 p.m. EST until 11:42 p.m., when the last of the blacked-out area was restored to service. But when it was over, New Yorkers sighed with relief and compared their difficulties favorably with those caused by the Great Northeast Blackout of 1965. Impromptu festivities, mostly candlelit, sprang up in bars and other spots—as unlikely as the top of the Empire State Building—where people were stranded.

There were no injuries attributable to Sunday's blackout reported.

The Consolidated Edison Co., which supplies electricity to all of the city and some suburbs, said the situation was caused by a massive short-circuit in a 138,000-volt transformer at its Waterside generating station, located on the East River just south of the United Nationa.

The short-circuit, a deafening, circuit-snapping crack described as an explosion by workers at the plant, enacted automatic switching equipment that immediately cut off power to two "grids" distributing electricity to the Times Square area and Greeley Square.

The problem was instantly apparent to millions of persons throughout the metropolitan area when their television sets went blank. The Empire State Building, which has transmitting antennas for nine television stations and 13 FM radio stations atop its 1,250-foot tower, was in the first area affected.

Because their television sets were not operating, many people in other parts of the city which had normal electricity thought their power was reduced or cut. Rumors about the extent of the blackout flew about the city.

Some people in the city found time to be jolly amid their difficulties. A group of local government officials from upstate New York gathered around a piano hotel lobby singing songs such as "The Sidewalks of New York." Many other knots of people weathered the blackout — and the cold, driving rain outside — in bars lit only by candles.

Mrs. John Richter of Pomfort, N.Y., was playing the piano in the cavernous lobby of the Commodore Hotel, accompanying herself for "Shine On, Harvest Moon" on a kazoo. Three candles threw light on the keyboard. "There's really no point in just sitting around in the dark, now is there?" Mrs. Richter asked.

When the Empire State Building's power went out, 40 tourists who were looking out over the city from the 86th-floor observation deck were stranded. That fact was verified by two policemen and a reporter who walked up all 86 flights of stairs. They completed the climb in 48 minutes, panting for breath, then walked up 16 more flights to the 102nd floor, where 25 people were trapped. "They're going to send us to the psycho ward," said Patrolman Harry Goulding.

The tourists, although astonished at the climbers' arrival, said they were not worried about their plight. An elderly woman from Ireland gave her opinion on the cause of the blackout —"If people wouldn't make toast, there'd be no power trouble." A couple necked in the corner.

But the problems in midtown Manhattan were severe. Office buildings went dark and those traffic lights that stayed lit were jammed, snarling the traffic and restricting the travel of emergency vehicles. Elevators were inoperative and a section of the subway system was shut down. Grand Central Terminal was darkened.

British Troops, Snipers Exchange Fire In Belfast

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI)—British troops fought gun battles with snipers in Belfast's streets today. To the south, explosions rocked two border stations.

An army spokesman said one soldier was slightly wounded shortly after midnight when a burst of seven rounds was fired at a military patrol. He returned the fire, hitting one and possibly two civilians.

Shortly after the incident on the Roman Catholic Falls Road area, troops intercepted a civilian being taken by ambulance to a hospital, the spokesman said.

Explosions damaged two customs posts near the border town of Newry, the spokesman said. At one post, two men with guns entered the building and ordered the customs men out moments before the explosion.

The spokesman said troops early today found the body of a man they believed to be an informer who had been executed by the outlawed Irish Republican Army (IRA), which advocates union of north and south. The man, found on Belfast's Ballyhill Road, had been shot through the mouth, the traditional method of IRA execution, he said.

The victim's pockets were stuffed with tiny Irish Republican flags.

Scattered incidents continued throughout Sunday night and into the early morning hours. In one incident, troops arrested four young girls who had been throwing stones, the army spokesman said.

Five children —all under age 12 —were among those arrested during Sunday's violence, he said.

(In Dublin, an explosion early today wrecked a monument to the Irish patriot Wolfe Tone in St. Stephens Green opposite the Shelbourne Hotel. Police said all that remained of the hollow metal structure were two stumps representing Tone's boots.)

Thieves Hit Guggenheim Collection

VENICE, Italy (UPI)—Police said today at least 15 paintings were stolen from the $12.8 million collection of Peggy Guggenheim Friday in what may have been the biggest art theft in Italy in recent years.

The missing paintings are believed to include a 1939 Pablo Picasso work, three by Jackson Pollock, one by Max Ernst and one by Eleanor Fini.

Miss Guggenheim was in London and the full inventory could not be determined. She was expected back later today.

The American art patron's collection at her palace on the Grand Canal was considered one of the greatest private collections in Europe.

Police said they believe the thieves climbed over a rear wall from a gondola.

A neighbor said Sunday she saw three men on or near the wall. They told her, they were looking for a key one of them accidently threw over the wall onto Miss Guggenheim's property.

The theft was reported by an employee at the palace, but the employee was unable to identify the paintings.

Miss Guggenheim, 72, has been a resident of Venice since 1947 and an honorary citizen since 1962. Her collection in the Palazzo venier Dei LEoni has works by Juan Miro, Salvador Dali, Paul Klee, Georges Braque, Marc Chagall, Henry Moore and Jean Arp.

Killer Quake Hits Ancient Italian Town

TUSCANIA, Italy (UPI)—Survivors huddled in army tents thrown up in pastures around this medieval hilltop town today and surveyed the destruction of a killer earthquake that rolled across the countryside like an ocean wave.

It took just six seconds Saturday night to destroy the work of centuries and kill at least 18 people. As many as 270 persons were hurt and under treatment in hospitals around the region.

"There is the death of people, certainly," said Mario Moretti, superintendent of the Etruscan Museum in Rome. "But there also is the death of priceless things."

Moretti said the damage was "serious" but added that art experts would probably be able to restore much of the tombs, temples and other priceless gems of antiquity which suffered in the disaster.

Police sealed off the medieval quarter to prevent looting. Troops patroled deserted streets.

"The city inside the walls is 100 per cent uninhabitable," said fire department Col. Enzo Silvestrini. He said a house by house examination would be made this week to determine the extent of damage.

Of Tuscania's 7,000 odd residents, some 4,500 lived in the stricken medieval quarter in houses often handed down from generation to generation.t

The town had stood the times of the Etruscans, the pre-Roman civilization that made it their capital for a time. The earthquake caused damage to Etruscan tombs and to later monuments, such as the 8th century Church of St. Peter.

Sen. Peter H. Behr, R-San Rafael, has moved with his family from Mill Valley to Tiburon.

Behr, a resident of Mill Valley for more than 20 years, and a past member of that city's planning commission and city council, moved last week to the Cove Apartments in Tiburon.

New York's 1969 Drug Toll: 1,100

NEW YORK (UPI)—Over 1,100 persons died in New York last year from narcotics-related causes. And the Medical Examiner's Office says the figure will rise when the final figures for 1970 are known, sometime this June.

Even though the narcotics-related deaths showed an increase of over 10 per cent over the 1969 figures, Dr. Michael Baden, Deputy Chief Medical Examiner said the preliminary figures indicate that the drug-related death toll may be leveling off.

The preliminary report for 1970 shows 1,154 total narcotics-related deaths, half of them of persons under the age of 23. In 1969 there were 1,031 similar deaths.

These figures compare with 330 total narcotic-related deaths in the city for 1966 and 184 deaths in 1970 in Philadelphia.

Among the 1970 deaths already confirmed as being narcotic-related five were of persons only 14 years old, Baden said. In 1969 the youngest victim was 12 years old.

In New York, the Medical Examiner's Office categorizes a narcotics-related death as one caused by acute reaction (including victims of so-called "overdose"), medical (including hepatitis and other drug-induced diseases) and traumatic. Traumatic deaths includes violent deaths related to drug use.

The Show itself will be a two-day affair, March 6 and 7 in the Veterans Memorial Auditorium in Santa Rosa. There will be two separate all-breed best in show competitions, two for longhair breeds and two for shorthairs, with ribbons, rosettes and trophies for the winners.

Arraignment Of Kissinger Plot Six Runs Into A Delay

HARRISBURG, Pa. (UPI)—The arraignment of the Rev. Philip Berrigan and five other antiwar activists was delayed for several hours today to permit a meeting of the defendants, charged with conspiring to kidnap presidential adviser Henry Kissinger.

The six, all of whom were expected to plead innocent, had been scheduled to appear before a U. S. Commissioner this morning. They also have been charged with plotting to blow up the heating systems of five government buildings in Washington.

Berrigan, 47, serving time in a federal prison at Danbury, Conn., for burning draft records, was brought to this state capital in strict secrecy. Security was strict at the 11-story federal building against a group of anti-war protesters who threatened to hold a "low-key vigil" outside.

The other defendants, all free on bail, were Sister Elizabeth McAllister, 31, of Tarrytown, N.Y.; two priests, Rev. Joseph Wenderoth, 35, and Rev. Neil McLaughlin, and Anthony Scoblick, 30, a married priest on leave from the Roman Catholic Church, all of Baltimore, and Eqbal Ahmad, 40, of Chicago, a Pakistani graduate student.

The defendants, dubbed the "Harrisburg six," were charged by a federal grand jury here with conspiracy to detonate explosives in heating systems in Washington Feb. 15 —the day George Washington's birthday will be celebrated —and to kidnap Kissinger the next day.

Eight attorneys from New York, Chicago, Baltimore and Newark, N.J., came to defend the six at the arraignment. Another 50 lawyers attended. The final trial defense team was to be selected from the whole group.

William Kunstler, flamboyant attorney who was chief counsel for the Chicago Seven, represented Berrigan. "There will be many people involved in many roles," he said. "There is so much to do in this type of case.

Francis X. Gallagher, attorney for the archdiocese of Baltimore who represents the three defendants from that city, said each of the lawyers would speak for himself.

"The matter of who will be on the final defense team really hasn't been finally resolved," he said.

Ghetto Cordoned Off; Two Die In Violence

WILMINGTON, N.C. (UPI)—A three-block area of the black ghetto, including a church where blacks were holed up, was cordoned off today in this city where two persons died in weekend racial violence.

Local police, some 600 national guardsmen and state troopers trained in riot duty moved around the area Sunday night in an effort to restore peace.

At the heart of the area was Gregory Congregational Church on Nun Street, a rallying point for blacks seeking changes in Wilmington's desegregated schools. Police reported that there were still many persons inside the church when the area was sealed off.

A highway patrol source said many of those in the church were believed to be armed.

Police Chief H. E. Williamson vowed Sunday night, "We're going to stop the trouble, whatever it takes—whether it means we go into a church, home or business. We expect to stop it."

It was near the church Sunday morning that a white man was shot and killed by a sniper's bullet and three other white men were injured. Gov. Bob Scott ordered in the troops following the death of 57-year-old Harvey Edward Cumber, the second fatality of racial violence in less than 24 hours, and city officials called a nighttime curfew.

Cumber was shot through the right temple while driving his pickup truck through the black section.

Saturday night a black youth, Gib Corbett, 17, was shot and killed by a policeman protecting firemen. Authorities said Corbett was carrying a shotgun at the time and that later investigation showed that the firing pin of the weapon had actually struck the shell in the chamber but it had failed to fire.

Three white men suffered minor facial wounds Sunday morning when they were fired upon with a shotgun and at least two cars were reported hit by sniper fire, despite a heavy downpour. Occupants of the cars were not injured.

Sausalito Staff Needs Due Study

A preliminary report on the number of staff members the Sausalito School District will need next year will be presented to the district board at 8 p.m. today in Bayside School.

Supt. Lawrence A. Lindberg, who prepared the report, said he anticipates some staff cuts next year because of a continuing drop in enrollment in the district.

A report on facilities use for 1971-72 will also be presented to trustees, according to the superintendent, who said no decision has been reached on which schools will be closed for budget reasons and which will remain open.

Lindberg said two community meetings to discuss facilities use for next year will be held this week. Both meetings will be at 7:30 p.m., one Wednesday in the Manzanita Center in Marin City and the other Thursday at Central School in Sausalito.

James T. Toliver Jr., special assistant for the district, will report on his recent trip to Africa with two Marin City teenagers.

$10,000 Damage In Fire On Ranch Near Marshall

Fire did approximately $10,000 damage to a 100-year-old farmhouse near Marshall yesterday, according to Louis J. Bloom, Marin County fire chief.

Bloom said the roof of the spacious farmhouse on the McMurray Ranch ignited about 2 p.m. because of a faulty chimney. The fire spread quickly through the attic and burned one room on the second story, the chief said.

Bloom estimated damage at $5,000 to the building and $5,000 to the contents of the house occupied by Mr. and Mrs. John Vertigan and their two-month-old child.

The couple noticed the fire while out in the yard, Bloom said, and Vertigan rushed to the second story to rescue the baby from a smoky bedroom. No one was injured in the blaze, Bloom said.

The house belongs to Dr. Ralph F. McMurray of 50 Shady Lane, Ross, Bloom said.

Four trucks from the Marin County Fire Department and one from the Synanon Volunteer Fire Department battled the fire, Bloom said.

More Fires In Sausalito During Year

Sausalito had 18 per cent more fires in 1970 than in 1969 — 154 blazes as compared to 126, Chief Charles E. Masten revealed in the Sausalito department's annual report.

And the chief said the cost of fire losses rose nearly $80,000, from $114,643 in 1969 to $193,545 last year.

The department answered fewer calls in 1970, including ambulance calls, rescues, accidents, lockouts, investigations, smoke checks and false alarms, according to the chief. There were 609 calls, compared to 624 the previous year.

A most distrubing rise — in the chief's eyes — was in false alarms, which totaled 73 last year, about a 50 per cent increase over 1969.

Some of them were accidental, the chief said, but most were malicious. "This is the most false alarms we've ever had in a year," Masten said. "We even had 14 telephone false alarms, a kind of false alarm that used to be very rare."

Masten said a false alarm "creates a dangerous situation by taking men and equipment out of the station."

Structural fires, including dwellings, businesses, piers and wharves, were up from 45 to 52. Dwelling fires increased from 26 to 34, fires in businesses were down from 15 in 1969 to 11 last year and grass and brush fires rose from 18 to 35. There were only two boat fires last year, compared to nine the previous year.

In the area of fire prevention, the department made a total of 745 fire inspections in homes, schools and businesses in 1970, about 100 more than in 1969.

Cigarette Consumption Going Up

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Cigarette smoking is on the increase again for the first time in seven years, according to the state.

Liquor consumption also is up.

The average man, woman and child in California will smoke 126.2 packs of cigarettes this year and next--an increase of one over last year. In 1969, the per capita consumption was only 123.4.

"The decline in per capita cigarette consumption, which began with the 1964 Surgeon General's Report and was accelerated by the 1967 (state) tax increase, appears to have ended in 1970," Gov. Ronald Reagan's new budget proposal observes.

The average Californian this year is expected to drink 3.79 gallons of hard liquor, compared to 3.70 last year. He will consume 29.30 gallons of beer, compared to 28.58 in 1970. Dry and sparkling wine consumption also is up, but sweet wine drinking is down.

The state notes that "per capita consumption of alcoholic beverages has been steadily rising" in recent years.

The state estimates it will collect $249 million in cigarette taxes for the fiscal year beginning July 1, an increase of $6 million over the current year.

It anticipates picking up $133 million in alcoholic beverage taxes, a rise of $5.3 million.

Fish, Game Budget Increased $1 Million

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —Gov. Ronald Reagan today proposed a state fish and game budget of $22.9 million with nearly a quarter of that going for warden enforcement.

The suggested spending program was about $1 million larger than the current expenditure. There were no new major programs.

Reagan called for spending $6.9 million for law enforcement, $4.3 million for wildlife management and $4.4 million for inland fisheries.

The governor predicted 17,300 persons would be found in violation of fish and game laws in the coming year.

The governor said $232,000 would be needed for the warmwater hatchery at Niland. Construction is near completion, and the facility is due to go into operation soon.

He also called for spending $130,000 because the Imperial Wildlife Area was "in danger of losing its capability as a feed producing grounds for waterfowl due to increasing salinity levels." The money, he said, would be used for tiling.

The governor also proposed spending $1.7 million for water projects and water quality during the coming year. This is slightly less than the current amount.

The state's fish and game program is not financed from the general fund but from revenue from the sale of hunting and fishing licenses, commercial fish taxes, grants of federal funds, reimbursements from other government agencies and court fines.

Farmers, Indians In Land Clash In Chile

SANTIAGO, Chile (UPI)—Angry farmers in Chile's breadbasket province of Cautin are charging that the Marxist-dominated government is not respecting its own edict of exempting small and medium landholders from its policy of reclaiming rural land for the state.

Indians in the province, allegedly stirred into action by leftist agitators, have so far seized 300 farms in the area, and the farmers claim the government is doing nothing to get the Indians off their land.

They say the government is violating its own avowed agrarian policy which aims to end private ownership of rural land "with the exception of present small and medium land holders."

The farmers fear that de facto expropriation will result from the illegal land seizures. Some even talk of armed resistance which is no idle threat in the countryside where few homes are without firearms.

But the attitude of Socialist President Salvador Allende's government towards the farmers could best be described as ambivalent so far.

National police in the province merely have been ordered to prevent conflicts between the farmers and the Indians. Seized farms are being "intervened" or managed by agrarian reform bureaucrats, most of them leftists, who are given virtually a free hand.

The government, however, has fired the Communist governor of the province's Lontue district for instigating the land seizures.

Because of the explosive situation in Cautin, Allende sent Agriculture Minister Jacques Chonchol to Temuco, the provincial capital.

Chonchol, a renegade Christian Democrat, was once a United Nations agriculture expert in Cuba whose agrarian reform has impressed Allende favorably.

Temuco, 450 miles south of Santiago, is a farm center of 150,000 inhabitants and the hub of Cautin province, a rich, rolling, green valley flanked by the Andes and the lesser coastal range.

It produces one-fourth of Chile's wheat, accounts for 24 per cent of the milk supply and 18 per cent of the country's beef.

Politically, the province voted overwhelmingly for rightist presidential candidate Jorge Alessandri in the Sept. 4, 1970 election and relegated Marxist Allende to third place in the three-way race with Christian Democrat Radomiro Tomic.

Allende, who headed a Socialist-Communist-radical left coalition, received much support from Cautin's 180,000 Mapuche Indians, who are included in most of the province's 20,000 officially tabulated unemployed.

The Mapuches, fought Spaniards and Chileans to a standstill for 400 years, until 1881, when weakened by the white man's firewater, they finally were pacified.

The Mapuches have old scores to settle with the "huincas" or white men. After hostilities, lands awarded them by the government were usurped by "fence-moving" neighbors, bought for bottles of wine and stolen in title swindles.

Of Chile's 9.5 million inhabitants, 520,000 are Mapuche Indians. Some 320,000 of them live in southern Chile with another 200,000 facing assimilation in the cities.

Mapuches hold title to about 25 per cent of the cultivable land in Cautin and they are prevented by a 1961 law from selling to non-Indians. Yet, constant division through the generations has reduced the lands to small family plots, many unable to sustain the families.

Housing and health conditions of the mostly ignored Indians are deplorable. In Cautin, 154 of each 1,000 Indian children born die the first year.

$300,000 In Revenue Lost In Fuss

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —A labor-management dispute resulting in the cancellation of races at Santa Anita and Bay Meadows cost the state $300,000 in revenue, Gov. Ronald Reagan's proposed budget reports.

However, the governor's spending plan estimates that the state's overall take from the horseracing tracks will be up in the fiscal year beginning July 1 from $68 million to $74.2 million.

The disputes at Santa Anita and Bay Meadows and a rescheduling of races at Los Alamitos cost the state $7.2 million during fiscal 1969-70 and $300,000 for the current year, the budget said.

But eight more weeks of harness racing approved by the legislature for the California Exposition will generate $475,000 more in state revenue.

Of the state's total take, $65.2 million will be deposited in the general fund for support of such programs as education and welfare. Of the remainder, $8.1 million goes to the Fair and Exposition Fund, and $750,000 for the Wildlife Restoration Fund.

Assault Begins On Ho Chi Minh Trail

"fully understandable" in light of alleged North Vietnamese violations of Laotian neutrality.

It remained to be seen how North Vietnam would react. U.S. and South Vietnamese troops launched a similar offensive against Communist bases in Cambodia last May and the North Vietnamese responded with a fullscale offensive deep into Cambodia that put heavy pressures on the Cambodian capital of Phnom Penh.

There are an estimated 70,000 North Vietnamese troops in Laos.

The South Vietnamese were carrying the brunt of the Laos offensive.

American ground personnel moved up to the border, but stepped aside to let the South Vietnamese make the actual move into Laos. The U.S. Command in Saigon emphasized that no American ground troops or advisers would take part in the operation, although the South Vietnamese will get massive air support and backing from U.S. artillery firing across the border.

The Laotian government protested the move and demanded that "all foreign troops immediately withdraw from Royal Laotian territory."

South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu went on the national radio to say "this is an operation limited in time as well as space, with the clear and unique objective of disrupting the supply and infiltration network of the Communist North Vietnamese troops." He pledged that when the operation was complete "the armed forces of the Republic of Vietnam will withdraw completely from the Laotian territory."

Nine thousand Americans and 20,000 South Vietnamese have been poised on the Laotian border since Jan. 30, but exactly how many of the South Vietnamese actually crossed was not announced. However, on-the-spot reports said thousands of them were seen crossing the Xe Don River marking the border and disappearing into the tangled jungle on the other side aboard tanks and armored personnel carriers, while hundreds of American-crewed UH1 Huey helicopters ferried others into Laos.

The object of the operation is to cut the Ho Chi Minh trail, a network of roads and trails that brings Communist men and material into South Vietnam and Cambodia. U.S. military sources in Saigon said if the trail can be cut, the estimated 81,000 Viet Cong and North Vietnamese troops in the area would not be able to fight a war.

"As far as food and clothing are concerned, the enemy is completely independent of the Ho Chi Minh trail," the sources said. "But for war material — guns, ammunition and the like —they are completely dependent on supplies from North Vietnam."

Field commanders said a major target of the operation would be the Laotian town of Tchepone, 27 miles from the border and a major staging area and junction of the Ho Chi Minh trail.

Field reports also said the six helicopters shot down were hit while bringing troops into hot landing zones in Laos — landing zones under fire. Pilots returning to he Khe Sanh outpost in South Vietnam five miles from the border said all of the crewmen were "extracted" but that five of the six downed choppers had to be abandoned.

The Laotian government blamed the North Vietnamese as primarily responsible since they already had troops in Laos but said "this does not constitute justification" for sending in the South Vietnamese troops.

"The Royal Lao government demands that all foreign troops immediately withdraw from Royal Laotian territory," a statement issued by the government said.

Some of the 9,000 American troops in the area stood watching beside a sign at the border saying "No U.S. personnel past this point" as armored personnel carriers with the South Vietnamese troops rumbled past. Several of the GIs flashed peace signs to the grinning South Vietnamese troops, who waved back at them, UPI correspondent Kenneth Braddick reported from the scene.

"We'll probably be coming in after you," one GI shouted, apparently unaware that the U.S. government has made it clear no American ground personnel are to be involved in the attack. However, the U.S. Command in Saigon said the United States would provide "whatever air power, combat logistics and medivac (medical evacuation), either fixed-wing or helo (helicopter), is required to supplement the capabilities of the Republic of Vietnam armed forces."

Col. Due Le Duong, commander of the South Vietnamese armored units, said a major target of the push would be the town of Tchepone, 27 miles across the frontier and a major staging area and junction of the Ho Chi Minh Trail.

Duong said the government troops planned to cut the trail in as many places as possible.

Suitcase With Drugs Trips Man

A 21-year-old Stockton man spent this weekend in Marin County jail because he checked with San Rafael police to ask if his suitcase had been found.

Police arrested William K. Guletz, of 1305 El Monte Street, Stockton, and reported they would now like to talk to his vanished friend, Charles Jeffrey, of 61 Canal Street, Apt. 2, San Rafael.

When Guletz picked up his suitcase at the police station Saturday, he was booked into Marin County jail on possession of marijuana and dangerous drugs.

Police said the suitcase, which had been turned in by a finder, contained a plastic bag with suspected marijuana and approximately 1000 pills.

A search of Jeffrey's apartment, according to police, yielded 18 plastic bags containing suspected marijuana, several bags with an unknown brown substance, bags and vials of pills and one bag containing an unknown powdery white substance.

sions cost the society billions of dollars annually," the President commented.

He said that a staff study now in progress indicates the feasibility of a special charge on sulphur emitted into the atmosphere as a major step in "applying the principle that the cost of pollution should be included in the price of the product."

He said on completion of the studies, legislation would be submitted to Congress and that funds derived from the sulphur charge would enable the federal government to expand environmental improvement programs.

Among water reforms, Nixon proposed that the federal-state water quality program be extended to cover all navigable waters, their tributaries and ground waters.

In addition, he urged that federal standards be set to regulate the discharge of hazardous substances into waters.

He said that while the nation must continue to rely on pesticides for the foreseeable future, use of toxics should be subject to control through a registration procedure providing for designation of a pesticide for "general, restricted, use" or "use by permit only."

The message asked Congress to approve comprehensive noise pollution control legislation which would permit establishment of federal noise standards on transportation, construction and other equipment.

A highlight of Nixon's proposed program involves a national land use policy.

"While most land use decisions will continue to be made at the local level'," HE SAID, "we must draw upon the basic authority of state government to deal with land use issues which spill over local jurisdictional boundaries."

He added that the states were uniquely qualified to bring about land reform. Consequently he proposed to establish a policy to encourage states to plan for and regulate developments affecting growth and use of critical land areas.

He said $100 million in new funds would be authorized to states in those efforts.

action after two weeks of hibernation for the frigid lunar night.

Over the weekend, a Soviet space scientist said their robot could do anything an astronaut could do except provide human impressions and that automated space flight was cheaper and safer.

The scientist, whose name was not given but who was identified as the designer of the Luna 17 spacecraft that took the robot to the moon Nov. 17, told the Communist party newspaper Pravda in a weekend interview:

"Automatons bow to human space explorers in only one respect. That is, they are not capable of bringing back human impressions and feelings from other planets.

"I dare say unmanned vehicles are capable of solving all the technical tasks which manned teams accomplish, and they would be solved considerably more cheaply and without risk to human life."

"As a result," it said, "those who have the greatest power to change the law —the white middle class —are best able to avoid its most severe consequences and are less motivated to do anything about it."

The report said the court action was "not a result of conscious discrimination. It is more typically the result of an honest effort on the part of the court to give a 'good kid' a break. Unfortunately, 'good kids' are usually those whose appearance, personality, or background strike a responsive chord in the judge."

The report recommended repeal of a section of the law specifically intended to allow detention of "incorrigible" children.

Teen-Agers Rescued On Cliff

Two teen-agers who became stranded while on a hike were rescued from the steep cliffs above Kirby Beach yesterday by the Sausalito Fire Department's rescue team, Chief Charles E. Masten reported.

Gaynal Bera, 18, of Vacaville, Solano County, and Hank Warren, also 18, of Berkeley, were hauled up the cliffs by Fireman Richard Bettencourt, who was lowered to the stranded teenagers by ropes. Fireman Fred Partridge and two other hikers in the party, Paul Fairchild and Gary Buzzell, both of Berkeley, assisted in the rescue.

Miss Bera was plucked from a ledge about 80 feet down the cliff and Warren was picked up from the beach. The youth, who had fallen to the beach in an attempt to get out, suffered minor scratches and bruises, the chief said, but Miss Bera was uninjured.

Kirby Beach is located just east of Kirby Cove on the Marin Headlands.

After partially disrobing her and trying to push her in the creek, he left, officers said.

The suspect was described as 21 to 25 years of age, 5 feet, 11 inches, thin, with brown hair, moustache and beard. He was wearing a rust colored shirt and brown pants.

Israel Eyes Cairo's New Peace Pitch

By U.P. International

Israel is using diplomatic contacts with Washington and other world capitals to seek clarification of Egyptian peace proposals before responding to them Tuesday, official sources in Jerusalem said today.

The sources said the government wants more details on Egypt's call for a partial Israeli pullback from the Suez Canal to allow reopening of the waterway.

Specifically, Israel wants to know what would happen in the territory vacated and whether Israeli ships would be allowed to use the reopened canal, the sources said.

It was announced after a cabinet meeting in Jerusalem Sunday that Prime Minister Golda Meir would give Israel's response to the proposal in a speech to the Knesset (parliament) Tuesday.

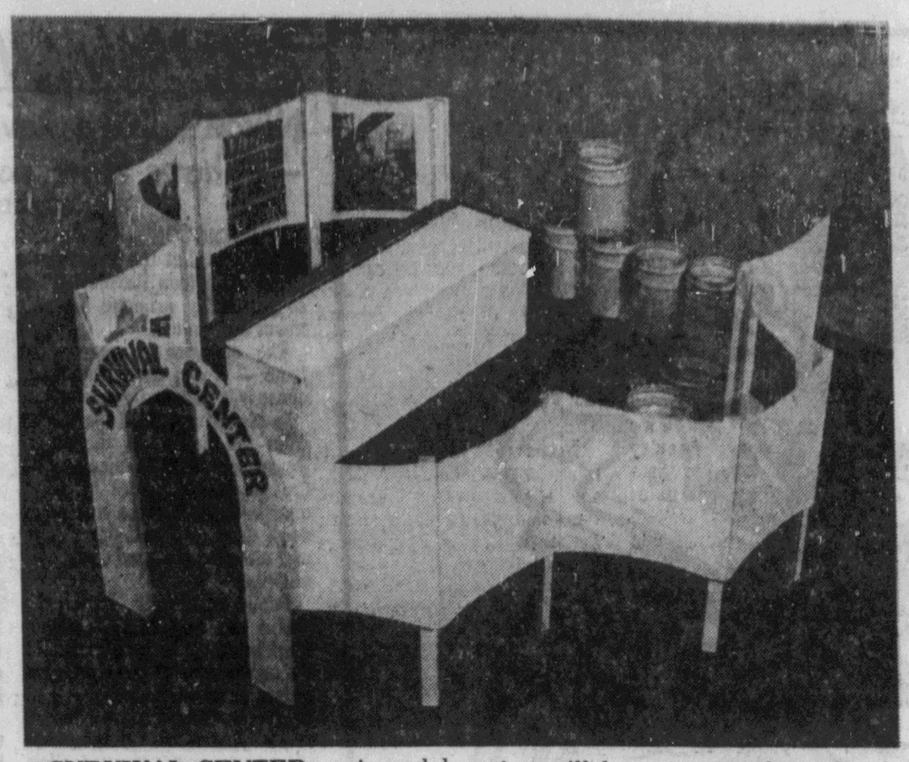
Mrs. Meir prepared her speech under pressure from the hawkish Gahal party to reject it and from members of her own Labor party to leave the door open for further negotiation by asking for clarification. Egyptian officials urged her not to throw away this "last chance" for peace.

Mrs. Meir said in a television interview Friday that there was little new in the Egyptian proposal and that it appeared to be an attempt to get Israel to withdraw its troops without peace agreement.

The semiofficial Cairo newspaper Al Ahram said Egypt's offer might cause a split between the United States and Western European countries. It said the United States wants to give unconditional support to Israel, while the other powers see the Egyptian initiative as a promising step toward peace.

Egyptian officials along the canal said dredging could be completed and the canal made operational in four to six months if Israel agrees to withdraw.

Foreign newsmen were taken in a tour of Egypt's canalside fortifications at Port Tewfik Sunday where steel helmeted troops remained on full alert despite the 30-day cease-fire



SURVIVAL CENTER — A model created by Survival, a new countywide ecological action group, shows design of recycling depots that will be set up each weekend at all high schools in the Tamalpais, San Rafael and Novato school districts.

OPERATION 'SURVIVAL'

New Ecology Group Planning Recycling Depots At Schools

A new ecology movement that calls itself "Survival" has arranged to operate recycling depots at seven public high schools in Marin every weekend, beginning Feb. 20.

The results, according to Dennis Baldwin, Survival spokesman, will be several:

Marin residents will always know where to find a recycling depot to take their newspapers, tin and aluminum cans and glass.

High school ecology and service clubs will receive half the proceeds from the recycling depots to help other ecological projects, and Survival will use its half to pay for transportation and a continuous public education program.

Survival has built seven portable "Survival Centers" where its members and high school students will gather goods for recycling and load them for hauling to Bay Area plants. The wooden-walled centers will be set up in high school parking lots each Saturday morning, and will be open for business from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. each Saturday and Sunday.

The high schools, in the Tamalpais, San Rafael and Novato Unified districts, are Tamalpais in Mill Valley, Redwood in Larkspur, Sir Francis Drake in San Anselmo, San Rafael, Terra Linda, Novato and San Marin.

A roofing company has donated unused pallets on which bundled newspapers will be loaded and Standard Oil Co. has given 100 oil barrels to hold the sorted glass, aluminum and tin cans.

Survival has commitments from Bay Area industries to buy the weekly collections of the Survival Centers. Some of the waste goods present problems, Baldwin admitted.

"There tend to be more newspapers than the company can handle from time to time. And we can't take magazines; there's a clay coating on the paper that spoils them for recycling."

Survival's plans call for more than just the recycling operations.

"We want to be a peaceful revolution, Baldwin said. "We are not politically oriented; we won't support nor advocate any boycotts" of one-way bottles, polluting substances or pesticides. "But, we will work with any interested company, group or person interested in using a survival center as a forum for their ideas to help the ecology," Baldwin explained.

Many man-hours of "high-energy thought, discussions, arranging and building" have gone into the Survival campaign so far, Baldwin reported.

One of the active participants was Roger Bockrath, one of two Independent-Journal photographers who took pictures of the Aug. 7 shoot-out at the Marin County Civic Center. Bockrath donated several hundred dollars from sale of his photos worldwide to buy the necessary insurance policy for young workers at the Survival Centers, to buy material to build the centers, and to begin production of educational pamphlets.

The recycling depopots will become "little white schoolhouses" every weekend, Baldwin said. There, the public will be offered pamphlets teaching how to stem the flow of wastes that "threatens to fill the land with garbage dumps, the Bay with pollutants and the air with smog."

Baldwin said Survival has planned pamphlets telling how to make compost heaps to turn family garbage into organic fertilizer, how to garden without chemical pesticides, how to substitute biodegradable products for pollutant detergents, and on how to reduce smog through such ideas as using bicycles more and autos less.

Survival plans to act as a liasion between concerned citizen-consumers and the producers of such goods as chemical insecticide devices. The group's role will be to make the manufacturers aware of public concern over safety to man and environment, Baldwin added.

The new organization hopes to help other groups in creek clean-ups and other special projects.

Survival also will answer questions on how to separate and prepare products for recycling. Its telephone is available from information operators as a new listing. Baldwin said the number will be listed under "environmental services" in the next Marin County telephone directory.

Publishers Pass Censure On Alioto For Marin Visit

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— Delegates to the California Newspaper Publishers Association Convention have returned home after a severe censure of Mayor Josepn Alioto for his support of three union officials involved in the San Rafael Independent-Journal printers' strike.

CNPA directors passed a resolution this weekend deploring the mayor's protest over the jailing of the labor leaders on contempt of court charges.

They were Jack Goldberger, president of Local 921 of the Newspaper Drivers; Leon son, president of Local 21 of the International Typographical Union; and Donald Abrams, vice president of Local 21.

The three had elected to serve jail terms pay fines for violating a superior court order limiting picketing at the newspaper which has been struck by the ITU for more than a year.

Last Wednesday, Alioto personally chauffeured Goldberger to jail in Marin County. The mayor told a crowd waiting outisde that "jail never solved a labor dispute and never will."

The directors unanimously adopted the censure at the final session. They rebuked the mayor for:

"His uncalled for politically motivated intrusion and highly irregular comments in a matter which does not involve either the city of San Francisco or himself personally."

". . . Respect for juctice and law in a viable democratic society requires that when a court has issued an order, that such an order shall be obeyed," the resolution said.

Alioto promptly fired back, saying the CNPA was demeaing "its own profession by issuing a personal attack on me without bothering to check its facts or hear my side of the story.

"I went to Marin County because I was concerned about a very serious strike spreading to other Bay Area communities.

Why Citizens Become Watchdogs Of Courts

Organizations to "watchdog" the courts are springing up around the Bay Area.

In Alameda County, Citizens for Law and Order was organized last May by four businessmen. It now has some 200 members, and for several months has been making itself heard through assessments of the working of the law in its home county.

In San Francisco, police have decided to "watchdog" the courts. The San Francisco Police Officers Association announced plans last week to set up a central complaint depository for information on "any judge who is consistently too lenient."

"If we receive the name of one judge repeatedly, we will review the cases. If there is justification we will then request the state Commission on Judicial Qualifications to review these cases," said the police association in its official organ, the Notebook.

THE POLICE PAPER was quite outspoken. In an editorial, it declared: "Every petty, two-bit hood in the city knows from recent developments that it's easy to beat a rap."

The Oakland-based Citizens for Law and Order has adopted a less emotional approach. It has five task forces monitoring the performance of judges, the news media, legislative bodies, schools, and the support of police. But it is the first of these, dealing with judges, that has received the most notice.

WHAT SORT of judicial actions stir police and businessmen alike to censure the courts?

A case cited by the Citizens for Law and Order provides an example.

Gary MacPherson was convicted of the murder of an Oakland motorist, Ulrich Hoischen, and sentenced to death. Because of a U.S. Supreme Court ruling that the jury had been improperly selected, he was re-tried and again convicted. A second trial on the penalty followed before Judge Lewis Lercara in Alameda County Superior Court.

After the jury had been out an hour, it reported it was deadlocked 9-to-3 in favor of the death penalty. Judge Lercara thereupon dismissed the jury and sentenced MacPherson to life in prison.

The CLO in its bulletin sharply criticized the judge for his hasty dismissal of the jury after a long, costly trial and urged readers to write in protest to newspapers and to the presiding judge of Alameda County Superior Court.

A CASE SOMEWHAT similar occurred last December in Marin County.

Marc C. Osuna had been convicted of the murder of Mario Ferrari during the Labor Day, 1965, holdup of the Mission Inn in San Rafael, and sentenced to death. The same supreme court ruling resulted in retrial of the penalty phase of his case.

The trial began Nov. 9 and continued until Dec. 18. On that day, the jury retired at 9:45 a.m. and reported at 2:15 p.m. — four and one-half hours later — that it was deadlocked 9-to-3 in favor of the death penalty. Judge Joseph G. Wilson, over the objections of the deputy district attorney, Ernest C. Zunino, thereupon dismissed the jury and sentenced Osuna to life in prison.

THERE IS DANGER that "watchdog" organizations may seek to warp the judicial process by pressure on judges. Such danger appears greater when the "watchdog" group is composed of police, as in San Francisco.

But judges must be answerable for their actions. And cases such as those involving sentencing of MacPherson and Osuna illustrate why citizens around the Bay Area feel compelled to keep watch on the courts.

Bagley, Behr Don't Fare Badly As Committees Parceled Out

By PAUL E. PETERZELL

Marin's two state legislators, considering their political liabilities, fared better than should have been expected when committee assignments were doled out.

Assemblyman William T. Bagley and Sen. Peter H. Behr, both R-San Rafael, suffer first from the fact both belong to the wrong party. We mean they belong to the minority party in both houses.

Both also have party loyalists back home who are convinced the two are in the wrong party as well, but that's another matter.

BAGLEY, as the veteran lawmaker who last year rode at the top of the heap when his party led the Assembly, had the farthest to fall. But he managed to keep a strong voice by getting the chairmanship of the welfare committee and memberships on key committees.

The welfare committee traditionally deals not with power but with those who have little of it. But given the fiscal and political crunch over welfare this year, it will be heard from far more than in the past.

And Bagley will need all of his considerable abilities to avoid being caught between the parties and the Reagan and Nixon administrations as they all struggle to find someone else to pay for welfare.

Bagley retained a seat on the revenue and taxation committee, which he chaired in the past two sessions, and got a seat on the powerful ways and means committee, which passes on all money bills. He only got a vote in the minority party in each committee, but his expertise in revenue and taxation will give him a leg up on most of the Democrats.

And he was put on the constitutional amendments committee, reportedly to give the committee the needed vote to approve a measure allowing 18-year-olds to vote in state and local elections.

Bagley clearly landed on his feet.

BEHR, AS A freshman senator, could only accept whatever was given him. His cordial relation with the Democratic Senate president pro tempore, James R. Mills of San Diego, did not hurt.

Behr, of course, could not expect a chairmanship so soon, but he was made vice chairman of the public utilities and corporations committee. This committee touches some of the state's most powerful interests, and Mills said he would steer rapid transit measures to this committee instead of to the transportation committee as in the past.

Behr also got on the health and welfare, local government and water resources committees, all his primary choices. The water resources committee gives Behr a voice in the California Water Project, a point certain to disquiet the project's friends. Behr is not known as an ardent friend of the project.

With the bloody business of committee assignments done, a sensible legislator could get down to serious business — like changing the locks on his office door.

At least one Democrat did just that as soon as he got his new chairmanship.He was so fearful that his Republican predecessor was part of an imagined plot to usurp his new power that he immediately changed the locks on the doors.

Oil Firm's Cleanup Efforts Praised

In this era of sophisticated electronic equipment it is difficult to understand how a tragic accident could have occurred as it did between the two Standard Oil tankers. No one wanted this accident, least of all Standard Oil. Accidents do seem to happen, and the lives of all of us have been affected sometime with the results of an accident.

The company is the target for this human error, and it is most popular to criticize the Standard Oil Co. It is unpopular to give the company credit for the monumental effort they have made. Crews of men have been brought to the beaches, and have worked tirelessly in the cleanup operation. The company has paid for much heavy equipment, clothing and food for the volunteers. They have brought in truckload after truckload of small tools, chain saws, sleeping bags, countless drums of mineral oil, straw, lumber, installed phones, and many other things.

Each request seems to get attention. We feel that Standard Oil has gone far beyond the call of duty, and should be given credit for this great effort on the part of the company in Bolinas.

Gutter Approach Taken To News

Your biased and inflammatory story concerning Redwood basketball coach Richard Hart shows again the low, gutter approach your editors take toward the news.

When you will not print any letters written anonymously in the letters to the editors column, here you print in a news story a letter without a signature and in the content of the story, no reference is given to any fact.

What a nice way to stir up the masses? Just by printing hints of racism without any facts is just another way of showing the yellow journalism the I-J can be noted for.

Maybe the real racist is the I-J.

Supervisors Don't Decide On District

In her letter to the Editor published Jan. 25, Mrs. R.F. Schneider of Sleepy Hollow complained of lack of due process in the steps relating to the proposed Sleepy Hollow Community Services District.

The procedures for formation of a new district by means of a reorganization are prescribed in every detail by state law. A petition such as the proposal for the Sleepy Hollow district may be submitted by any group of registered voters in the area. If this group numbers more than five per cent of all the voters, the Local Agency Formation Commission must consider the petition . . .

The public hearing by the Local Agency Formation Commission was held in the Ross Town Hall and was attended by those both favoring and opposing the proposal. The subsequent board of supervisors' hearing was set and noticed in accordance with state law. All property owners received a copy of the notice. The proposed reorganization now goes on to the voters of the community with the election scheduled for April 20, 1971.

California law indicated the considerations which the Local Agency Formation Commission and the board should make at their respective hearings on reorganization. The LAFC must consider the governmental services which an area requires and the most appropriate governmental agencies to provide these services. The board of supervisors must consider whether the proposed reorganization will be for the interest of other districts, landowners, present orfuture inhabitants of the area, as well as reviewing the considerations of the Local Agency Formation Commission. Neither the LAFC nor the board of supervisors is expected under state law to make determinations of popular acceptability of the proposal. On the contrary, the law requires reorganization proposals to be referred to an election of the registered voters of the area.

It is my opinion that the Board of Supervisors felt that an election was the best way to resolve this issue which seriously divides the community and therefore voted to submit this proposal to the voters without further delay.

Story On Recall Violated Trust

An elected official has little opportunity to privately discuss with his fellow trustees ideas that constructively effect their relationship. The Brown Act is specific in restricting what type of discussion can be held outside an open meeting. One legal avenue available to communicate with them is by mail.

In your article of Feb. 2 regarding the events surrounding the possible recall of Gordon Wright, I feel you violated a privacy that has resulted in making a then-pending solution to recall impossible. The letter you quoted was knowlingly not a press release for public consumption but an honest effort to moderate a difficult and unfortunate situation.

A "brickbat" to the paper for violating a trust.

REMEMBER WHEN?

10 YEARS AGO

Feb. 8, 1961

The body of a man found shot to death near Devil's Gulch on Mount Tamalpais was identified as that of Jerry Keith Sangster, 25, an itinerant carpet layer who vanished three weeks earlier.

A cost squeeze threatened to price Marin City redevelopment project units out of reach of those for whom they were intended, declared Rep. Clement W. Miller, D-First District.

20 YEARS AGO

Embargo on mail was ended after President Truman ordered the Army to take over operation of American railroads if necessary to end a "sick call" rail workers' strike.

Women of Marin County were asked to register their skills and job experience with the Marin County Power Survey, for call-up in event of war emergency.

Nixon's 'New Revolution' Political — That's How To Make It Work

By ROSCOE DRUMMOND

WASHINGTON — Some are suggesting that the President's "New American Revolution" is so politically oriented it can't mean very much.

The opposite is nearer the truth — it can mean much because it is politically oriented.

In his efforts to lift the nation from the depths of the Great Depression, F.D.R. once said to the American people: "I am a quarterback; if some strategies don't work, I'll call others" — and often he changed signals in mid-play.

Public opinion is frequently ahead of leadership opinion. What's wrong in responding to the convictions of the American people as to what most needs to be done? This is what Nixon's "New American Revolution" aims to do and it is my feeling that the President is more firmly headed in the right direction today than at any time since his election.

He agreed to do things — some pretty big things that he felt couldn't be done before. He can do them now because the Vietnamese war is being turned down and spending is being turned up.

OF COURSE there is politics in the President's legislative program. It is true that he and his advisers have been working for many months on the "six great goals" he set out in his "State of the Union" address, but it is no secret in Washington that there was no change in the White House tight hold-down on next year's budget until after the November elections which showed most voters felt things weren't going well.

Then the President promptly gave the go-ahead to all the major measures he had been preparing.

We can't know how far the "New American Revolution" is going to carry the nation until we know what Congress is going to do with it. But it is already evident that it is carrying Mr. Nixon appreciably to his own left.

The Republican ultra-right is pained and outraged by much of what the administration is doing. Human Events, one of the most influential spokesmen of the conservative right, is printing anguished editorials wondering what is happening to the man whose conservatism it was confident would never bend.

On the other hand, the Democratic left seemed surprised, somewhat stunned, momentarily speechless at the "State of the Union" address. They didn't know whether to applaud because the President was beginning to do some things they had long said should be done or to despair because he was stealing their clothes. They are doing a little of both, but mostly waiting and seeing.

TO THE EXTENT that the terms "left, center and right" have meaning, the substance of the new Nixon program is mostly on the left. It has liberal Republican and Democratic origins. It is activist and pragmatic, not doctrinaire.

The $229.2 billion budget, high deficit spending to stimulate the economy and reduce unemployment, the health-care program, more federal aid to education — these programs and others certainly head Nixon to his left. But these are things which many moderates support. The revenue-sharing program — aimed at reversing the flow of political power toward Washington and at putting more money and more decision-making in the hands of people near to where the problems are — is profoundly conservative.

While Mr. Nixon is moving somewhat to the left, he still remains at the political center because the political center has itself moved somewhat to the left.

Obviously there is nothing sacred about every detail of the President's program.It can be altered; it can be improved; if there are better ways to achieve the same ends, let's have them. But if the Democratic stand-patters keep attacking Mr. Nixon instead of attacking the problems, they will be the ones who will get politically hurt.

BY NO MEANS NEUTRAL

Moribund Anti-War Movement Stirs Feebly

By ERNEST B. FURGURSON

WASHINGTON — The leaders of the legions who set out to pacify the world by lungpower have been stung deeply by what they consider premature reports of the death of their movement.

Jumping aboard the latest Cambodia-Laos headlines, they are trying now to prove there is life left in them despite the Nixon administration's efforts to Vietnamize the war and withdraw American forces in orderly fashion.

SHORT WEEKS AGO the major antiwar organizations of the recent past lay moribund while rumors mounted of military activities in Southeast Asia which they earlier would have considered a brazen challenge from the administration.

The relatively moderate Vietnam Moratorium Committee, which sponsored mass peace rallies in 1969, disbanded nearly a year ago. The New Mobilization Committee to End the War, which also led the big rallies of previous years, was in a factional shambles after arguments over what to demonstrate about next, and how.

There was a movement among students and dropouts — not to march, but to worry about their own private things, to hassle if at all about whose turn it was to do dishes in the communal apartment, to swap expertise about macrobiotic foods and even to hark back to yesteryear by cramming for exams.

For the movement's leaders, who get no publicity while their legions are bemused by group sex, bean curd or Sociology 404, this was intolerable. So when Mr. Nixon accommodated them with his latest flirtations with the international boundary lines in Indochina, those leaders got cracking again.

THEY CALLED a meeting at the Rayburn Building on Capitol Hill — a site whose use was legitimized by the proxy participation of Congress people Shirley Chisholm and Ronald Dellums — to announce that they were going to have more meetings and, when the weather turns warm, more mass rallies like those they remember so fondly.

It was small-scale, indoor, non-guerrilla theater, but since it was the only such show in town it was heavily reviewed. Maybe 40 newsmen, camermen and sympathetic spectators showed up, and now and then a nostalgic "right on!" came out of the audience.

It had a mixed-up sex appeal, contributed by Kate Millet, the women's liberation author of "Sexual Politics." She told them about "Dictator Nixon" and how he had extorted the people's money to commit murder in Southeast Asia and how Americans had slaughtered hundreds of Cambodians in a schoolhouse all night long. She offered no documentation.

NEITHER, OF COURSE, did anybody else. Certainly not Jerry Gordon, the Cleveland lawyer and co-ordinator of the National Peace Action Coalition, which is the way this particular manifestation of the movement styled itself. He said the administration's Vietnamization program had failed completely and that the current "escalation" was part of a scheme to encircle China and maybe even take armed action against it. Atomic weapons could not be ruled out, he informed us.

But such inside information about strategic plans was not what Gordon wanted to tell the world. Even his admirers seemed hardly to register when he made such revelations.

The clean-cut young men who represented the concerned officers and enlisted men against the war, the would-be draftee who spoke for repealing the draft, the black Washington school board member with the Frederick Douglass beard all clearly had heard it all before.

What Gordon wanted us to know, and what they came to express their endorsement of, was the news that as soon as the crocuses bloom the movement, too, is going to be resurrected. Two weeks from now comes a planning session at Catholic University here, then a mass observance of Martin Luther King's death from April 2 to 4, then climactic marches April 24 on Washington and San Francisco.

WHEN SOMEBODY asked whether the warmup session marking Dr. King's death was an effort to bring more black participants into the faltering peace movement, the sponsors were fuzzy. But the answer was obvious.

It is faltering and it will continue to falter because the general public can see that the war is winding down. The people can read the casualty figures.

I-J REPORTER'S NOTEBOOK

By MARY LEYDECKER

Finding In 1951 Collision Probably Will Be Repeated

"Both vessels had their radars in operation during a dense fog. . . . . .The investigation further revealed that the majority of (ship) accidents were directly due to human failures."

A quote from the Coast Guard inquiry into the Jan. 18 tanker collision just off the Golden Gate Bridge?

No, these lines come from a September, 1951, publication of the Coast Guard sent in by Goerge Ingram, a San Anselmo reader.

The vessels in the quotation referred to are the Mary Luckenbach and the Benevolence, which collided in 1950 outside San Francisco Bay with the loss of 23 lives.

WHILE IT WILL probably be several weeks or possibly months before the Coast Guard reveals its conclusions about the collision of the Oregon Standard and the Arizona Standard, it is very possible that the 1951 findings can simply be reprinted.

While there were no lives lost in the January accident, the collision has received great attention because of the huge oil spill in San Francisco Bay which fouled beaches and killed wildlife.

A week's hearing conducted by the Coast Guard in San Francisco left the onlooker with only one conclusion: plain, old, simple human error (or rather a series of errors) caused the tragedy.

Both ships had radar sets which were in good operating condition and should have provided sufficient information for the tankers to pass each other, even in dense fog, without colliding.

Both ships also had VHF radios — which should have allowed the crews to contact each other with any questions about each other's whereabouts.

Despite the equipment, the tankers collided. It seems certain that the Coast Guard will find that human beings erred in using the radar and the radios.

THE COAST GUARD probably will also conclude that humans being what they are, some additional type of traffic control in the San Francisco Bay is needed.

Despite efforts by conservationists to the contrary, there was no indication at the hearing that Standard Oil bore any particular responsibility for the collision.

Both ship captains testified that Chevron Shipping Co., the Standard subsidiary which owns the two tankers, has never put any pressure on captains to sail when they did not think it was safe.

Furthermore, there are no bonuses or other rewards or penalties for being early or late, they said.

IN FACT, the efforts of a conservationist lawyer to pin the blame on Standard seemed a little childish. After all, leaving ecology completely aside, it is ridiculous to imagine that the oil company would not do everything possible to prevent such a disaster.

Even if company officials had absolutely no feeling about birds or beaches, they surely must not want to spend hundreds of thousands of dollars on such a calamity.

One final note on the collision: we learned during the Coast Guard investigation that one of the ship captains is suffering from a probably fatal illness — and seemingly will never sail again.

Lindbergh Hits At Super Jet

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Charles A. Lindbergh, whose historic Atlantic solo flight took 33 hours, says it would be a mistake to continue development of a supersonic transport (SST) that could make the same New York to Paris flight in five hours.

Lindbergh, a consultant for Pan American World Airways who in recent years has become an active conservationist, said the technology was available to build the plane, but it was unsound from an economical and environmental viewpoint.

WASINGTON WINDOW

Yes, We Can Tell A Lie: George Was Born Feb. 15

By FRANK ELEAZER

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Virginia has reluctantly agreed it can tell a lie about George Washington's birth. Also Stonewall Jackson's—and even Robert E. Lee's.

So you can see that the new federal "Monday holiday" law is catching on.

The law took effect the first of the year and in most places, including his home state, we can forget about revering Feb. 22 as the birth date of our first President and celebrate this event approprately on "the third Monday in February."

That means Feb. 15 this year. And although the great day will move around from year to year, never again will it fall on Feb. 22.

Up to now, Lee and Jackson have been unaccountably overlooked as far as federal holidays are concerned. But Virginia, in the spirit of the new "Monday holiday" law, will memorialize Lee (born Jan. 19) and Jackson (born Jan. 21) jointly on the 18th—which is reasonably close to both birthdays and, more importantly, also a Monday.

The "Monday holiday" law was passed by Congress more than two years ago, to take effect in 1971. It switches three of eight existing government holidays each year to Mondays and creates a ninth, Columbus Day. Also to be commemorated on Monday, it will fall on the second one in October.

The law applies only to federal agencies and employes and the District of Columbia, and of course the mailman, who won't bring you even a bill between Friday and Tuesday. But many state legislatures, like Virginia's, have acted to bring local jubilations in line.

The result is that in most places, for most people, there will now be at least five three-day holidays weekends each year.

IN ADDITION to telling an annual whopper about Washington's birthday, we will hereafter extol Memorial Day on the last Monday in May, instead of May 30; Labor Day (as usual) will be the first Monday in September;Columbus Day (and you can forget Leif Ericsson) will be noted on the second Monday in October; and Veterans Day (formerly Armistice Day) will be moved from Nov. 11 (when it meant something) to the fourth Monday in October (when it won't mean anything but another three days off the job).

Travel agents are among those happiest about the new law, and there may be more business in it also for auto repairmen, morticians and ambulance drivers.

Some middle-aged fogies (well, there is me at least and possibly Rep. Richard Poff, R-Va., who took it especially hard about Washington) fear now that nothing is sacred and that the next thing, they'll be moving Christmas.

So far, we are assured that is out. Christmas will continue to fall on Dec. 25.

Also, New Year's day, in spite of all, will continue to be regretted on Jan. 1. Thanksgiving will still be celebrated on the fourth Thursday in November. (Congress can recall how President Roosevelt burned his fingers fooling with Thanksgiving).

And as for the Fourth of July, there wasn't a thing they could do about that.

Children's Play Planned By Hub

The San Anselmo Recreation Department is sponsoring a theater workshop for children 9 through 12.

The workshop will produce a series of mystery plays called "The New Adventures of Sherlock Holmes."

Rehearsals are on Saturdays from 9:30 a.m. to noon and Mondays from 3:30 p.m. to 5:30 p.m. at the Robson Mansion, 237 Crescent Road.

Applicants may sign up at the recreation office at 1020 Sir Francis Drake Boulevard.

Council To Eye Animal Control

The Tiburon City Council, meeting tomorrow at 7:30 p.m. at city hall, will consider on second reading an animal control ordinance similar to the uniform ordinance adopted by most cities in Marin.

The ordinance would require dogs to be under control of their masters, but not necessarily on leashes.

The council also will consider granting permission for Angel Island State Park Rangers on Paradise Drive for berthing of the park's new 66-foot boat.

Inventory Tax Fight Under Way

Marin County officials and lawmakers have gone to bat to save the county's property owners from being bitten for $55,836 in taxes.

The amount, according to County Auditor-Controller Michael Mitchell, is the difference between tax income lost because of the 30 per cent exemption the state has granted on business inventories for 1971 and the amount the state has agreed to pay the county in reimbursement.

Mitchell said the 30 per cent exemption will lower county revenues by $404,838, but the state has computed that it will only repay $349,002 reimbursement. The board of supervisors has asked Sen. Peter H. Behr, R-Mill Valley, and Assemblyman William T. Bagley, R-San Rafael to help rectify the difference through a special bill.

Bagley and former Sen. John F. McCarthy had to win passage of similar legislation last year. The state granted a 15 per cent inventory exemption in 1970 but did not grant full reimbursement until forced to by Marin's action.

"The state is in effect fooling the public," Mitchell charged yesterday. It "creates a tax relief proposal which it publicly and politically says will be reimbursed to the counties from other state funds," Mitchell added, "but fails to appropriate the equivalent to the business inventory exemptions. The deficit must be covered by other people paying higher taxes."

BCDC Sets Hearing On Cove Apartments

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — A controversial proposal to build an apartment project on Strawberry Cove has been set for a hearing by the Bay Conservation and Development Commission at 2 p.m. March 4 in the State Building, 455 Golden Gate Avenue.

The commission's staff promised last month that when the proposal was reset for hearing it would not be allowed any further postponement. Developer Paul J. Broman of Peacock Gap originally had his proposal set for a commission hearing in November, but has postponed the date repeatedly without explanation.

Broman told the Independent-Journal Wednesday that he would submit revised plans to the Marin County Planning Commission to cut the number of units from 102 to 90. The BCDC, which cannot act on a permit until after a proposed project has all county approvals, will consider only the 102-unit proposal.

Broman intends to seek county approval of the reduction in the number of units as a separate plan, thus a 90-unit proposal will not be before the BCDC on March 4.

Broman's application for a BCDC permit said that the only bay fill for his project would be pilings to support a public pedestrian walkway along the shoreline in front of his project.

The BCDC's jurisdiction over a 100-foot-wide band of shoreline is concerned with the question of public access, thus the commission will consider whether the access Broman proposes would be adequate.

Also at issue will be the Strawberry Recreation District's court action to bar the project on the ground it would deny established public access to the cove across the 6.5-acre parcel. The commission could find that it could not act unless the suit were settled in Broman's behalf, or could condition its approval of a permit on his subsequently winning the suit.

Kaplan To Speak At Olney Hall

Dr. Harvey Kaplan of Planned Parenthood-Alameda County will speak on contraception for teenagers at 8 p.m. Thursday in Olney Hall at the College of Marin — first in a series of special programs.

Kaplan's lecture will be the first of a series of College of Marin lectures focusing on "Spaceship Earth: Love It or Leave It."

Population and politics will be the theme for the Feb. 25 lecture at 8:30 p.m. featuring Rep. Paul McCloskey, R-11th District, who is scheduled to speak on "The Government's Role in Population Planning."

The Marin Ecology Center will present the March 11 program at 8 p.m. with discussions on alternative life styles and recycling projects.

Harold Gregg, executive director of the Marin Conservation League, will conduct the program March 25 at 8 p.m. on citizen involvement in protection of the environment.

It takes half a million gallons of water to produce one ton of raw sugar on the island of Maui, says the National Geographic.

Police Program Is Facing Fund Cut

The state is threatening to cancel its grant to Marin's police-community relations program because the Marin Human Rights Commission severed its ties with the project.

The separation culminated a feud between Bella Aaron, human rights commissioner and head of the project, and the human rights commission. Mrs. Aaron and the executive director of the human rights department resigned during the name-calling which followed a charge that Mrs. Aaron was too independent.

In an effort to put the pieces back together, County Administrator Alan Bruce said county officials would meet today with representatives of the California Council on Criminal Justice, which contributes $70,000 a year to the police program.

Cancellation now would lose the county $30,000 dues before the end of April.

"We are hopeful that some arrangement can be made to continue the program," Bruce said.

The Human Rights Department split with the police-community relations project Jan. 21; consequently Robert H. Lawson, executive director of the Council on Criminal Justice, announced the agreement was void.

Bruce noted that the council's contract is with the supervisors, not with the Human Rights Commission. He said the rift between Bella Aaron's project and the commission should have no bearing on state funding.

$66,000 In Taxes Refunded

Cigarette taxes totaling more than $66,000 have been refunded Marin County and the 14 Marin and Southern Sonoma cities, State Controller Houston I. Flournoy announced.

The distribution represents 30 per cent of the revenue deposited in the cigarette tax fund during December.

A breakdown of the refund shows: Marin County, $6,132; Belvedere, $599; Corte Madera, $4,170; Cotati, $618; Fairfax, $1,943; Larkspur, $2,721; Mill Valley, $3,814; Novato, $8,274; Petaluma, $8,435; Rohnert Park, $1,577; Ross, $604; San Anselmo, $3,667; San Rafael, $19,095; Sausalito, $3,471 and Tiburon, $1,931.

Search For New Home To Be Asked

The Marin Senior Coordinating Council, which operates from 914 Fifth Avenue in San Rafael, will ask county supervisors tomorrow for help to find new quarters.

Edward T. Ryken, executive director of the group, said their building will be demolished by the owners, and money will be needed for new headquarters.

County supervisors will also hear from the County Administrator Alan Bruce on what can be done about state cutbacks in aid for nursing homes.

Other items on the supervisors agenda include:

HUMAN RIGHTS - A report from Bruce on the threatened termination of the state grant for Marin's police-community relations program.

GNOSS FIELD — Fixed base operators at the county airport will ask for reduction in the amount of insurance they are required to carry.

FIREHOUSE — Architects Gerson and Overstreet will submit revised plans for a new firehouse-sheriff's substation on Drake Avenue in Marin City. The revised plans show a cost cut from the $118,000 originally estimated last December to $75,000.

HEARINGS — Gus Niederholzer will protest the planning commission's reduction of proposed building density on his 3.4-acre property next to Ross General hospital; Clean Machine Inc. will ask for gasoline pumps as an accessory to a car wash planned on the Highway 101 frontage road at Strawberry; and William Praun of 35 Rancho Drive will protest five apartments that Dr. George Sugarman plans to build in Bel Aire.

The principle of the pneumatic tire was patented by Robert William Thomson of England in 1845.

Financing Transit Plan Due Study

Financing rapid transit at a cost up to $987 million will be tackled by the Golden Gate Bridge District's finance committee at 10 a.m. Wednesday in toll plaza offices.

Plans for various transit systems all call for a combination of federal grants, bonds backed by property taxes and district funds.

The least costly of five systems being considered is a $495 million bus rapid transit, which district consultants estimated would require a 2 per cent hike in property taxes throughout the six-county district.

The knotty issue of where to locate the Central Marin ferry terminal will be before the transportation committee at 2 p.m. on Wednesday. The Independent-Journal incorrectly reported Friday that this meeting would be at 10 a.m. Tuesday.

The transportation committee also is scheduled to consider site selection for bus facilities, seating specifications for buses and a proposal by a Peninsula inventor for ferries pulled by an underwater cable.

The full board of directors' regular meeting will be at 10 a.m. Thursday, preceded by the finance-auditing committee at 9:30 a.m. The regular meeting will be one day earlier than usual because Friday is Lincoln's birthday, a legal holiday.

Two Suspects In Forgery Probe Nabbed

Two Novato residents were arrested Friday and charged were filed against a third Novatan reportedly implicated in a rash of check forgeries.

The district attorney's office yesterday filed charges of burglary, forgery, passing forged checks and receiving stolen property against Bruce Alan Tucker, 22, of 919 Scott Street, Apt. 1. He was to be arraigned today.

Tucker was arrested Thursday and held on $6,250 bail after nine bad checks totalling $315 were passed in Novato and Petaluma, Novato police said.

The checks, police said, were taken in a burglary Jan. 27.

Police said those who passed the checks forged the signature, then made the checks out to themselves.

Arrested Friday on suspicion of forgery and conspiracy to defraud was James Orville Davis, 19, of 557 McClay Road. He posted $1,250 bail to appear in Marin municipal Court today.

A juvenile was arrested with Davis and taken to Juvenile Hall. A second juvenile was arrested Thursday with Tucker.

Residential Plan Due Hearing

Plans for a 642-unit residential development near Koch luggage in East Corte Madera will be discussed tonight by the Corte Madera Planning Commission.

The commission, which will meet at 7:30 p.m. at town hall, accompanied the city council and board of design on a tour of properties developed by E. C. Harter and Odenthal Investment Co., which is proposing the development.

Last month, the concept of the development was outlined for the commission.

The commission will also consider rezoning of property in the newly annexed Meadowsweet Drive area and informal discussion with John C. Oglesby for annexation of his property on Lucky Drive to Corte Madera. The land is now part of Larkspur.

Chest X-Ray Service Due Temporary Halt

The chest x-ray (minifilm) service at 920 Grand Avenue in San Rafael will be halted temporarily the last half of this month so that new x-ray equipment can be installed.

Dr. Carolyn B. Albrecht, county health officer, said the service will be interrupted from Feb. 16 through Feb. 28. The service will resume March 1 with hours from 10 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Monday, Wednesday and Friday and 1 to 6 p.m. Thursdays.

Why thousands of Americans will spend $6,700 for a Mercedes-Benz that's three feet shorter than American luxury cars.

At Mercedes-Benz, we define luxury a bit differently than most automobile makers.

To our way of thinking, size for the sake of size is not luxury. It is waste.

If adding an inch to a Mercedes-Benz won't contribute to some function, Mercedes-Benz engineers won't add it.

Eric Dahlquist, in a recent issue of Motor Trend, commented on the size of the American luxury car.

"Stunned by such mass, the passenger enters to find that size does not equate with room..."

The Mercedes-Benz 250 Sedan is three feet shorter than the shortest of the domestic luxury sedans.

Yet it is a curious fact that the 250 concedes almost nothing inside.

"Though not a particularly big car, the accommodation is well-planned and quite roomy enough for consideration by the chauffeur-driven executive." —Motor

The engineer is king

A Mercedes-Benz is as different from a domestic luxury car as automobiles, each with four wheels and an engine in front, can be.

Mercedes-Benz is one of the few automobile makers left in the world where the engineer is still king.

Design decisions are made by an engineer, not a styling whiz or a marketing wizard. At Mercedes-Benz, the engineering department still tells the sales department when a new model is ready.

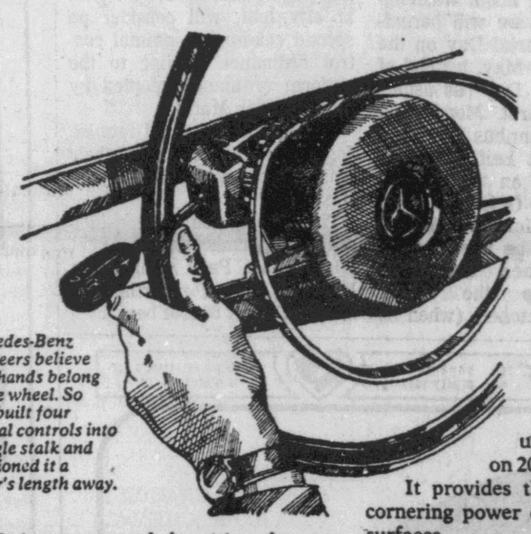
The result is an automobile that has been built to an engineering ideal.

And an automobile that is fundamentally different than any built in the States.

From oddity to necessity

To the uninitiated, this approach may appear to have disadvantages.

Your first time behind the wheel of a Mercedes-Benz is likely to produce a vague sense of disorientation.



Mercedes-Benz engineers believe both hands belong on the wheel. So they built four critical controls into a single stalk and positioned it a finger's length away.

In its recommended position, the seat seems too far from the wheel. And it's too unyielding to be called "luxurious."

But that strange seat position lets you drive with the wheel at arm's length and your back firmly against the seat's. And that gives you better control.

The "unyielding" seat, it turns out, was designed by orthopedic surgeons to give firm support. You'll appreciate it more after seven hundred miles than you do after seven.

If you press the floor switch to get your high beams, you'll get a squirt in the windshield instead.

That's because a curious-looking stalk, positioned precisely a finger's length from the wheel, embodies four different controls.

High and low beams, turn signals, windshield wipers, and their two-speed control all can be operated without taking your hands from the wheel. Or your eyes from the road.

Such oddities, admittedly, take some getting used to. But there's a reason for every one. And, before you know it, the oddities have become necessities.

No domestic sedan...

It is at the wheel a man discovers the performance characteristics that make Mercedes-Benz unique among the world's motor cars. Mercedes-Benz engineers believe that a car's abilities should be limited only by road and conditions—not by its own design. Every Mercedes-Benz has fully independent suspension front and rear. A design concept used, without exception, on 200-mph grand prix cars.

It provides the maximum possible cornering power over a variety of road surfaces.

No domestic sedan has it.

Every Mercedes-Benz is equipped with four massive disc brakes. Standard, not optional. Because, to our way of thinking, it's unthinkable to relegate the best brakes you can build to the option list.

No domestic sedan has them on all four wheels.

And every Mercedes-Benz has a steering system so precisely balanced that the car seeks a straight path on its own.

No domestic sedan can match it.

Even the Grand Mercedes 600, a three-ton limousine, notes Motor Trend, "...will outrun and outmaneuver many sports cars."

Join the club

But the final word on the distinction between Mercedes-Benz and domestic luxury cars belongs to a group of Mercedes-Benz owners.

Owners so enthusiastic that they've formed thirty-two chapters of the Mercedes-Benz Club of America.

Each year they hold more than 60 local competitions and 3 national rallies.

It's their opportunity, in performance events, to extend their cars to the limits of which a Mercedes-Benz is capable.

Not everyone joins the club.

Mercedes-Benz owners who rally their cars are a relatively small share of our owners. But, then, no domestic luxury car even has a club.

$6,700?

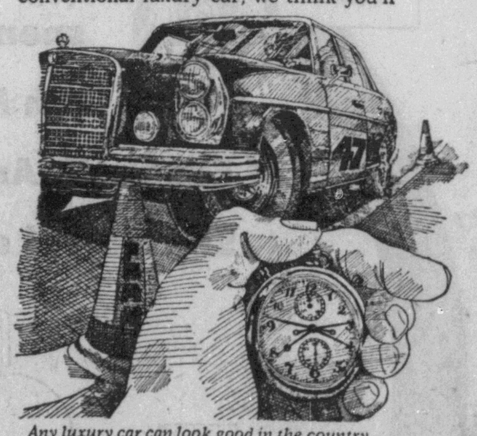
Our pursuit of engineering ideals has placed Mercedes-Benz automobiles among the world's most costly.

The suggested retail price of the Mercedes-Benz 250 Sedan, with automatic transmission, is $6,343†.

With such popular options as power steering, white sidewall tires, and radio with rear-seat speaker, you can spend over $6,700.

And thirteen of our models cost more, including the 300SEL 6.3—dubbed by Road & Track "merely the world's greatest sedan..."—at $15,958†.

But if your tastes do not run to the conventional luxury car, we think you'll find Mercedes-Benz automobiles well worth the price you pay.



Any luxury car can look good in the country club driveway. Mercedes-Benz looks good in places like Lime Rock, Road America and Laguna Seca.

And if you'll fill out the coupon below, we'll send you our least expensive production. A full-color Mercedes-Benz brochure, absolutely free.

DRESS SHOP OWNER AND MANAGER

Up Before Dawn To Groom Horses

By PAT BALMES

The race track is dark and cold every morning at 5:30 a.m. when Carol Hanson in rubber boots walks along the shedrow aisle before the long line of box stalls. In the tack room near 10 stalls awarded to her Sunseeker Farms, the fragile-looking blonde puts coffee on before beginning her morning routine of grooming spirited thoroughbred horses.

Carol, who owns a dress shop at Strawberry Town and Country Village, is a partner with her trainer in the racing stables.

"I can't understand what thrill those owners get who just watch their horses from the stands," says the feminine groom, pitching damp straw out of a stall.

THE CALL, "Hot horse!" announces that trainer and exercise boy have returned on steaming thoroughbreds from their gallop on the track where the trainer rides his experienced "pony" beside each young race horse to calm him and watch him run.

Carol runs to hold the excited two-year-old's reins, as the small man dismounts and reports on her filly's run. She pulls off the light saddle and ties the filly to sponge her long legs with hot, sudsy water.

"In warmer weather I give them a full bath after a gallop," explains Carol, never stopping work while she talks. "But in winter the younger horses particularly have a tendency to catch cold."

Blanketing her sweating filly, Carol leads her to the walking wheel, which resembles a revolving maypole. Three hot horses are tied there already, to cool. They turn the overhead arms as they walk in a circle.

"SOMETIMES I have to run around three times when I'm leading an unmanageable horse before I can catch an arm to tie my horse to," says the slender blonde, who doesn't need to diet because of her strenuous work.

"Once a horse reared and hung himself up at the top of the walking wheel. Not stopping to wait for help, I rushed out to save his life and nearly lost mine!" remembers Carol.

She has learned that handling young thoroughbreds in close quarters is dangerous. An ambulance is stationed at the race track's gate.

She refuses to go into the stall with one of her thoroughbreds, Bad Dog.

Carol explains, half joking and half serious, "Someday I'll have the courage, but not today," because the fractious young horse threw his exercise boy the previous day.

I'VE SEEN too many people taken out from the shedrow by ambulance during the two years I've been working with these horses!"

Carol's head was once cut by a rearing thoroughbred.

"I've got scars all over from being bitten and more black and blue marks than I care to mention," she says.

The first time Carol took a horse to the saddling paddock before a race, Sunseeker, sensing the excitement, dashed before her completely out of control.

"It was lucky I was the first one there. Otherwise I would have wiped everybody out," she relates, remembering her terror.

Assistance came in the form of a restraining halter and lead rope from the men in the barn, but not in time to prevent a very embarrassing moment.

Returning to the walking wheel, Carol unties a cooled horse and leads him back to the shedrow. With the pick she wears on a long string attached to her belt loop, she cleans mud out of the hoofs and bathes and lubricates them. Over and over throughout the brightening morning, Carol repeats her routine (cleaning stalls, saddling, grooming and bathing) while one horse after another is taken to the track for a mile's gallop.

TAKING A rare break, Carol sprints to the track to watch a timed work; a half mile run at almost racing speed to qualify her horse for a race of certain specifications. Carol jogs through other stable areas where girl grooms and women trainers are working.

NUMBER SIX, With Destiny, was the winner of a race at Bay Meadows last September when the thoroughbred horse was owned by Sunseeker Farm. A partner in the horse racing stable, Carol Hanson worked as a secretary in Minneapolis for 10 years and then decided, "I had taken enough shorthand," and came to San Francisco. She worked at two full-time jobs, bought into a dress shop and now the stable. About business profits, she says, "The stable is erratic, and the shop is stable." (I-J photo)

CAROL HANSON'S dangerous work in race track stables contrasts sharply with her fashions career as owner-manager of a junior-size dress shop in Strawberry Town and Country Village. A partner in Sunseeker Farms racing stable, Carol hurries to the track before dawn each morning to care for her thoroughbreds, before coming to her shop.

"Girl grooms are often preferred on the track because they are more conscientious. I take pride in scrubbing out water buckets and keeping the shedrow raked," Carol explains.

At the track, exercise girls are galloping racehorses, their braids bouncing under metal crash helmets. Like Carol, they wear little makeup and workman-like Western pants or chaps. Many of these young women have been reared on race tracks, according to Carol. She also knows of women jockeys, trainers, veterinarians, a woman who has a horse-vanning business and a woman outrider at Bay Meadows, who leads horses to the post.

Carol leaves the track at 10 a.m., but the work with the horses, averaging two hours daily per horse, goes on in the afternoon.

"They get better care than people," says Carol, explaining that the soft bones of the young horses are injured so often that ninty per cent of the race horses at the track have leg problems. Each afternoon the grooms wrap the legs in standing bandages, give medical treatment, fight horses to standstill in turbulator tubs and walk them again at the walking wheel.

DURING THE race meet, which starts Feb. 15, Golden Gate Fields may handle over a million dollars a day, according to the horsewoman.

"The people in Albany became concerned when a track strike threatened because a large percentage of the profits go in taxes for schools," remarks Carol.

"If you have to scratch (withdraw), the vet comes to make sure you're not faking. If a horse with a following, like dapple-gray Sunseeker, is scratched from a race, the track might lose thirty to forty thousand dollars in bets," says the woman who seldom places a bet.

"Being called before the stewards is like being sent to the principal's office," says the owner. "Stewards can suspend you for a year or rule you off the track for life."

PREPARING TO leave the track for her Strawberry shop, Carol relates, "The trainer wouldn't allow me to come to the track in December because I was working late every night at my shop. I missed the horses. I felt like I lost my family."

Hair straight and clothes dirty, Carol goes home for a quick shower before driving to the Strawberry shopping center.

"If it wasn't for hot rollers I'd be in a lot of trouble!" she says. She sets her hair at home and combs it out in the back of her dress shop, completing her daily transition from groom to glamour girl.

Explaining events which lead her to this double life, Carol says that she left home on a farm in Minnesota when she was 17 with $15 advance on the cream money in her pocket. She worked as a secretary in Minneapolis for 10 years.

"ONE DAY I just got tired of it. I had taken enough shorthand!" Carol recalls. She came to San Francisco in 1964, determined to earn enough to start her own business.

"I took a job as secretary from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. and worked at Bimbo's Night Club from 6 p.m. to 2 a.m. as a hat check girl, to see how long I could do it before I died," she jokes, revealing that a wig helped her make the speedy change. "It was an experience I will never forget."

Within a year, Carol had earned enough to buy the franchise for the junior size shop.

Three years later, Carol claimed her first race horse and went into partnership in Sunseeker Farms. And now she owns her shop independently.

"I knew nothing about managing a dress shop or handling race horses. It was 'ignorance is bliss.' But I had a lot of help learning both businesses," says Carol.

Regarding her profits, the groom and shop manager quips, "The stable is erratic and the shop is stable."

Marin Women

Auxiliary Takes An Active Part

It all began with a tea 25 years ago because Sunny Hills, then a home for orphans in San Anselmo, needed a group to help with the children at the home and to raise funds.

Tomorrow the Sunny Hills Junior Auxiliary will celebrate the anniversary of their founding by honoring many past presidents and welcoming 10 new members at a meeting at the Outdoor Art Club in Mill Valley.

Prior to the auxiliary's formation much of the orphanage's financial support had come from the Grape Festival and the Charity Ball, held annually since 1931 the night before the festival.

THE AUXILIARY took over the work of putting on the formal ball, and in 1946 had more than 600 persons for an evening of dining and dancing at the Meadow Club in Fairfax. Sunny Hills Juniors continued to sponsor the ball until last year when it was decided there was not enough interest in formal balls, and a dominoes tournament was held instead.

House tours, fashion luncheon series, boat trips, Christmas ice shows and car shows in conjunction with fashions have been held through the years as ways of raising funds, but as the times change so have the auxiliary members constantly setting new goals and challenges for themselves.

The auxiliary has always placed an emphasis on direct services to the children at Sunny Hills. In the early years they often packed up picnic lunches and loaded the children into station wagons for outings.

The Sunny Hills Home saw a need to change and in 1956 became a residential treatment center for adolescents with severe emotional problems. The orphans had been easy to entertain, but older children required specialized treatment. Direct volunteer relationships required special training.

For a time auxiliary members slipped back into fund raising esclusively, supplying the money for Valentine and graduation parties, Christmas and graduation gifts and Christmas trees for each cottage at Sunny Hills. They have continued to supply funds for these extras by sponsoring horse shows and other fund raisers but at the same time expanded services to the day treatment program begun last year when the Sunny Hills on campus school was completed.

Day treatment youngsters are referred to Sunny Hills by Marin County school districts or by private referrals because they do not fit into any county school program. They attend school at Sunny Hills from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. From 3 to 5 p.m. they either attend an after school recreation program or receive counciling similar to that of residential children.

Parents of these children are charged a fee according to their ability to pay, and the Junior Auxiliary has set as its goal the object of raising funds for day treatment scholarships to pick up the deficit. Members have also extended involvement to include direct volunteer services with the day care adolescents.

Ten auxiliary members meet at Sunny Hills once a month to learn about care of these young persons and then report back to the full membership. This training has allowed members and their husbands to take Sunny Hills children horse back riding, to ball games and cultural events, dinners in restaurants, on bicycle rides, boat trips and to the circus.

Members are also called on to drive the children to medical appointments.

It is difficult to remember when the Sunny Hills Junior Auxiliary last had a tea. —J.L.

SKIRTING THE ISSUE

There are several ways to wear short shorts without being quite so obvious. One is to cover them with an overskirt. This was designed by Glaudia and presented by George Halley in New York. (UPI telephoto)

HELEN HELP US!

By HELEN BOTTEL

If Family Dawdlers Depend On Your Prodding Don't Quit Now

DEAR HELEN:

My wife says I have an anxiety complex because I would rather be early than late. She even wrote to you about it. Remember the letter concerning the husband who got ready half an hour ahead of time and paced until his family "went up the wall?"

Well, I took the hint. The other night I made sure she knew when we were supposed to meet our friends. Then, after I was dressed, I quietly read a book. I did not pace. I did not point to the clock. I did not go out and start the car while she was getting on her girdle. I was calm and patient—and we were half an hour late.

But instead of learning her lesson, do you know what she told our friends? It was all my fault, she said, because she depended on me to prod her and there I was sitting relaxed and easy so she figured she had plenty of time.

Moreover, my change of character darn near did me in. A born pacer does not take easily to the "sit and be late" role.

Tell me, Helen, in the battle of the sexes, does the male ever win? — BACK TO ANXIETY

DEAR B TO A:

Not unless the wife is suddenly struck dumb.

Moral: Don't change character in mid-life, if your family has come to depend on prodding. Those dawdlers need you. Actually, this is a good combination (and I speak from experience): Mr. Early married to Mrs. Late means they hit a compromise and arrive on time. — H.

P.S. Read on:

DEAR HELEN:

My husband is a Worrier — Capital "W." Or was. That's what bothers me. Do you suppose he has found someone else?

If I was maybe three hours late from shopping (you know how time flies) I'd come home to find him frantic, thinking I'd been in a wreck or something. Should an evening club meeting last longer than expected, I'd better call or he'd be calling the hospitals. When I'm out of town, he has to know when I'll be back, or he imagines me kidnapped and ravished by the roadside. (Or did)

Well this fretting gets one down, so we had words. Capital "W."

Now suddenly he has stopped worrying. I called one night last week two hours after I was supposed to be home, and Helen, he was actually irked because "I waked him out of a sound sleep." Another time I telephoned and didn't even get an answer. I rushed right home and there he was in front of the television, but his hands were cold. Had he just come in?

Moreover, he smiled and called me "fussbudget" when he was late from work yesterday. (He's never late getting home).

Could it be my husband doesn't love me any more? — NOW WORRIED

DEAR NOW:

More likely: Could be your husband is teaching you a lesson.

So now you know: It's great when someone cares enough to worry about you . . . and a phone call home when you're late is a wonderful way to say, "I care enough to get in touch." — H.

DEAR HELEN:

Thank you for printing the address of "Singles Information Service." I received the organization's useful bulletin on computer dating, and want to add my vote to that of many others: Let's make S.I.S. a national group, so that the ever-growing number of single people can find assistance for their special problems —i.e. where singles clubs are located, which are on the square; housing information; tax hints, etc. — MR. T. T.

Chicken, Bananas, Orange Juice Are Cheaper Than 14 Years Ago

By ARTHUR E. ROWSE

WASHINGTON — In these trying times, would you believe that there are any living costs still below what they were between 1957 and 1959?

Well, there are, and if you could exist only on things like fried chicken and bowling balls you would have no cause to complain about inflation.

Actually, there are six food items selling below what they sold for then. They are fried chicken, bananas, fresh orange juice, frozen orange juice, frozen lemonade and frozen french fried potatoes.

Assuming a score of 100 for the 1957-59 period, the averages for these six items in order for October, the latest month detailed by the Bureau of Labor Statistics, were 91.2, 97.2, 90.4, 89.9, 96.2 and 93.3.

A few other items have risen less than 10 per cent while the average for all food items surveyed by the government went up 33 per cent. These are chicken breasts 107.5, ice cream 104.7 cookies 107.8 canned pineapple-grapefruit juice 106.9, Italian salad dressing 106.1, eggs 106.3 tea 107.4 and canned chicken soup 102.6.

BASED ON these government figures, it is thus theoretically possible to fill a shopping bag — but not all nutritional gaps — with these 14 food products and pay no more than you would have paid 14 years ago.

Averages are misleading figures, and there are indications that the government's Consumer Price Index does not show the full extent of inflation. But comparisons between products are accurate and can be useful.

Price reductions have also occurred on non-food items and some services. Using 100 as the price in 1957-59, the average price of all appliances surveyed was down to 87.6 in October.

Individual appliance items were down to 81.8 fo canister-type vacuum cleaners, 88.1 for electric refrigerator-freezers and 93.1 for electric automatic washing machines. Gas and electric ranges were listed at 101.6.

Other appliances listed as being up only slightly in price since December, 1963, are electric automatic clothes dryers 103.2, portable electric room heaters 102.6 and garbage disposal units 108.8.

THE ONLY other non-food items with lower prices are nylon seamless stockings 99.6. aerosol deodorants 97.0, home permanent wave kits 98.8, multiple vitamin concentrates 92.2, prescription drugs 90.0, television tubes 97.5, television sets 80.4, radios 76.4, portable tape recorders 90.7, stereo phonograph records 97.8 and super 8 zoom-lens movie cameras 81.2. The base period for some of these items was December, 1963.

Among non-food items that have risen less than 10 per cent over the years are polyester blend slips 108.9, cotton diapers 105.3, wrist watches 104.2, new cars 108.7, aerosol shaving cream 103.9, 35mm color film 100.3, golf balls 105.2, bowling balls 103.5 and domestic cigars 108.9.

Furniture and bedding prices also show only small increases. But the base period was June, 1970, for some items. Based on 1957-59 figures, the index for soft surface rugs was up to only 103.7. Since December, 1963, the index for bed pillows of kapok or polyester went up to 108.0.

An example of a misleading price index is the one for prescription drugs. By taking only certain drugs at a time near when they were introduced, the index fails to show the substantial increases listed by drug manufacturers themselves in prices of nearly all drugs to pharmacists.

For the full details, ask for a free copy of the Consumer Price Index for October from the Bureau of Labor Statistics, Washington, D.C. 20212.

Today is Monday, Feb. 8, the 39th day of 1971.

The moon is between its first quarter and full phase. The morning stars are Mercury, Venus, Mars and Jupiter. The evening star is Saturn. Those born on this day are under the sign of Aquarius.

On this day in history:

In 1587 Mary, Queen of Scots, was beheaded after being charged with plotting the murder of Britain's Queen Elizabeth I.

In 1940 every 10th person in two villages near Warsaw, Poland, was shot in reprisal for the deaths of two German soldiers.

In 1963 Premier Karim Kassim of Iraq was overthrown by a military coup. He was executed the next day.

In 1964 Princess Irene of The Netherlands renounced her right to the throne and was married to Spanish Prince Juan Carlos.

A thought for the day: Benjamin Franklin said, "There never was a good war or a bad peace."

HOW TO PLAY

WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Sometimes Silence Is Golden During Bidding In Tourneys

When a hand obviously belongs to the opponents, should you enter the bidding or should you keep quiet? The advantage of making an overcall is that your partner may be able to suggest a paying sacrifice bid; or that he may make a favorable opening lead. The disadvantage of bidding is that you may tell the opponents where the few missing high cards are. This disadvantage was fatal in one of the hands played a few weeks ago in a match between teams representing Houston and Dallas.

NO TROUBLE

Brad Gentry, one of the leading Houston experts, had no trouble making six diamonds with the South hand. He felt sure that East held the king of hearts for his overcall of two spades. This was enough information to chart a winning course.

Declarer drew two rounds of trumps, led a heart to the ace and returned the low heart from dummy. East played low with a good, casual motion, but South put up the queen of hearts without a quiver.

This was, of course, the winning play. Since Gentry didn't lose a heart trick he could afford to lose a spade. If East had put up the king of hearts, he would have won the heart trick, but there would be no spade trick for the defense; South would cash the queen of hearts to discard the losing spade from the dummy.

GUESSES WRONG

The contract and the opening lead were the same at the other table of the match, but the outcome was different. South drew two rounds of trumps, led a heart to the ace and returned the low heart drom dummy. East played low very casually, just as at the first table.

The difference was that East had not bid at the second table. South had no way of guessing which opponent had the king of hearts. South decided to try a finesse with the ten of hearts instead of playing the queen.

SILENCE GOLDEN

West won with the jack of hearts, and South eventually lost a spade trick as well. At the second table, East's silence during the bidding and his correct casual play in hearts pushed declarer in the wrong direction. Silence may be golden at the bridge table.

DAILY QUESTION

As dealer, you hold:
♠ - Q J 9 8 7 4 3
♥ - K 8 7 4
♦ - 5
♣ - 7.

What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid three spades if you are not vulnerable, especially if the opponents are vulnerable.

If your side is vulnerable, you should pass at rubber bridge; but a shutout bid of three spades may still produce good results at tournament bridge.

ART REVIEW

Posey Evokes An Inner Excitement

By MARY LOU STRIBLING

SAN FRANCISCO — It is a good feeling to see a fine exhibit and leave with that sense of inner excitement which can perhaps best be described as "inspiration." The one-man show of paintings by Ernest Posey at the California Palace of the Legion of Honor provides such a rare experience.

Most of the works are monumental in size, some composed of several sections mounted together in a single frame. But size alone does not account for their immediate stunning impact. They appear to be self-lighted by mysteriously fluorescent pigments, and it is only after examining them closely that you discover the effect is achieved by bouncing vibrating colors against each other.

You have the eerie sensation of looking through the windows of a room suspended in space, and feel an urgency to see everything at once before the scenes change or drift out of sight.

Several of the paintings have astronomical themes. In "Eclipse," two overlapping black moons are silhouetted against a halo of white light in a sky flaming with melting colors. "Star Charts" is a composite of glistening pinwheels which seem to be woven of gossamer threads radiating out from tiny points of light.

Several pieces derived from analytical studies of the compositional structures of paintings from earlier periods in art history. "The feast of St. Frances" is a reverential work with the order of some of the Renaissance portraits of saints, where the primary figure was placed in a position of central importance, with angels and other celestial symbols symmetrically arranged around it.

The segmented patterns and textures of "The Heart of San Anselmo" have the decorative quality of an aerial night view of a city. According to the artist, it was inspired by Egyptian drawings, which in turn he translated into a maze of hub-like intersections, curving streets, and twinkling lights from traffic signals, stores, and houses.

Posey, who is a resident of San Anselmo, sees his present style as the result of a series of logical stages. He attended an industrial art school for several years, where he learned to use an air brush and other mechanical devices, and acquired a respect for good craftsmanship. Later, while he was studying fine arts in Louisiana, he worked periodically as a float painter for the Mardi Gras parades.

His interest in certain theatrical color effects possibly originated there, but it has been disciplined and recycled into pure drama.

Emergency Job Plan Is Urged

WASHINGTON (UPI) —With unemployment the highest in 10 years, Sens. Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis., and Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., called today for an emergency program of public service jobs.

The two lawmakers asked the mayors of 16 of the nation's largest cities to testify on an emergency employment bill that would earmark $750 million in federal outlays this year to ease unemployment.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics said last Friday there were 5.4 million Americans —6 per cent of the work force — without work in January, the highest number since 1961.

Nelson and Javits rounded up 32 co-sponsors from both parties for their bill. They said they hoped "to rush the bill through the legislative process," but set no timetable.

Under the bill, governors, mayors and other public agencies would be authorized to hire the unemployed for local public service jobs in recreation, health, law enforcement and education. The federal government would pay 80 per cent of the cost, including wages.

President Nixon vetoed a public service employment bill last year, contending it would lock people into "dead end, WPA" type jobs. But he suggested a transitional, short term program of public service jobs might be useful.

Dazzling Debussy In Pair Of Small-Scale Concerts

Two smaller scale concerts in Marin yesterday — each a gem in its own class — were the Paul Palmer piano recital last night in Dominican College's Angelico Hall and the Marin Arts Quartet second concert of its season yesterday afternoon at the Outdoor Art Club in Mill Valley.

Palmer, a young newcomer to the Bay Area, gave a superb performance. Without personal showmanship or distracting mannerisms, he was totally involved in the music and made it say everything. Exceptionally admirable was the clarity of texture due partly to his touch and partly to beautifully controlled pedaling so necessary in Angelico to avoid excessive resonance.

Though he was not note-perfect in the opening Bach-Rachmaninoff Suite in E Major — a common flaw often caused by initial nervousness — Palmer revealed a dazzling command of pianistic resources in his second number, the awesome Brahms variations and fuge on a Handel theme. Noted were the young pianist's lovely cantabile tone, driving power and keen sense of rhythm.

It is quite remarkable to hear a pianist who is master of styles requiring the utmost ethereal delicacy as well as impassioned power. His "Reflets Dans L'Eau" and "Jeux D'Eau" were among the most exquisite Debussy I have heard, and equally impressive was the percussive dynamism of his Prokofiev Sonata No. 3 in A Minor and the glittering impressionism of the contemporary Argentine composer Alberto Ginaster's sonant which made a brilliant finale.

Palmer also played three brief Kodaly pieces that were charming. Though the concert was long, I regretted I could not stay for encores.

Highlight of the Marin Arts Quartet concert was harpist Anne Adam's performance of the Debussy sacred and profane dances for harp and strings. Of course the harp is ideally suited to full realization of the shimmering beauty of the Debussy idiom, and Miss Adams's technical fluency combined with the artistry of the quartet produced a ravishing tonal fabric of muted opalescent colors.

The quartet, composed of violinists Charles Meacham and Michael Gerling, violist Lucien Mitchell, and cellist Jean Mitchell, is a well matched and balanced group, especially since Mitchell has taken over the viola part.

They gave a smooth performance of the opening quartet movement in C Minor, a posthumous Opus B by Schubert, and went on to the piquant Quartet No. 2 of the Mexican composer Silvestre Revueltas. I could, however, see nothing characteristically Mexican about it — perhaps because of distortion baused by its contemporary dissonance, though that was not extreme.

Major work of the afternoon was the romantic Dvorak Quartet in F Major, a highly satisfying piece lyrically and rhythmically by that often unjustly denigrated Czech composer.

Wyss Introduced; A So-So Concert

By MAYBELLE SPECKMANN

Saturday night's program in the San Francisco Symphony's four-concert Marin series introduced the orchestra's assistant conductor, Niklaus Wyss, to Marin music lovers, with not entirely satisfactory results.

Personally, the young Swiss maestro captivated the audience that did not quite fill the Terra Linda High School gymnasium, but musically Wyss was something of a disappointment. Though ingratiating and undoubtedly very talented, he seems to lack at this point the inspiration and force of personality to take full commanf of an important orchestra in major works.

Not getting to hear Zino Francescatti in the great Brahms violin concerto, as heard in the San Francisco regular series last week, was disappointing but understandable, since a second performance by a world famed virtuoso would be prohibitive financially. But the substitution of the Mozart G Minor Symphony No. 40 was disappointing because its potentials were not fully realized.

Ideally, this symphony, a rare departure from classical serenity in Mozart insturmental works, should have a feverish intensity, even brilliant exuberance in the finale. Instead the performance was pedestrian partly because of too slow tempi.

Idiosyncrasies of Wyss's conducting style were most apparent in this symphony and the opening Beethoven overture to "Prometheus," which should express Beethoven's boldly original and fiery creative spirit. Tossing and wagging motions of Wyss's left arm and hand seemed to lack specific focus and significance, and he directed most of his attention to the violins with consequent weakness in bass sonority. The effect was too diffuse and formless.

After the intermission the situation improved greatly, first with a sparkling and effervescent performance of Hugo Wolf's "Italian Serenade," followed by a quite exciting suite from Stravinsky's popular ballet "Petrouchka."

In the serenade Wyss was completely at ease, and I wondered if this kind of light-hearted work may be his special forte. The high point for me was the beautifully lyrical English horn passages played by Raymond Duste — no surprise, since Duste, who is leader of the Bach-to-Mozart Chamber Group, has long been a prime favorite with Mill Valley candlelight concert series audiences.

"Petrouchka" was often scintillating, with many opportunities for admirable individual instrumental soloes, particularly the piano. However, I had the feeling that the orchestra itself was in command and that the dramatic impact would have been much greater with Seiji Ozawa at the helm. He will be for the next two concerts on March 27, when Marin's own violist Rolf Persinger and young pianist Andre Watts will be solosits, and on May 22 for the "Four Views of Romeo and Juliet."

Louisiana has been nicknamed the Child of the Mississippi River.

Invasion Of Privacy Is Probe Issue

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The government has started an investigation to determine if there is an invasion of privacy in the use of Social Security numbers by retail stores, credit agencies, police departments and others.

The use of such numbers as a convenient method of keeping track of people has become widespread in recent years, even though the identification numbers were supposed to be kept secret when the program was set up in the 1930s.

Sen. Sam J. Ervin, D-N.C., said his subcommittee on constitutional rights has received numerous complaints that the system is being abused.

He released a letter today from Secretary Elliott L. Richardson of health, education and welfare, in which Richardson said he was "concerned that if the Social Security numbers were used too broadly such widespread use and dependence upon the number might lend itself to abuses of individual privacy."

Richardson ordered the Social Security Administration to review its policies on the use of the number.

In 1947 the War and Defense departments and the Air Force were combined in the Department of Defense.

NUMBERS GAME FIGHTS FIRE

Bill Bishell and Colleen McFerrin prepare a street number designed to guide firemen and policemen to homes where help is needed. Sixth graders throughout the Mill Valley School District are making the reflective numbers for sale to homeowners with poorly marked residences. Fire officials have praised the project.

Two Union Leaders Get Work Leaves

Two of three union officials jailed last Wednesday for contempt of court in connection with a Valentine's Day riot at the Independent-Journal, were released from Marin County Jail today to report to their San Francisco office.

Leon Olson, president of San Francisco Typographical Union 21, and Donald Abrams, a vice president of the union, were released on the county's work furlough program.

Jack Goldberger, president of Periodical Drivers and Helpers Local 921, remained in jail, ineligible for the program.

Jesse Johnson, work furlough officer with the Marin County Probation Department, said Olson and Abrams were admitted to the program because they work regular hours, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Goldberger's hours were not regular, Johnson said, and his whereabouts could not be know at all times.

Olson and Abrams will be released at 7 a.m. each weekday and are to report back to the jail at 7 p.m. each day.

The three were sentenced to 15 days in jail by Judge Thomas F. Keating of Marin Superior Court, who found them guilty of violating an injunction he issued Jan. 28, 1970, limiting picketing and forbidding violence by the unions against the I-J, its employees or customers.

Olson and Goldberger were fined $1,500 each. Abrams was fined $750. Payment of fines has been deferred pending a superior court hearing Feb. 24.

The newspaper was struck Jan. 7, 1970, by the typographical union.

POLLUTION TRAINING

Learning Smog's Smells

By FRANK FARRARA

RICHMOND — It was the kind of school that made one wish one had a cold.

Noses were saturated with the smells of smog as people whiffed and sniffed the odors of common air pollutants at the John F. Kennedy High School in Richmond Saturday.

They were attending the "smell school" conducted by the Stop Smog Committee of Richmond and intended to improve accuracy in identifying pollutants.

"We're trying to get people to know what they are smelling so they can give quick accurate reports to the Bay Area Pollution Control District," said Committee Chairman Katherine Lord of Richmond.

At the first table, a kindly lady gave us a sniff of high sulphur crude oil that cleared our sinuses and snapped our head back several inches.

The program said: "Fumes of crude oil can cause dizziness to those who smell it," and we believed it.

Lined up in tin cans were the smells of the Richmond area, crude oil, gasoline, tar and asphalt, which Mrs. Lord described as "the background smells . . these things that are always here."

Visitors, arriving clear-nosed from the outdoor air, made faces and grunted "ugh" when they got a concentrated whiff of the familiar odors.

By contrast the smell of gasoline seemed mild, but the program warned: "Gasoline fumes breathed over a long period of time can have an adverse effect on the liver."

Those who survived the first stop were ushered to a laboratory where a warning sign said anyone suffering from emphysema, allergies, respiratory or heart ailments shouldn't enter.

For those people there was a postscript which read: "You probably shouldn't be living in Richmond."

Inside a high school chemist uncorked a small tube and out came nitrogen dioxide, a chief factor in photo-chemical smog, which drifted up in a brown cloud, similar to the thin brown line seen hovering over the Bay Area on smoggy days.

It had an odor similar to that of chlorine and the program said it comes from power plants, steam boilers and chemical plants.

Elsewhere in the room, a volunteer sprayed a mist of ammonia past visitors' noses, his companion burned small pieces of rubber and a fourth man offered a smell of sulphur dioxide, which smelled like sulphur burning.

Then a breath of air and into another laboratory, where the pervading odor was hydrogen sulfide, best described as the smell of rotten eggs.

It even overpowered the odor of mercaptans, chemicals which give odor to natural gas which is odorless and have the smell of rotten onions, and carbon disulfide, which had the smell of rotten cabbage.

It was time for another walk in the air because by then the smells were all mixed up in our nose.

The finale was a visit to a small tank of chlorine gas, in a compartment opened only briefly for a quick smell.

It didn't have a strong odor, but the program warned it was "a most dangerous, choking, suffocating, highly toxic agent. It was the first gas used to kill men during the first World War."

On the way out, we took a whiff of oxygen offered by two Richmond firemen, but passed up the cologne the committee had at the exit for those who wanted a change of odor.

We picked up a certificate of proficiency signed by Irving of Pinole, who described himself as a supreme warlock. It certified that we were a "sniffing smog dog," and "therefore qualified to guide the nasally-deprived to chimneys spewing noxious industrial air-sewage."

All the committee hopes is that the visitors, about 150, became acquainted with the pungent odors and can make accurate reports when they complain to the Bay Area Air Pollution Control District.

Suicide Prevention Center Lacks Funds

Marin's hatchling Suicide Prevention Center faces a crisis nearly as serious as those it seeks to prevent.

A cadre of two dozen volunteers completed a series of weekly training sessions Saturday. The many women and a few men expressed intense eagerness to get to work.

The center has an office for the volunteers to work in, and an organized board of directors to guide the operation.

But the center has only a few hundred dollars in the bank. The directors face the decision whether to go ahead on the "God will provide" theory that a working center will save lives and attract gifts. Or, should the board seek enough funds to install expensive telephone equipment and guarantee the salary of a professional director, before open for business?

The crossroads may be reached at the directors' next scheduled meeting, Feb. 17 in a meeting room at St. Paul's Episcopal Church in San Rafael.

Mrs. Walter Lyons, president of the center and a veteran of such work elsewhere in the Bay Area has resigned after seeing the Marin nucleus of volunteers through the training. She said, as she announced her resignation Saturday, that she hopes the remaining directors can find a way to open the center soon.

The board so far has taken a conservative approach to funding, she noted without criticism.

The suicide prevention center has applied for several grants. Members of older, operating centers in San Mateo, San Francisco and Berkeley spoke to the volunteers Saturday. All reported that grants and continuing governmental support usually only materialize after antisuicide centers have been in operation for some time, often more than a year.

Mrs. Lyons and other speakers voiced fears that the original cadre, trained but frustrated by idleness, might fade away if a center cannot open soon.

Dr. Fred Phillips, one of two psychiatrists who had helped train the volunteers, held another viewpoint.

He warned the center would need a regular income "or else we're in a very unfortunate situation." He said the fiscal picture was "more hopeful than in the past," but warned against trying to open the center without adequate funding to remain in operation.

He suggested that other organizations such as the Marin Association for Mental Health could put the suicide prevention center's volunteer manpower to good use for the interim.

Phillips and Dr. James Bakhtiar have explained the psychiatric background of suicide attempts to the trainees. The volunteers have put in shifts at the antisuicide center in Berkely, observing and listening to calls.

Some calls, they reported, came from persons in crisis, actually attempting suicide. Others were from lonely souls, and yet other calls seemed to come from persons seemingly wanting ego reassurance through playing a sort of game with the sympathetic volunteers.

Probation For Printer In I-J Case

I-J Special Report

FAIRFIELD — A 60-year-old San Francisco printer today was placed on probation for three years and ordered to spend three weekends in jail for firing a bullet through a window of the Independent-Journal building in San Rafael last June.

Judge Ellis R. Randall of Solano County Superior Court also told Henry Arthur Stacy to make $230 restitution for the damage he caused.

Judge Randall noted that Stacy, a member of San Francisco Typographical Union 21 which has been on strike against the I-J since Jan. 7, 1970, was a "hard working man" who had been a mostly law-abiding citizen until this arrest. (His only two previous arrests had been some years ago for bookmaking.)

"Nevertheless," the judge said, his being "emotionally disturbed" by the strike did not warrant his "using a firearm in a manner that someone might have been hurt."

Marin Deputy Dist. Atty. Ernest C. Zunino said today that he had recommended that Stacy be sent to jail for six months. The Solano County probation department had suggested a 10-day jail sentence, but the judge imposed a lighter judgement.

Stacy will serve his jail time in Marin County.

Stacy had earlier pleaded guilty to a felony charge of shooting at an occupied building. At the time of the guilty plea, a misdemeanor count of having a loaded gun in his car was dismissed.

Stacy was arrested after police were called to the I-J building about 4:45 a.m. on June 20 by a security guard who had seen a car drive around the plant several times moments before a .38 caliber bullet went through the window.

Police found Stacy in a car parked in a municipal lot a block away. A .38-caliber revolver was found on the seat of his car.

His case was transferred to Solano County after his attorney won a change of venue on the grounds he could not receive a fair trial because of publicity in the I-J.

Gas Pump Crash Ends In Arrest

A 26-year-old Fairfax man was arrested Saturday by Corte Madera police on suspicion of possessing marijuana and narcotics and drunken driving after he crashed into a gas pump at a Nellen Avenue service station.

According to police, Bruce Thomas Badaracco of 77 Live Oak Avenue, sped into the Corte Madera Enco station at 200 Nellen Avenue at about 35 miles per hour.

Narrowly mising an attendant and parked car, Badaracco's vehicle crashed into a pump causing undetermined damage, officers said.

Officers said Badaracco refused to take a road-side sobriety test and a subsequent search turned up a plastic bag of suspected marijuana and about 20 tablets of suspected dangerous drugs.

Badarocco was released on $1,250 bail to appear tomorrow in Marin Municipal Court.

Transit Route On Board Agenda

The Mill Valley School District board, meeting today at 8 p.m. at Park School, will reaffirm its opposition to a rapid transit corridor along the Northwestern Pacific Railroad right-of-way through Mill Valley.

The board will hear a report from Trustee William P. Everts Jr. on a hearing in Mill Valley Jan. 28 on the Golden Gate Bridge district's five transit alternatives.Persons at that hearing generally agreed with the board's position.

The board also will readvertise for bids on the 1.68-acre Harvard Avenue property, which the district is selling. A single bid opened Jan. 25 was rejected because it was too low.

Sign On Agenda

An application by Standard Oil Co. for a free-standing sign at its station at 90 Corte Madera Center will be discussed today when the Corte Madera Planning Commission meets at 7:30 o'clock in town hall. The planners will also discuss residential parking problems.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Chances For Cold Vaccine Dim Because Many Viruses Involved

A common cold has been defined as an infectious runny nose. The discharge contains a virus which is passed along when breathing, sneezing, blowing the nose, or via contaminated fingers. So many different viruses are capable of causing the common cold that a successful vaccine seems unlikely.

COLDS RARELY are limited to the nose because the membranes lining the passageway are continuous with those that line the sinuses, throat, windpipe and bronchi. This is why headache, sore throat, or bronchitis often coexist. Viruses cannot keep out the bacteria so bacterial involvement, such as ear infection or pneumonia may follow.

Curing the common cold is not simple because viruses set up housekeeping and damage the cells of the nasal membranes. Reversing this damage is not practicable. Mark time and the cold cures itself. What we need is a medicine or drug to prevent viruses from multiplying within the cells.

INTERFERON is a naturally occurring substance that prevents almost any known virus from multiplying. It is difficult to work with because the substance is effective only on cells from which it originated. The product is easily made from chicken cells but these do not prevent infections in human cells. Research is being conducted on interferon-inducers. The substances get into the cells and trigger off the mechanism so that the cell starts producing interferon. In other words, the individual makes his own interferon to protect himself against almost any virus infection.

Many physicians are asked, "What do you do when you have a cold?" The majority grin and bear it, so long as there is no fever or marked symptoms. They take aspirin, a decongestant or antihistamine to improve the feeling of well-being or relieve the pain of a raw throat. But some doctors use the infection as a good excuse to spend a day in bed, sleeping, inhaling steam, or catching up on their reading.

(Questions on medical topics will be answered by mail if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to the Independent-Journal.)

ANTI-APPETITE PILLS

G.N. writes: When I take diet pills, my vision becomes blurred. Do you think I'm allergic to these tablets?

REPLY

No. Unpleasant side reactions follow the use of many drugs. However, bring this symptom to your physician's attention because you may have a coexisting eye condition.

FLU SHOTS AND COLDS

L.A.R. writes: Is it safe to take a flu shot when you have a cold?

REPLY

Is it better to wait a week or 10 days until the cold has subsided. Otherwise you might have a reaction with chills, fever and headache.

IMPULSE TO STEAL

X.T. writes: How are kleptomaniacs treated?

REPLY

They are given psychiatric care consisting chiefly of long discussions to uncover past experiences that might account for their odd behavior.

SURGICAL CYSTITIS

B.I. writes: Does bladder infection always follow an abdominal operation?

REPLY

Not always but it often occurs when the individual has been catheterized.

Poet, Singers Plan Benefit For Indians

Poet William Everson, formerly Brother Antoninus, will read his works in a benefit for the Alcatraz Indians at 7:30 p.m. Sunday at the Community Congregational Church of Belvedere-Tiburon.

Joining the Stinson Beach poet in the program will be folk singers Gary and Harriet Carter. Paintings by Olav Coln will be on display.

Bill Would Protect The Right To Study

CONCORD, N.H. (UPI)— State Rep. Malcolm J. Stevenson has filed a bill to guarantee students the right to study without interference from campus disruption.

The measure, in the judiciary committee of the New Hampshire House today, would allow any five students to seek court action if a building is taken over by a group of dissidents, if study is disrupted or if classes are canceled as a result of strikes and boycotts.

'New Politics' Group Elects New Chairman

Thomas H. Thorner of Kentfield, an attorney practicing in San Francisco, has been elected chairman of The Marin Alternative.

The "new politics" organization was formed after the November election by a group of Marinites critical of both major political parties.

Other officers elected were Arlene Hansen of Kentfield, secretary, and Joan Seminario of Kentfield, treasurer.

The organization's steering committee announced it will hold regular public meetings on the last Wednesday of each month in Room A in the College of Marin's Student Center.

Tam High Race For President

Two students will compete for the post of student body president at Tamalpais High School in a special election tomorrow at the school. The candidates are senior Brian Bajor and junior Nicholas Harris.

Joseph Petterle, director of student activities, said the election was called because the current student body president, Ann Folker, was graduated at midterm.

The new president's term will run through the end of the school year, he said.

TV REVIEW

A Blase Nation Looks On

By RICK DU BROW

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Watching the two televised Apollo 14 moonwalks that ended during the weekend, one couldn't help thinking what a blase nation we are. Although there have been only a handful of these lunar walks, there seemed little word-of-mouth excitement except for the matter-of-fact comments about how wonderful it all was.

It was more than wonderful, of course. It was spectacular and emotionally overwhelming when one forced oneself to concentrate fully on the reality of what was happening so far from earth. And yet, from a television point of view, the coverage problem was that, aside from the viewer having to bring his or her personal interest to the event, there was little new visually to provoke fascination among the more blase members of the citizenry.

Well, there was color, of course—for the first time. And that was really something, generating a whole new reaction to our first images of the moon in black-and-white.

But, alas, our senses are pounded with promises of the new and the spectacular so much every day here at home, on earth, that we find it difficult to be thrilled very long with almost anything. I his "Devil's Dictionary," the incomparably skeptical writer Ambrose Bierce offered this definition: "Once: Enough." He was very American.

We go to bed at night with our senses keyed up to the last minute by late-hour television movies or talk shows. We wake up in the morning and flip on the early video news, or a radio that pounds away at us. No wonder there are tranquilizer commercials-advertisements in the various media. The latest movies promise to go beyond any predecessors. The latest books promise the same. The problem is, they often do. So how can any routine, historic moonwalk, not very different from its predecessors, compete successfully to provoke our satiated senses?

At any rate, for those still capable of feeling excitement, the splashdown of Apollo 14 is scheduled for Tuesday afternoon, and video watchers will be able to see the story, as it happens, on the networks.

The public broadcast service's "Net Playhouse," which is in the midst of presenting a six-part series looking at the 1930s through the works of playwrights and filmmakers, has made a major switch in this Thursday's program, which was to have examined Hollywood of that era.

The study of Hollywood in 1930s now has been rescheduled to Feb. 18. And this coming Thursday, "Net Playhouse" will present the 1932 film "Once in a Lifetime," A spoof of the foibles and excesses of Hollywood, based on the George S. Kaufman-Moss Hart play, and featuring Jack Oakie as "a zany supervisor who brings something less than foresight and expertise to a motion picture studio trying to adjust to the advent of talking pictures."

Sex Movie Ban For Filipinos

MANILA (UPI)—The government's board of censors for motion pictures announced Sunday that all sex movies, will be banned from now on.

The ban is designed "to redirect the trends in the production of motion pictures which for the past two years have tragically dealt on one dominant theme alone, that of sex," board chairman Guillermo C. De Vega said.

De Vega said the ban followed a public outcry against sex films, locally known as "bombas" (bombshells), because of their explicit depiction of sex in all forms.

"I find it one of the most gripping, penetrating, and revealing analyses of American society I have yet seen."—Senator George McGovern.

It will have a big audience, and his concept of Consciousnesses I, II and III will affect political thinking and behavior."—John Kenneth Galbraith.

"Reich has gotten hold of something. When his book appeared in condensed form in The New Yorker, it provoked a reader response comparable to the reaction to Rachel Carson's SILENT SPRING and James Baldwin's THE FIRE NEXT TIME. INDEPENDENT-JOURNAL

Judy Brown Loves Teaching.
(more important, she loves to see kids succeed)

Judy Brown is director of the new Marin County Sullivan Reading Center. She's taught in Marin County for several years, and for the past two summers she helped establish reading clinics. Judy Brown knows kids. She understands their learning problems.

"There are lots of reasons children can't read. Once we recognize the problem, we can tackle it. For the most part, the children just need more individualized instruction and they lack confidence in themselves. Well, the Sullivan Reading Program builds confidence as it improves their reading skills."

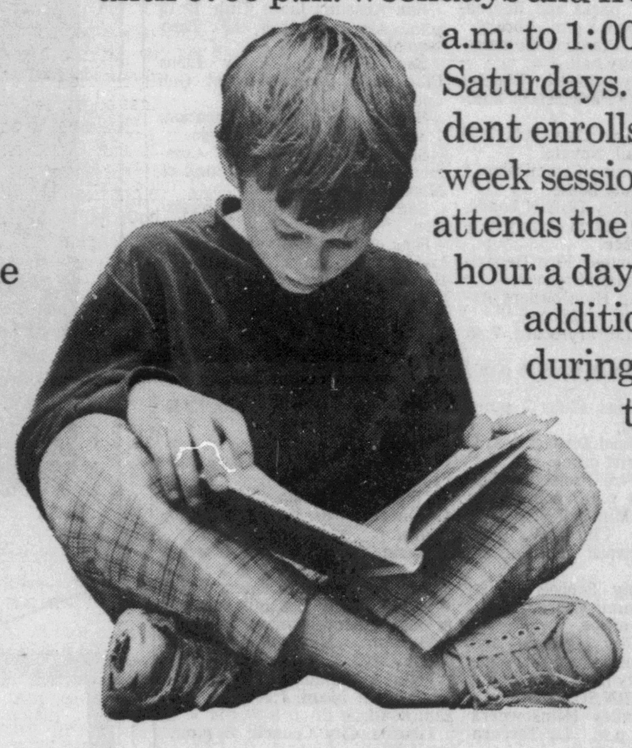
Why Johnny and Ginny and Judy and Jimmy Can Read. The Sullivan Reading Program has been improving children's reading skills for years. In fact, more than five million school children have used nationally acclaimed Sullivan Reading materials to supplement their reading courses in school. Now, Sullivan Reading Centers are being established to expand learning opportunities for children at all levels.

The new Marin County Sullivan Reading Center, fourth to be opened in the Bay Area over the past year, offers personalized reading instruction and self-paced small group instruction for each student. Classes are small — maximum of five students in each class and they are supervised by highly trained reading specialists selected for their genuine concern for each student's personal progress. The step by step Sullivan teaching program is built on this highly personalized relationship between student and teacher.

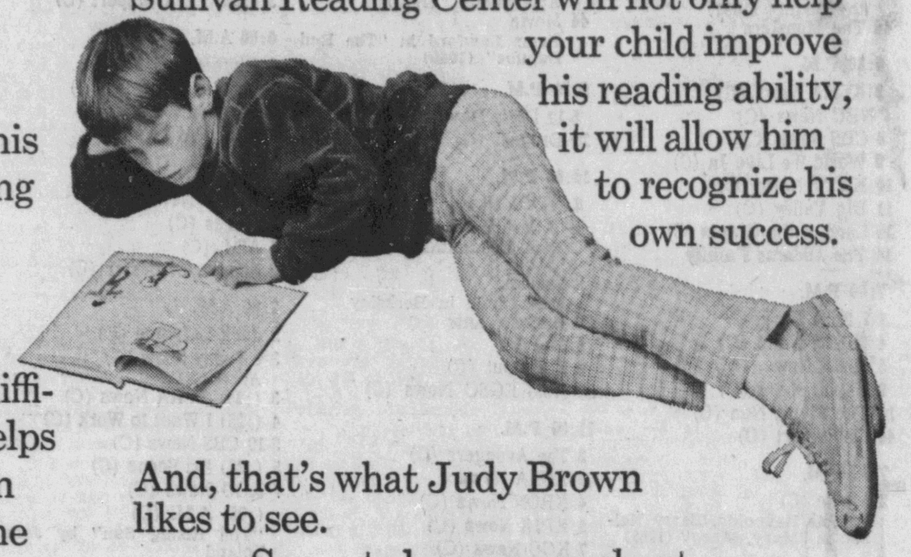
The child builds on his own success. Students with individual reading needs first undergo a series of tests to determine their levels of ability and to provide bench marks for measuring continued progress. Each student works at his own pace, experiencing success and strong reinforcement as his reading improves.

If certain word-sounds are easy for him, he works and progresses through the books rapidly. If he finds a difficult word-sound, his reading specialist helps him immediately. Each page of text is an upward step in his learning process. As he gets answer after answer right, he will learn to read simple words quickly and easily — and with confidence in his own ability.

Convenient times for Mother and Child. The New Marin County Sullivan Reading Center is open from 10:00 a.m. until 6:00 p.m. weekdays and from 9:00 a.m. to 1:00 p.m. on Saturdays. Each student enrolls for a four-week session and attends the Center one hour a day. If he needs additional time during the course to make sufficient progress, he is given the extra time at no additional cost. Initial testing and all materials used by students are also included in the $60 fee for the four-week course.



More than a reading program, the Sullivan Reading Center will not only help your child improve his reading ability, it will allow him to recognize his own success.



And, that's what Judy Brown likes to see.

VICTORY BOUND — The College of Marin Tars broke a two game losing streak Saturday night with a 69-68 victory over Skyline Junior College in Kentfield. At left, Floyd Jackson, (23), a new addition to the Tars, went up for a rebound over teammates Ed Herrnberger (44) and Charlie Flynn (14) and a couple of opponents. At right, Marin's Roosevelt Green hit an easy layup while Steve Kirby of Skyline stood by helplessly, and Jackson watched in the background.

Thrilling Win Snaps Marin's Skid

Joe Smith, the man to whom the College of Marin Tars look when they desperately need a basket, came through with a baseline jump shot five seconds before the final buzzer Saturday night, and Marin defeated Skyline Junior College, 69-68 in Kentfield.

The 15-foot, lefthanded shot, which gave Smith 17 points for the game, redeemed the Tars after they blew a six point halftime lead and trailed by that much in the final three minutes. It also broke a two game losing streak, and set their Camino Norte Conference record at 5-3.

After upsetting Contra Costa Wednesday night, Skyline was sky high going into the game. And on top of their momentum, they had a motive for revenge; the Tars defeated them, 64-58 in the league opening game last month.

"They're a vastly improved team from the last time we played them," said Tar coach John Panagakis. He noted that, oddly enough, the Trojans seemed to play better without 6-foot-8 center Earl Wilson, who lost his eligibility during the semester break.

Behind the torrid shooting of guard Matt Kriletich, who led all scorers with 27 points, the visitors made their second half stand look good right up until Smith's heroic shot. But Roosevelt Green, Marin center, countered Kriletich's performance with 19 points, and manhandled Wilson's heir, Bob Baldasseroni; it has been the trend this season that, as Green goes, so go the Tars, and he went well in this one.

If the Trojans were improved, Marin was too with the addition to the roster of forward Floyd Jackson. Playing his first game since becoming eligible, the former Tamalpais High School star hit for 13 points and gave the Tars added

A Tragic Climax In Drag Racing

POMONA, Calif. (UTI)—The growing sport of drag racing reached a tragic climax at the 11th annual National Hot Rod Association's Winternationals Sunday with the deaths of a driver and the wife of a racer.

The victims were Lew "Sneaky Pete" Robinson, 37, who succumbed early Sunday from injuries he suffered in Saturday's qualifying, and Mrs. Kathy Russell, 21, wife of San Diego driver Dave Russell. She was killed when a car making a test run in the pit area went out of control and struck a parked truck in which she was sitting.

Top honors in the competition went to Don Garlits, Seffner, Fla., who won the top fuel eliminator prize, and Ronnie Sox of Burlington, N.C., who won the pro stock eliminator battle.

Robinson, from Atlanta, suffered his fatal injuries Saturday in a crash attributed to an innovation he had installed on his Ford-powered fuel dragster, an air scoop under the rear wheels.

Robinson had just crossed the finish line at 199.54 miles an hour in his trial when the air scoop tore loose and dug into the asphalt pavement at the Pomona Fair Grounds.

The dragster spun into a wall, burst into flames and bounced 150 yards down the track. Robinson was removed from the wreckage unconscious with massive internal, head, neck and spine injuries. He died six hours later at a hospital.

Mrs. Russell was struck by a rebuilt roadster driven by Ron Bolz, 27, Omaha, Neb., who lost control of his vehicle when the throttle stuck. She was dead on arrival at Pomona Valley Hospital.

Robinson was the 1966 NHRA world champion and was a favorite to capture the fuel dragster competition. The veteran driver had installed the scoop in order to create a vacuum which he felt would give his car more speed.

Robinson was an engineering graduate from Georgia Tech and is survived by his widow, Sandra, and a 4-year-old daughter, Kelly.

Garlits used a revolutionary rear engine Dodge-powered double A fuel dragster to beat five Californians Sunday in match races. In the finals, he merely had to run over the course when the Chrysler-powered dragster of Ken Safford, Van Nuys, Calif., did not start. Garlits won $8,625 for his victory. On his fourth match, Garlits was timed in 6.70 seconds for the quartermile for his fastest run.

Sox captured the pro stock eliminator competition in a 1971 Plymouth Barracuda. In his final run, he defeated Wally Booth of Lincoln Park, Mich., in a 1970 Camaro with an elapsed time of 9.86 seconds and went 141.28 miles an hour.

NFL Investigation Back In Courtroom

CLEVELAND (UPI)—The investigation by a federal grand jury of possible antitrust violations by the National Football League, which began last November, was to resume today after a 25-day recess.

During the recess, some records of the NFL Players Association were subpoenaed by the U.S. Justice Department's Antitrust Division.

Expected to be called as a witness this week is the president of the association, Baltimore Colts tight end John Mackey, who led the players strike at the beginning of last season.

Also expected to be called soon to testify is Cleveland Browns owner Art Modell, who previously offered to appear voluntarily. When the investigation first opened, Modell issued a statement denying the league violated any laws.

Before the investigation was recessed Jan. 14, the jury heard testimony from New York Jets quarterback Joe Namath and New Orleans Saints owner John Mecom Jr. Namath said he was sure the NFL has broken antitrust laws.

Mecom said, however, players who have complained of being "blacklisted" were "marginal performers."

Red Wings Blast Seals, 5-2

OAKLAND (UPI)—Afternoon sunshine doesn't do any more for the California Seals than nighttime darkness.

For the second time this season, the Seals played a Sunday matinee at the Coliseum-Arena and for the second afternoon this season they were beaten. Gordie Howe and the Detroit Red Wings perpetrated the latest dirty deed with a 5-2 victory before 4,744 fans.

Howe, who enters the George Blanda age aura of 43 next month, scored two goals and assisted on another against the Seals. Those were Howe's 780th and 781st goals of a long career on ice skates.

The win broke a five-game winless string for the Red Wings and sent the Seals down to their fifth loss in a row. It also was Detroit's third victory in five games with the Seals this season. One more game remains between the teams.

Meanwhile the Seals were scoring early and late while drowsing through a three-goal middle period for the Red Wings. Bill Hicke of the Seals tallied the game's first goal 2:12 after the opening whistle and Gerry Ehman netted the other Seals goal 23 seconds into the final period.

While the old men were showing their proficiency for Detroit, coach Fred Glover was thinking already of next year and rebuilding.

"Somewhere along the line you have to start a rebuilding program," said Glover. "And that's what next year is going to be for us. We have to start with young players."

In line with this, the Seals peddled ailing veteran defenseman Harry Howell to the Los Angeles Kings on Friday.

Army All-Stars To Take Court

Thirteen All-Americans and a supporting cast that would make any professional scout drool will be on the court at 8 o'clock tonight when the East and West collide in the College All-Star Basketball Classic at Terra Linda High School.

Tickets to tonight's game will go on sale at the gate at 6:15 p.m. Admission is $1.50.

Despite the appearance of 13 All-American and seven players who have already been drafted by the pros, it is the presence of a single player who has yet to complete college that has caused the West to be installed as a slight favorite.

"Darnell Hillman should give the West a slight edge," commented Hal Fischer, coach of the defending champion AAU cagers. "He'll be a cinch super-star with the pros next year."

Hillman has already stated publicly that he will not sign with either league for less than $150,000. The 6-8 center claims that he will return to San Jose State where he has two years eligibility remaining if he does not get his price.

A 7-2 high-jumper, Hillman was the MVP in the 1970 World Games in Iran and was the second draft pick of the Indiana Pacers of the ABA several weeks ago.

Expected to join Hillman in the West's starting lineup are Bruce Sloan (Kansas) and Jim Fox (Drake) at forwards and Art Wilmore (USF) and Don Crenshaw (USC) at guards.

Probable starters for the East are Charlie Greer (North Carolina A & T) at center, Larry Bauer (Illinois) and John Guyton (Mississippi State) at forwards and Jim Oxley (West Point) and Brad Luchini (Marquette) at guards.

Tonight's contest, which is perhaps among the biggest sports events in Marin county history, will be the first basketball game ever played in Marin under international rules. With the use of 30-second clocks and the decrease in foul shooting, local fans can expect a wide-open, high-scoring game.

A 6:30 preliminary game between the league-leading San Rafael High freshmen and the Terra Linda frosh will be played.

Rosters for tonight's East-West College All-Star basketball game at Terra Linda High School:

Ex-San Jose Coach Hired By Marshall U.

SAN JOSE (UPI)—Joseph H. McMullen, former head football coach at San Jose State, has a new post today as athletic director at Marshall University.

McMullen, 46, replaces Charles Kautz who was among 74 Marshall football players, coaches, fans and crewmen killed in a plane crash Nov. 14.

A graduate at Brown, McMullen took over as head football coach at San Jose State in December 1968 and promised to rebuild the football team. The Spartans posted a 2-8 record on the gridiron in 1969 and were a disappointing 1-2 last season when McMullen resigned abruptly and was replaced by Dewey King.

Then nothing was heard from McMullen until the announcement of his appointment at Marshall.

"Marshall is fortunate to gain the services of one who has had extensive experience in college athletics," said Dr. John Barker, president of Marshall.

Tom Shaw Again Beats Former Idol

Arnie Fades In Hawaiian Golf Finish

HONOLULU (UPI) — Tom Shaw slumped into a chair, fanned his sunburned face with his big straw hat and started to describe how it felt to win the Hawaiian Open.

"How do I feel? I don't feel a thing because I'm in a state of shock," he said.

And no wonder.

The smiling swinger from Clackamas County, Ore., had just won $40,000 and beaten his idol, Arnold Palmer, for the second time in three weeks.

Shaw's brilliant victory made him the only double winner on the tour this year and placed him at the top of the money list with $69,752. The earlier win was in the Bing Crosby clambake, where he beat Palmer by two strokes.

At the seaside Waialae Country Club here, Shaw shot rounds of 68, 67, 69 and 69 for a sizzling 15-under par total of 273. Opportunist Miller Barber took second at 274, Georgian DeWitt Weaver was third at 275 and Palmer ended up in a three-way tie at 277 after his most disappointing round of the tournament..

Shaw started the final round tied for the lead with old master Palmer, who he once said was his idol, and Weaver, a strongarmed slugger from Atlanta.

The Oregonian, whose hometown is Milwaukie near Portland, served notice he had come to win by taking the lead with a birdie on the first hole.

He held it until No. 12 when the methodical Weaver knocked in his second straight birdie putt to pull into a tie and then lost the lead to the Georgian by blowing a three-foot par putt on No. 14.

Right there, Shaw said, he thought he had had it.

"I figured that if I could play the remaining holes in one under par I could possibly win or get into a playoff. I started flying the ball at the flag after that bogey. . ."

He flew it to within 15 feet on 16 and 8 feet on 17—and with fans ringing the greens six to eight deep he coolly knocked in both putts to move back in front again.

Weaver then killed his chances by bogeying the short 17th and lost second place to Barber who birdied both 17 and 18. Palmer had a frustrating day on the greens, starting with a couple of bogeys early in the round. He had hoped to win his 56th tour title.

The 41-year-old Palmer finished in a deadlock with Lee Trevino and young tour rookie Hubert Green, who made a run at the championship but threw away his chances when he blasted from one bunker into

THE ONDINE FIRST ACROSS FINISH LINE

RIO DE JANEIRO (UPI)—The Ondine was the first yacht to arrive in the Buenos Aires-Rio regatta Monday.

The winner of the race will be determined only after other boats arrive and handicaps are calculated.

The Ocean Spirit, leading the Capetown-Rio regatta, was reported becalmed Sunday night only 100 miles from Rio and has still not been sighted.

The Ondine beat the record for the Buenos Aires-Rio race which it set three years ago, when it made the race in 7 days and 23 hours. This year it took 7 days and approximately 12 hours.

Marin Youths In Hockey Win

The Marin Amateur Hockey League's Bantam team defeated Sun Valley of Walnut Creek yesterday 3-2 at the Oakland Coliseum, in an exhibition game prior to a National Hockey League game between the California Seals and the Detroit Red Wings. Mike O'Hara scored the winning goal for the Larkspur team.

In a game Saturday at Larkspur, the Marin Pee Wees slaughtered Hayward, 17-0 on three-point hat tricks by Pat McPartlan, Sean Mitchell and Ken Conroy. Scott Anderson registered his fifth shutout of the season.

WARRIORS DUMPED

Lakers Extend Victory Streak

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (UPI)—The streaking Los Angeles Lakers put together a combined scoring effort of 61 points by Jerry West and Happy Hairston Sunday night to sweep to their fifth consecutive victory and a commanding lead in the Pacific Division.

The Lakers dropped the lapsing San Francisco Warriors 119-104 in a contest that remained nip and tuck until two minutes into the third quarter.

Boosting their winning streak to five games in a row, the Lakers ripped off 24 out of 35 points early in the quarter after San Francisco had tied the score at 60 apiece.

Nate Thurmond and company were outrebounded 19-9 in that quarter as the Warriors could make good on no more than six of 17 field goal attempts.

Los Angeles, winner of 13 out of its last 17 games, moves to Cleveland Tuesday night to open a three game road trip.

In Sunday night's contest West collected 37 points and Hairston hit on 24. High for the Warriors was Nate Thurmond with 24 and Jeff Mullins who had 19.

San Francisco fell seven games behind the Lakers in the all-important loss column and has only 21 games remaining on its schedule. The Lakers hold a five-game lead over the Warriors.

Mazeroski, Russell Win Astrojet Golf

PHOENIX, Ariz. (UPI)—Bill Mazeroski's thinking is questionable.

"On a putt, I am always thinking about the ways I'm going to miss it," the Pittsburgh Pirates' second baseman said Sunday after sinking a five-foot putt that gave him and Andy Russell of the Pittsburgh Steelers the $10,000 first prize in a sudden death playoff of the American airlines Astrojet Golf Classic.

Mazeroski's clutch putt, after a drive into the trees and a five-iron shot to the green, gave the 10-handicapper a natural birdie and the team a net eagle on the first playoff hole, the 379-yard, par four, 17th of the Goodyear Golf and Country Club course.

Russell, a linebacker for the Steelers, had put the two into the playoff by getting a par on the regulation 18th for a net bird.

"There is too much time to think in this game," said Mazeroski, admitting he felt the pressure. "In my game and in Andy's you're always moving. This is more nerve wracking."

Mazeroski said he knew his team had to better the par recorded by Del Unser and Ed Podolak before them. "I thought if we didn't make it here, we wouldn't make it," he said.

Defending champions Ron Santo of the Chicago Cubs and George Andrie of the Dallas Cowboys, six strokes off the pace entering the final round, charged into the early lead in the clubhouse with a 54-hole total of 22 under par 194, then watched four other teams tie them.

They finished second, earning $2,500 each, when Santo sank an eight-foot putt on the playoff 18th to edge Hall of Famers Joe DiMaggio and Otto Graham who earned $1,000 each.

Hull Ties Record, Then Suffers Injury

CHICAGO (UPI)—Bobby Hull proved the Chicago Black Hawks could win with him in another record-tying performance, and then the Hawks proved they could win without him.

Midway through the first period of Sunday night's game with the Pittsburgh Penguins, Hull muscled the puck past goalie Les Binkley for the 544th goal of his National Hockey League career.

It was an historical score, because it tied him with the Montreal Canadiens' Maurice "Rocket" Richard for the second-highest number of goals in NHL history.

Years ago Richard's goals stood alone as a number probably out of reach of any other player. But that was before Detroit's Gordie Howe continued on his 20-year career in the league, passed Richard and now with more than 700, has a lead of more than 200 on both Hull and Richard.

Still Hull's performance stood out by the number of goals and by the fact that it was the second straight night he has tied Richard. Only Saturday night he tied Richard's record.

That was his 26th hat trick, attained on the road against Minnesota, and it deadlocked Hull and Richard for the most hat tricks ever in the NHL.

Hull's goal Sunday night was all the Black Hawks got, but it was enough for a 1-0 victory over the Penguins. And the Hawks proved they could win without Hull since in the 6th minute of the second period, Hull crashed into the boards at the end of the rink after taking another shot on Binkley and had to be helped off the ice.

After the crash, Hull slowly worked to his knees and then signaled for help. He had to be helped from the ice and before the game ended, he was on his way to a hospital for X-rays.

Dr. Myron Tremaine said Hull suffered a severe bruise behind his hip on the right side, but there was no fracture. "He could be out a week to 10 days," Tremaine said, "but it's possible he'd be back sooner."

After Hull left the game, goalie Tony Esposito played sensationally to earn his fifth shutout of the season, stopping 28 Pittsburgh shots for the win.

The injury to Hull was the fifth in recent games which put Black Hawk players on the sidelines. Earlier defensemen Bill White, Jerry Korab and Keith Magnuson were hurt, as was wing Lou Angotti. However, coach Billy Reay said White and Magnuson probably could return for the next game.

Blues' Al Arbour Back On The Ice

PHILADELPHIA (UPI)—Al Arbour expects to return to the St. Louis Blues' playing line "as soon as I'm in shape" to aid the team's chances for the Stanley Cup.

Arbour, the Blues' soft spoken coach, asked general manager William "Scotty" Bowman Sunday to return him to the ice to help the team in its stretch drive. Bowman agreed to assume the coaching duties.

"This is something I have been thinking about for a while," Arbour said, "And I feel that you can't play and coach at the same time in the National Hockey League."

"I will return to playing as soon as I'm in shape," Arbour added. "I've been working out with the club for awhile and I don't think it will be long before I return."

Bowman predicted Arbour would rejoin the lineup "by next week."

Arbour, 37, was named coach at the end of last season. He was the Blues' first captain after being chosen by St. Louis in the National Hockey League's expansion draft.

Arbour will resume as captain of the Blues, taking over for Red Berenson, who was traded to Detroit Saturday with Time Ecclestone in exchange for Garry Unger and Wayne Connelly.

Bowman said "The (Berenson) trade was a management decision" and not the only factor in Arbour's request to be relieved of coaching responsibilities. Bowman indicated Arbour felt the team needed him more than ever as a player with Berenson gone.

"Now is the time we must all pull together in our endeavor to bring a Stanley Cup to St. Louis," Bowman said.

The Blues are in second place in the NHL's western division, trailing Chicago.

Unser, of the Washington Senators, and Podolak, of the Kansas City Chiefs, took fourth place and split $2,000. Joe Horlen of the Chicago White Sox and Craig Morton of the Dallas Cowboys—the second round leaders—finished fifth, earning $500 each. Horlen, the best golfer in the tournament playing to a six handicap, watched a 15-foot putt which would have won the tournament hit the back of the cup and bounce out on the regulation 18th. He and Morton, playing in the last foursome, had teed off on the par four final regulation hole with a one-stroke lead but had to settle for a bogey.

Mazeroski has been a winner in three of the five Astrojet Classics. He shared the 1967 and '68 titles with Paul Krause of the Minnesota Vikings. This marked the first time that a team comprised of a professional football player and a professional baseball player from the same city have won the event.

depth where they sorely needed it — under the boards. "He was a little nervous," said Panagakis, "but he really helped us."

Panagakis agreed that the win was a big one for the Kentfield team, whose season record now stands at 20-4. "It got us back on the winning track," he said, "and the next two games (against comparatively weak Canada and Solano) should help us."

While he was pleased with the overall performance, Panagakis pointed out that, as has been the case in nearly all their conference games, the Tars played well at some times and badly at others. But he said, "It showed that at the times we stick to our offensive pattern, we can score."

Sonoma State Quint Suffers 17th Loss

The Sonoma State College Cossacks' fortunes took a turn for the worse — if that's possible — Saturday night when they got whipped by Sacramento State, 109-62 in a Far Western Conference basketball game in Rohnert Park.

The Cossacks, who now have lost every game they have played this year, 17 in number, had not been beaten that badly since the last time they faced the Hornets in the state capital. The score then was 102-64.

The issue Saturday night was never in doubt; in fact, the Hornets got more points in the first half than the Cossacks got in the whole game. At one point, the score was 22-2.

Six players, led by Maurice Woodard, racked up double figures for Sacramento State, which with the win evened its conference record at 3-3. Woodard collected 24 points, followed by Bill Steinetz with 19.

Larry Austin, the lone bright star in the Cossack's lineup, hit for 19.

Frenchman Robs Palmer In Slalom

MUERREN, Switzerland (UPI)—Jean-Noel Augert of France showed his team's come-from-behind spirit to rob America's Tyler Palmer of victory in the men's slalom at the 36th Arlberg-Kandahar ski classic Sunday.

Trailing by 0.11 seconds after the first heat, Augert flashed down the 66-gate course on the second run for a total time of 100.30 and an 0.48-second advantage over Palmer.

Augert's teammate Patrick Russel was third at 102.51 in the race, which counted toward the World Cup.

Russel's third place was also good enough to secure him the Arlberg-Kandahar combined crown, ahead of Italy's Roland Thoeni and Rick Chaffee of the United States.

Following the Kandahar races, the top four racers in World Cup standings are Gustav Thoeni, Italy, with 110 points, Jean-Noel Augert, France, 107 points, Henri Duvillard, France, 103 points, and Patrick Russel, France, 100 points.

WEST COAST BASKETBALL

Oregon Thinking About Upsets

By United Press International

Oregon has its eye on the back door of the throne room.

The hot-shooting Ducks from Eugene find themselves in a perfect position this week to upstage national powers UCLA and Southern California, thereby throwing the Pacific-8 Conference basketball race into a tizzy.

The Los Angeles teams play a pair of games in Oregon this weekend, starting Friday night with UCLA at Oregon and USC at Oregon State. There's just the slightest chance the Bruins might be a little flat after their rousing 64-60 comeback win over USC Saturday night and Oregon could spring an upset.

Behind the shooting of Stan Love and Larry Holliday, the Ducks have shown they can stay on the same court with any other Pac-8 team. They proved it by knocking off highly regarded Oregon State twice, 64-62 and 67-57, over the weekend in a pair of non-conference tussles.

And the Ducks know there will be no better time than Friday night at home to make a run at UCLA and the Pac-8 lead. Currently, the Bruins top the conference with a 5-0 mark and USC is runnerup at 4-1. But right behind are the Ducks at 3-1 and Oregon State at 2-2.

However, coach John Wooden of the Bruins feels his club is improving and they will be ready for Oregon.

"We'll have to avoid a letdown after this game, but we should be up after this victory," said Wooden.

The Bruins came from a nine-point deficit, 59-50, with 9:35 remaining to stun the Trojans. Field goals and a free throw by forward Sidney Wicks, the game's outstanding performer with 24 points and 14 rebounds, plus baskets by Steve Patterson and reserve Terry Schofield helped the Bruins on a 14-1 tear to close out the game of the year.

"I thought Sidney had his best game of the season and I also thought we had our best team play," said Wooden.

Now UCLA and USC, both 16-1 overall, and Marquette (18-0) will launch a battle of the ballots this week for the top national ranking.

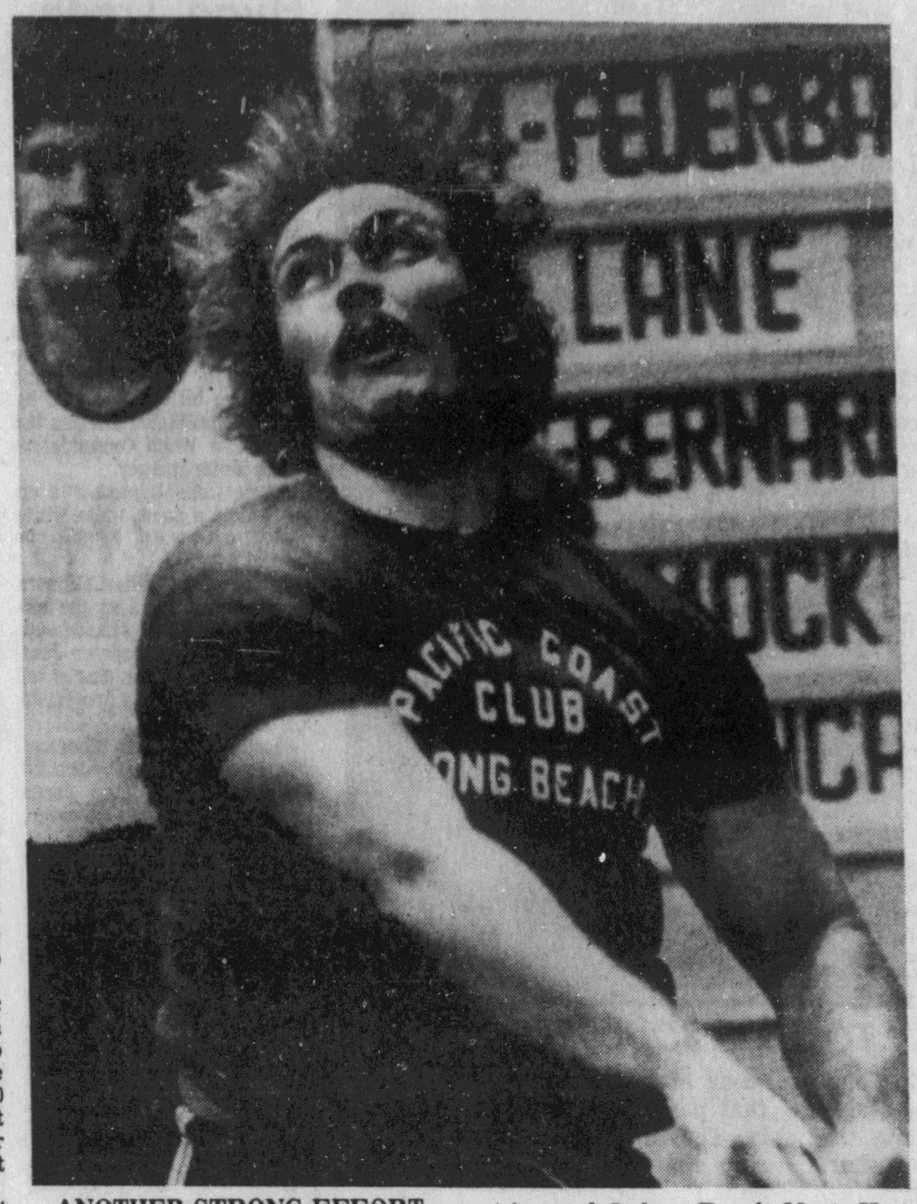
In other Pac-8 games over the weekend, California evened its conference record at 3-3 by defeating Stanford (0-6) 100-84 to sweep the two-game series with the Indians, and Washington State (1-4) won its first conference game by upsetting Washington (2-3) 90-79 with the help of Dan Steward's 24 points.

Cal completed its first series sweep over Stanford in 11 years with a balanced scoring attack which saw every starter hit in double figures. Jackie Ridgle swished 23 and Phil Chenier added 22 for the Bears. Claude Terry paced Stanford with 25 points.

In the West Coast Athletic Conference, Pacific moved a half-game ahead of Loyola into the top spot by downing the Lions 85-66 as the Tigers' 6-10 junior center, John Gianelli, got a slight edge on Loyola center Jim Haderlein in their first meeting of the season.

Gianelli pulled down 24 rebounds, blocked six shots and scored 18 points. However, Haderlein, a 6-8 senior, missed 10 minutes of the second half with a cut chin and finished with 16 points and 10 rebounds.

Surprising San Francisco hit its season high in routing Nevada-Reno 114-82 to remain in third place in the WCAC with a 4-2 mark. Nevada-Las Vegas pulled away in the second half for a 75-64 win over Santa Clara and Pepperdine's Jeff Hendrix scored seven points in the final four minutes to help the Waves edge St. Mary's 82-79.



ANOTHER STRONG EFFORT — Al Feuerbach, who last month set a world shotput record in San Francisco, Saturday broke the meet record at the Seattle Invitational Indoor Track Meet. He tossed the shot 65 feet, four inches three feet, seven inches off his world mark.

8:27.1 CLOCKING

Blistering Two-Mile Run

SEATTLE Wash. (UPI)—The timers' watches said Australia's Kerry Pearce set a new world record for two miles indoor—but the record books will show that he only tied the old mark.

Pearce was timed in 8:27.1 in a magnificent winning effort Saturday night at the Seattle Invitational indoor track meet. This was one-tenth of a second better than the present mark Pearce holds along with George Young of the United States.

But meet officials said it will go into the record books as 8:27.2 because indoor times over 3,000 meters are kept only in fifths of a second.

The run was Pearce's fourth two-mile race in nine days.

A hometown favorite, Doris Brown, had the wind flying through her hair as she unleashed a strong finishing kick to tie the women's 880 indoor mark, 2:07.3, set by Madeline Manning in 1969.

The 8,000 fans at the Seattle Coliseum were hoping to see a world record shot by Al Feuerbach, who set a new mark of 68-11 in San Francisco last month.

But Feuerbach, who had competed in a meet in Texas Friday night, said he was tired and "my coordination wasn't there." His winning toss was 65-4.

Other winners included Sweden's Kjell Isaksson with a pole vault of 17-1 1-4, John Mason with a 4:02.0 in the mile, Reynaldo Brown with a high jump of 7-0 and India's Mohinder Gill with a 52-10 3-4 triple jump.

Bouncy Moore took the long jump at 25-3, Warren Edmundson the 60-yard dash in 6.2, Edesel Garrison the 440 in 49.4, Chuck LaBenz the 880 in 1:53.9 and Poland's Andrzej Badenski the 600-yard run in 1:11.1.

Sims Ties Mark For 60 Yards

NATCHITOCHES, La. (UPI) —Alcorn A&Q's Jerry Sims tied the world record in the 60-yard dash over the weekend with a clocking of 5.9 seconds in the Northwestern Louisiana Invitational Indoor Track Meet.

Sims' time in the Saturday night meet equaled the world mark set by Jack Phillips of Grambling College. The performance earned Sims the outstanding athlete of the meet award.

In team events, Stephen F. Austin won the mile relay in 3:26.4.

Tulane set a new meet record in the two-mile relay with a 7:51.3 clocking.

Homers Pace Alumni

STANFORD (UPI)—Catcher Jim Hibbs belted a two-run homer and Bob Boone followed with a solo shot Saturday to pace the Stanford Alumni to a 4-2 baseball win over the varsity.

Unique Training Method

FORT WORTH, Tex. (UPI)—Tom Von Ruden said Sunday much of the credit for his first sub-four-minute mile should go to Jim Crawford, who was pushing him all the way.

The rest of the credit goes to Von Ruden's unique method of training for the Saturday night race, in which he posted a 3:59.4 mile.

The former Oklahoma State star, now running under Pacific Coast club colors, had won the 1,000-yards at Toronto, Canada, Friday night. He celebrated at a post-race party that lasted until early Saturday morning, then flew to Fort Worth and grabbed a three-hour nap before his Fort Worth Coaches Indoor Games mile run.

"Sometimes being tired will relax you," Von Ruden said, "but it'll catch up with me."

Crawford, a one-time Harding College distance star now teaching school at Richardson, Tef., grabbed the lead at the final lap and was clocked at 4:01.4 in second place.

"Jim really made the pace hot," Von Ruden said. "I didn't have any choice but to go after him."

Von Ruden ran a 59-flat opening quarter, a 2:02.5 half and 3:02.8 three quarters. Then with Crawford and the roar of 6,323 fans pushing him on, he clocked 56.5 seconds in the closing quarter.

He had lost to Sam Bair in Los Angeles as both were clocked at 4:01.1, and was beaten by Mary Liquori in New York when the Villanova ace ran a 4:00.6 to Von Ruden's 4:02.1.

Bob Seagren won the pole vault at 17-0 1-4, but Olympian Dick Fosbury failed to place in the high jump, which was won by Oklahoma freshman Johnny Blakley with a 6-10.

Robert Mitchell of Houston, who had posted a meet record 30.6 in the prelims, won the 300-dash in 31.1; Marvin Mills was credited with beating brother Curtis Mills, the world 440-dash record holder, in the 60-yard dash in 6.2, and the Mills brothers helped Texas A&M win the mile relay in 3:17.5.

Portland Wins Fourth Straight

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

Somebody forgot to tell the Portland Trail Blazers that expansion teams aren't supposed to run up long winning streaks.

The red hot Blazers surged to their fourth consecutive victory Sunday night, downing the Cleveland Cavaliers 112-102. Rookie Geoff Petrie poured in 24 points and had 10 assists and Gary Gregor had 19 points before being banished for throwing a punch to lead the Portland attack.

The victory was the 21st of the season for the Blazers, six more than their closest expansionist, Buffalo.

In other National Basketball Association action Sunday, Los Angeles ripped San Francisco 119-104, Philadelphia blasted New York 127-99, San Diego walloped Seattle 124-107, Boston downed Chicago 104-96, Baltimore edged Detroit 108-105 and Atlanta beat Cincinnati 121-118.

Jerry West scored 37 points and Happy Hairston had 24 as the Lakers soared to their fifth consecutive triumph and opened up a five game lead over the Warriors in the Pacific Division.

Archie Clark poured in 33 points and Billy Cunningham had 28 to help Philadelphia beat New York and move to within 3 1-2 games of the Knicks in the Atlantic Division.

The 76ers ripped off 11 consecutive points in the third quarter to break open the game, taking an 88-62 lead.

Elvin Hayes scored 32 points and Calvin Murphy added 25 as San Diego bombed the Sonics. Hayes sparked a 26-12 outburst in the last quarter that gave the Rockets the victory.

John Havlicek scored 32 points including a 30-foot jump shot and two free throws in the final seconds to help the Celtics beat Chicago. The Bulls pulled to within two points before Havlicek hit his basket and free throws to protect the lead.

Earl Monroe'e 25-point performance helped the Bullets beat Detroit and Lou Hudson's 27-point effort lifted Atlanta over the Royals.

GIANT MOON HAUL

Apollo 14 Speeding To Earth's Gravity

SPACE CENTER, Houston (UPI)—Apollo 14's sleepy astronauts sped into the welcome gravity of the "shimmering crescent" earth today with a bonus that could hasten the day when men in space work for men on the ground.

Alan B. Shepard, Edgar D. Mitchell and Stuart A. Roosa passed a point 161,512 miles in space where earth's gravitation pull becomes stronger than the moon's and began accelerating toward their South Pacific splashdown about 4 p.m. EST, Tuesday.

Enroute home the moon pilots issued a plea for world peace and understanding and voiced the hope their space mission could contribute toward the "solving of the problems of the world."

They carried a record haul of 109 pounds of rocks and soil collected from the moon's Fra Mauro Valley Friday and Saturday. Scientists hope some of their samples are fossil chunks of the primitive lunar crust.

With the moon shrinking behind them, Shepard and his crew turned their attention to earth Sunday night with a television demonstration of ways to use space to manufacture exotic materials.

They awoke "grumbling" today after a 10-hour rest period, but ground communicator Fred W. Haise told them the "banker's hours" had to end so they'd be back on schedule for Tuesday splashdown maneuvers. The astronauts reported they had slept for only four hours.

Mitchell said they were "very comfortable" as they began their last day in space. When told chilly temperatures prevailed at the Manned Spacecraft Center, Mitchell asked: "What's wrong? Did they move Houston to the North Pole?"

Ground controllers still didn't know which side of the international dateline Apollo 14 would be on when it splashes into the warm, gentle waters of the South Pacific. It could land on either the Tuesday or Wednesday side of the line.

It will make little difference to the astronauts, however, since the recovery carrier will head toward American Samoa where it will still be Tuesday. They will return to Houston early Friday.

During their telecast, the pilots carried out four experiments which could lead to space manufacture of exotic materials and Shepard said they hoped spaceflight would "go a long way toward solving the problems of the world, problems of understanding between people of different nations."

"We are reminded, however, as we look at that shimmering crescent tonight—which is the earth on our way back—that there is still fighting going on."

Saying he spoke for the whole crew, America's space pioneer added:

"The three of us all have acquaintances, friends and even relatives in Vietnam. We are reminded that some of the people, some of the men who have gone to Vietnam have not returned and are still held there, listed as missing in action, or as prisoners of war.

"It is our wish tonight that we can in some way contribute through our effort through the space program to promote a better understanding and peace throughout the world and help to rectify the situations which still exist."

The astronauts, now returning to normal work schedules for the first time since the launch Jan. 31, began a 10-hour sleep period early today. Before turning in, the spacemen broadcast some music on tapes in their cabin.

"Sounds like you're having a party up there," said ground communicator Gordon Fullerton.

"That's the only ingredient we have for a party," Mitchell replied.

Today was one of rest for the pilots before the start of final earth-entry preparations early Tuesday. One event on their schedule was a televised question and answer session with newsmen at 6:30 p.m. EST.

Nixon: Pay For Polluting

WASHINGTON (UPI) —President Nixon proposed today a broad, stringent air and water pollution control program and a national land use policy as a major federal commitment to win the battle for a better environment.

In an 18-page message to Congress, Nixon asked for tough controls to combat air and water pollutants by imposing charges on sulphur oxides and a tax on lead in gasoline to supplement present regulatory controls.

He also called for:

—More effective control of water pollution through a $12 billion standard-setting national program.

— Comprehensive improvement in pesticide control authority.

—A federal program to encourage re-cycling of paper.

—Regulation of toxic substances and noise pollution.

—Further legislation to restrict ocean dumping.

—A greatly expanded open space and recreation program to bring parks to the people in urban areas.

—Advance public agency approval of power plant sites and transmission line routes.

—Regulation of environmental effects of surface and underground mining.

In his message, Nixon said "there can be no doubt of our growing national commitment to find solutions" to the destruction of the environment.

"The program I am proposing today will require some adjustments by government at all levels, by our industrial and business community, and by the public in order to meet this national commitment," he said.

Nixon signaled his intention to intensify the anti-pollution fight in his State of the Union and budget messages.

Sen. Edmund S. Muskie of Maine, considered the current front-runner among possible Democratic presidential candidates for 1972, introduced a package of environmental proposals last week.

Nixon said his proposals would be costly, then added: "But as we strive to expand our national effort, we must also keep in mind the greater cost of not pressing ahead.

"The battle for a better environment can be won," he told Congress, "and we are winning it. With the program I am outlining in this message we can obtain new victories and prevent problems from reaching the crisis stage."

The President cited news of more widespread mercury pollution, smog alerts last summer in much of the east and repeated episodes of ocean dumping and oil spills.

He commented: "No part of the United States has been free from (environmental problems) and all levels of government — federal, state and local —have joined in the search for solutions.

Nixon said at another point: "We must have action to meet the needs of today if we would have the kind of environment the nation demands for tomorrow." Nixon stressed that sulphur oxides —emanating in large part from industrial plants —are among the most damaging air pollutants and have been linked to incidents of such diseases as bronchitis and lung cancer.

"In terms of damage to human health, vegetation and property, sulphur oxide emis-

Assault Begins On Ho Chi Minh Trail

U.S. Aids Attack By Air

SAIGON (UPI) — U.S. helicopter gunships and fighter-bombers led elements of a 20,000-man South Vietnamese force into Laos today in a long-awaited offensive against the North Vietnamese Ho Chi Minh supply trail and bases. Heavy groundfire brought down six U.S. helicopters, killing two crewmen.

First reports indicated that Communist forces dug into the hills in Laos just across the border from the reactivated U.S. base at Khe Sanh were putting up stiff resistance against the Allied thrust.

"We took so much fire, I couldn't believe it," said Capt. Jasper Sander, 31, of Shrewsbury, Mass., a helicopter pilot who was shot down and made it back to Khe Sanh in South Vietnam's northwest corner. "There were a lot of Communists all over the place."

No U.S. ground troops took part in the cross-border drive in obedience to Congressional strictures but a 9,000-man American force was supporting the campaign from positions along the border. The administration has pledged that unlimited U.S. airpower will be used to protect American lives.

Field reprots said 5,000 South Vietnamese paratroopers and tank troops ere involved in the drive into Laos. The paratroopers were reported to have been flown into five landing zones as far as 12 miles inside Laos in scores of U.S. Army UH1 helicopters. South Vietnamese armored cavalry-men crossed the Xe Don River beginning at 7 a.m. three hours before the thrust was officially announced, field reports said.

There were conflicting reports on the use of American artillery in support of the campaign. U.S. headquarters in Saigon acknowledged American helicopter and tactical air support but denied that U.S. artillerymen had fired into Laos. But a U.S. military spokesman in the field said the first American artillery shell crashed into Laos at 8:18 a.m. today. Two hours later, UPI correspondents Kenneth J. Braddick and Robert E. Sullivan reported seeing U.S. 175mm guns and eight-inch howitzers opening up on positions in Laos.

Laos, technically neutral, immediately protested the campaign, although Premier Souvanna Phouma has tacitly approved American air operations against the Ho Chi Minh supply trail which runs from North Vietnam through eastern Laos into South Vietnam and Cambodia.

The South Vietnamese government said the Laos campaign was fully justified because North Vietnamese troops were using bases in Laos to launch attacks against South Vietnam. A Saigon announcement said the operation was limited "in time as well as in space," and President Nguyen Van Thieu said all South Vietnamese troops would "withdraw completely" when they complete the job of "disrupting the supply and infiltration network of Communist North Vietnamese troops" in Laos.

The Soviet Union denounced the offensive as "a dangerous new stage" of U.S. involvement in Indochina which has opened "a new front of war."

The Viet Cong issued a similar denunciation and charged that troops from Laos and Thailand were joining the invasion.

Britain said the drive was

LAOS ASSAULT — This newsmap shows the thrust of a South Vietnamese attack across the border into Laos today aimed at cutting the Ho Chi Minh Trail which funnels arms and ammunition to an estimated 70,000 North Vietnamese troops in the neutral country. U.S. helicopters and fighter-bombers supported the South Vietnamese strike, aimed principally at the Laotian town of Tchepone.

Pentagon's Bureaucracy Is Attacked

WASHINGTON (UPI) —A General Accounting Office (GAO) study of Defense Department management says indecisiveness and layer upon layer of bureaucracy have cost the taxpayer endless millions as the military buys weapons.

The study covered weapons developed during the 1960s and concluded that while the original estimates said they would cost $83 billion, they were now up to $117 billion.

That 40 per cent increase in the 1960s was an improvement over cost overruns in the 1950s when, according to a study by two Harvard Business School researchers, final costs more than doubled original estimates. Figures for both decades included inflation costs as well as alleged management bungles.

The new study by the GAO, congressional watchdog agency, had some praise for the department. For example, it said money was being saved because the armed services were now telling manufacturers to demonstrate that a weapon worked first rather than ordering billions of dollars in goods that worked only on paper.

The management study, still in draft form, is expected to be released in about a month. GAO officials said the report to Congress scored the Defense Department for alleged duplication of effort, indecisiveness and for compounding its own problems with countless layers of bureaucracy.

They pointed out that in a management study these are the problems usually uncovered and added that Pentagon management was improving.

Soviets Awaken Robot On Moon

MOSCOW (UPI)—The Lunokhod One moon robot has awakened from two weeks of mechanical hibernation and begun prowling through the craters of the Sea of Rains, the Soviets said today.

The Tass News Agency announcement said the eight-wheeled buggy was reactivated by space controllers Sunday, one day after the Apollo 14 astronauts blasted off from their landing site far to the south.

"During the session, the moon vehicle covered 323 meters (353 yards) in a northerly direction, moving on a surface... with craters from 30 to 40 meters in diameter," Tass said.

"During the second half of the communications session, the Lunokhod entered an area of a big crater where there were many boulders of different sizes," it said.

During the five-hour session, Tass said, Lunokhod also photographed its delivery ship, Luna 17, which brought it to the moon last Nov. 17, and took pictures of the sun.

The Soviets announced Friday night, while Alan B. Shepard and Edgar D. Mitchell were taking their first walk on the moon, that Lunokhod was getting set for another period of

Juvenile Court Bar To Over-18s Urged

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Legislation limiting the criminal jurisdiction of juvenile courts to persons under 18 years old was proposed today by Assemblyman Frank Murphy.

The Santa Cruz Republican, former chairman of the Criminal Justice Committee, released a committee report saying that presently "children of the white middle class" involved in drug cases benefit most from the law allowing judges to send suspects aged 18 to 20 to Juvenile Court.

His proposal would also repeal a part of the law allowing teenaged runaways and truants to be jailed with murderers and armed robbers.

"Under this bill the courts will retain jurisdiction over such minors but they will have to rely more on social resources and less on penal controls when trying to cope with their problems," Murphy said.

The committee report said that in cases where the court had the power to refer a criminal suspect either to juvenile authorities or to adult court "the greatest proportion" of the cases sent to juvenile court involved minors over 18 arrested for drug abuse.

"In effect, the Juvenile Court is being used to avoid what many people consider to be the unnecessarily harsh consequences of our drug laws," it said.

The document went on to point out that many young drug suspects have a "middle class background" and no serious earlier record. "Since these are more likely to be white middle class children it is consequently the children of the white middle class who benefit most from the court's good intentions."

Protest At Stanford To Laos Action

STANFORD (UPI)—Roving bands of young people smashed windows and hurled rocks at Stanford campus police Sunday night following a mass rally to protest the allied invasion of Laos.

New left activist Tom Hayden, one of the "Chicago Seven" riot conspiracy defendants, addressed 600 young people at Dinkelspeil Auditorium shortly before some 200 began their rampage across the campus.

"Roving groups are breaking windows at the Hoover Institution annex, the Graduate School of Business, the School of Engineering and administrative offices," a university spokesman reported from campus police headquarters.

"It's pretty much a repetition of what happened here after the Cambodian invasion," he said, "but apparently much less serious. We don't think we'll have to call in outside help."

However, at least a busload of Santa Clara County deputies were reported dispatched to the campus and police from Palo Alto and San Jose were on standby.

"We don't know who the leadership is," the spokesman said. "there's a hard core of 20 to 25 people moving from point to point, some of them wearing ski masks. Campus police are reporting on their movement and taking photographs."

The window-smashing started at 8:30 p.m., after the mass rally began to break up.

No arrests or injuries were reported.

Flying rocks broke windows in two campus police squad car, one of which was flashing a spot light on demonstrators and several fights broke out between "trashers" and members of the Free Campus Movement.

A false warning that a computer building would be bombed proved unfounded.

Two arson attempts at destroying buildings on the Stanford campus occurred during a 24-hour period over the weekend.

A fire bomb was hurled into the first floor of the campus athletics building Saturday night. The structure houses ROTC classrooms on the second floor.

CONGRESS REACTS

Critics Protest Laotian Invasion

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The United States insisted today that the American-supported movement of South Vietnamese foreces into Laos was not a widening of the Indochina war. But Sen. Frank Church called it "the opening of the third front."

The State Department issued a lengthy statement at midmorning to justify the Laotian operation. The statement stressed what the department said was the limited nature of the operation and the limited area involved as well as reiterated that no American ground forces would be used.

But Church, D-Idaho, a cosponsor of legislation that banned use of U. S. troops in Cambodia, said it was enlargement of the war. Sen. Harold E. Hughes, D-Iowa, said "drastic means" were needed to end all U. S. involvement in Indochina.

Sen. John Sherman Cooper, R-Ky., the other main sponsor of the Cooper-Church amendment on limiting the U. S. role in Iambodia, said that if the Laotian operation was "limited to stopping supplies and men" from moving from North Vietnam down the Ho Chi Minh Trail, he would not object.

The State Department, in its statement, emphasized that "the operation will be a limited one both as to time and area."

The statement said: "The principal new factor is the South Vietnamese forces will move in against the enemy on the ground to deny him sanctuaries and to disrupt the main artery of supplies he has been able to use so effectively against the American and South Vietnamese forces in the past."

It said the action would be confined entirely to that portion of Laos between the 16th and 17th parallels, where it said major Communist concentrations were located.

Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R-N. Y., criticized the Laotian operation and said: "The only answer is a U. S. policy to withdraw from Vietnam without regard to Vietnamization," President Nixon's program for turning the burden of the war over to the South Vietnam.

A group of peace organizations made an appeal for demonstrations Wednesday against the U. S. involvement. A spokesman said demonstrations had been scheduled for New York, Washington, Chicago, Boston, Santa Barbara, Calif., and Kent State College in Ohio.

Sen. George Aiken, R-Vt., said the latest action "was not unexpected. The rumors indicated the movement would come. They've (administration) assured me time and again that no (U.S.) ground troops would cross the border."

Aiken said he hoped the move "will help us with the withdrawal program."

The White House also declined to comment early today on the border crossing, referring all inquiries to the Defense Department.

Assistant Defense Secretary Daniel Z. Henkin said, "I want to emphasize that no U. S. ground combat personnel or advisers will be involved."

Bond Conversion Impractical Now

By ROGER E. SPEAR

Q. I hold Gulf & Western 5½ per cent convertible debentures as a result of their take-over of Associates Investment. It is my understanding that my 9 bonds are convertible into 1.50 common, now trading near 23½. If I convert now, my $9,000 in bonds would be worth only $3,525. Furthermore my income would be reduced from $495 to $75 annually. Is my figuring correct? What would you advise me to do? — N.W.

A. Although the face value of your holding is $9,000, at current trading levels you would realize only $5,940 from the sale of these debentures at this time. A convertible issue commonly sells at a premium over its conversion value; however, the unusually wide premium in this case also reflects the support level provided by bond interest.

Conglomerates have long been in the "doghouse," although investor interest in the group appears to be accelerating. Gulf & Western shares have moved up sharply since the May, 1970, low of 9½. Further recovery appears possible in light of the improvement being experienced by most of the company's operating groups.

For you as a bondholder, improved earnings not only add to your margin of security but could also lift bond trading levels. I see no jurisdiction for conversion at this time.

Q. I have been holding shares of United Science Fund for 9 years, hoping for income gains. This goal has not been met. Should I dispose of shares; or does the future look better? — L.H.

A. United Science is a specialized fund whose primary investment objective is long-term growth of capital, not income, which you desire. In fact, over the past nine years the average annual yield on your fund has been only 1.3 per cent —a rather modest return on your cpaital.

United Science's performance as a growth fund has been about average. However, since it does not meet your investment needs, sale is justified for purchase of either a high-yielding stock or an income fund such as Investors Selective or Channing Income.

Pan Am Losses: $48 Million

NEW YORK (UPI) — Pan American World Airways reported a $48,032,000 loss for 1970, compared with a $25,888,000 loss in 1969. The fourth quarter loss was $46,762,000, compared with a loss of $18,932,000 in the final 1969 period.

The loss for all of 1970 is stated after payments totaling $8,025,000 under an airline mutual assistance agreement, compared with receipts amounting to $1,688,000 in 1969.

Pan Am's operating revenues last year rose by 7.7 per cent to $1,125,989,000 from $1,045,047,000 in 1969.

BIG ENOUGH TO STOP BOULDERS

At the Northgate Mine in County Tipperary, Ireland, massive chains are used to regulate the flow of ore being fed to a crusher. The links' contour and the chains' flexibility make them resist the wear of tons of falling boulders that pass through this chute daily. They are strong enough to stop the flow of boulders completely

Huge Trade Of Shares Sets Record

NEW YORK (UPI) —Stocks were mixed on heavy turnover through the first two hours today.

Helping swell volume was an early 3,248,000-share block of Allis Chalmers changing hands at 18, up 5-8. The block, the biggest in New York Stock Exchange history, was sold by White Consolidated to clear the way for a White Consolidated-White Motor merger.

White Consolidated was up more than a point, while White Motor showed a gain of around 2 3-4.

In value, the Allis Chalmers block ranked no. 2 on the all-time high list at $58,464,000, topped only by a trade on June 13, 1968 of 730,312 shares of American Standard preferred "A" at $76,135,026.

Shortly before noon, advances were leading declines by around 150 issues. The Dow Jones industrial average, however, was off more than a point.

Prices advanced in active trading on the American Stock Exchange.

Sherman Clay Store Is Opening Another Shop, The Guitar Shack

Increased sales and the need for room to expand at the Sherman Clay store at Fourth and C streets has resulted in this company moving its musical instrument department to another location one block away and across the street in downtown San Rafael.

Under the management of Robert Longenecker of Petaluma, who has been with the store about a year, this department will be known as the Guitar Shack, at 1408 Fourth Street.

Sherman Clay, which now carries three makes of organs Hammond, Kimball and Conn — and has added the Japanese-manufactured Kawai piano to its lines, had sales last month equal to 50 per cent of its sales for the entire year of 1964, according to Margo Margossian. That was the year he took over as San Rafael manager, when the store was on C Street.

A NEW SURPLUS STORE, called Mike's Surplus, will open Wednesday at 70-N Woodland Avenue, San Rafael.

This will be a division of a recently formed corporation, West Coast Purchasing Contractors, Inc., headed by Michael F. Ross of San Rafael.

Ross has been in the business of buying and selling surplus materials and his corporation is described as "buying anything for anybody." It too will be headquartered at the Woodland Avenue address.

The store will handle materials acquired in comparatively small quantities or as "one of a kind" — hardware, tools, marine supplies, automotive and mechanical equipment. Hours will be from Mondays through Saturdays from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m.

GUNNAR ANDERSEN of Mill Valley has opened his own architectural office at 812 Howard Street, San Francisco. Since 1962 he has been a principal in the architectural firm of Andersen and Palmer, which was dissolved at the end of last year.

GLENN CHEETHAM of San Rafael has been assigned by Del Monte Corp. as international sales administrator for the Orient, southeast Asia and the Pacific Islands. He was previously a unit supervisor in foreign sales accounting, having worked his way up from a business trainee when he joined Del Monte in 1966. He will continue to be headquartered at the San Francisco office.

DEAN P. POLYZOIS of Greenbrae has been promoted to assistant manager of Wells Fargo Bank's purchasing and supply department in San Francisco. Formerly purchasing officer, he has been in that department since 1964 when he joined the bank with 13 years previous business experience.

SAN RAFAEL OFFICE of Laurentide Finance Corp. is offering a new booklet, "Planning Your Financial Future," dealing with establishing a family budget, how consumer finance companies operate, truth in lending and outlines of three financial programs offered by Budget.

REAL ESTATE: FRANK HOWARD ALLEN AND CO. Newsletter reports a sudden return of the "high priced buyer" since the first of the year and predicts a record year for 1971.

Grubb and Ellis Co. volume for 1970 is recorded as being 32 per cent over 1969 sales and more than double the 1968 total.

Polly Moore of Ross has joined the sales staff of Kay Noah and Associates, Realtor in Tiburon. She was formerly with Gumps in San Francisco and has had an extensive background in personnel and decorating.

Lufthansa Personnel End Strike

FRANKFURT, Germany (UPI)—Ground personnel who crippled West Germany's Lufthansa airline with a 10-day work stoppage returned to their jobs today.

A Lufthansa spokesman said technicians servicing the company's air fleet were at full strength from midnight and white collar workers who also took part in the stoppage were back at their desks and counters.

Strikers from the airline's subsidiary, Lufthansa Services GMBH, which takes care of other airlines using West German airports as well as catering for Lufthansa passengers, also were back at work.

The Lufthansa spokesman said he expected the airline to be back to normal by Wednesday.

He said 72.6 per cent of striking workers organized with the public transport services union in a poll conducted Saturday and Sunday voted for accepting the airline's offer for a 15 per cent pay boost to its 15,000 ground personnel retroactive to last Nov. 1.

Federal Transport Minister Georg Leber told the airline ground workers their 25 per cent pay hike demands were "impossibly high."

WIRE NEWS BRIEFS From Everywhere

Korean Takeover

SEOUL (UPI)—U.S. combat troops will not be manning the Korean truce front beyond June and the defense of the entire border will be left to South Korean forces, President Park Chung-Hee said today.

Park issued a special statement on the recently concluded negotiations between the United States and South Korea on the modernization of the Korean armed forces and reduction by 20,000 of the 64,000 U.S. troops in Korea.

Agnew Change Seen

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (UPI)—Gov. William G. Milliken, who disagreed frequently with Vice President Spiro T. Agnew during the 1970 campaign, believes "the vice president is already beginning to move in different directions."

"He's the President's primary advocate for revenue sharing and he's going to be doing a great deal of travelling abroad," Milliken said Sunday on a taped broadcast of "The Governor's Report" on WOOD-TV. "Yes, I think we'll see quite a different picture of the vice president."

However, Milliken said talk about whether Agnew would be picked as the vice presidential candidate in 1972 should wait until 1972.

Gomulka Bounced

WARSAW (UPI)—The Central Committee of Poland's Communist party criticized former party leader Wladyslaw Gomulka for "serious mistakes" Sunday and dropped him from its rolls.

The demotion of four of Gomulka's chief lieutenants was also announced.

Gomulka, 65, has deen under treatment for circulatory troubles and loss of vision since he was succeeded as party chief by Edward Gierek after last December's riots in which 45 were killed. The committee took note of his poor health in announcing the suspension.

Press Freedom Bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Rep. Edwin B. Forsythe, R-N. J., announced today he was introducing legislation to bar federal officials from forcing newsmen to disclose confidential information or sources of information in most cases.

The exceptions would be cases involving threats to national security and certain defamation proceedings, Forsythe said.

Forsythe said official attempts to obtain the notes, unedited film and tapes of newspaper and broadcast reporters "represent a serious threat to freedom of the press and the time-honored rights to newsmen to protect confidential sources."

Women Get Vote

ZURICH (UPI)—Switzerland has become the last major European country to grant women the right to vote.

"It was high time," said a 30-year-old housewife in commenting on the "women's liberation" national referendum Sunday in which almost a million men voted 2 to 1 in favor of female suffrage. "I always was in favor but my husband still voted against it."

The constitutional amendment also gives women the right to hold federal offices.

Sees Setback

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, says the Nixon administration request for a defense budget increase is a setback for domestic needs.

Muskie said Sunday President Nixon was using money saved from Vietnam cutbacks to finance new military projects.

The $229.2 billion budget sent to Congress last month includes a $1 billion increase in defense spending.

Pope On Apollo

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — Pope Paul VI, one of the most vocal fans of the astronauts, sees the Apollo 14 moon mission as part of man's search to know himself and to know God.

The poniff has received all the astronauts who have visited the Vatican. He has praised them, blessed them, given them medals and discussed all their flights during his public appearances.

Sunday he devoted most of his speech during his traditional noontime blessing to pilgrims and tourists to the latest lunar landing which he said "once again fills us with astonishment and admiration "for the achievements of man.

Apollo Prayer

WASHINGTON (UPI)—President Nixon attended worship services at the White House Sunday devoted to prayers for the safe return of the Apollo 14 astronauts.

Nixon said the service was "quiet, eloquent and timely." Dr. Jacob A. O. Preus, president of the Missouri Synod of the Lutheran Church, delivered a sermon while evangelist Billy Graham sat among the congregation.

CANDLELIGHT — Caught in the lobby of the Barclay Hotel by a power blackout in New York City, this man appears uncertain about what he should do next. Candles were the only source of light in this hotel and many other mid-Manhattan buildings and offices when an explosion in a generator shut off power late last night.

Heavy Snow, Rains Plague East; Tornado Injures 250 In Florida

By United Press International

New York City police called for boats to rescue stranded motorists from flooded expressways, heavy snow piled up in upstate New York and New England and up to four inches of snow caused hazardous driving in parts of the southeast today as winter weather continued to plague the nation.

The upper midwest was so cold even the Detroit Zoo's polar bears didn't like it.

The national weather service posted heavy snow warnings for a large area from western Massachusetts and southern and western New York south to Virginia. By early today Binghampton and Albany, N.Y., each reported seven inches of new snow and several other upstate cities had as much as four inches.

Travelers warnings were posted as far south as the gulf coast states.

New York City and Long Island had heavy rains. As much as four feet of water stood in some expressways in the area and police called for small boats to rescue drivers on the Southern State Parkway. Parts of the Belt Parkway and the Harlem River Drive also were closed because of high water. The national weather service issued flash flood warnings for an area from New Jersey to South Carolina.

A tornado spawned by the same frontal system ripped through Gulf Breeze, Fla., Sunday, destroying an apartment complex and injuring 250 persons.

"I looked out the window and saw things were flying by real fast," said Terris Neuman, 19. "It sounded like a train coming, it was rumbling and rumbling and your ears kept pressing."

Damage from the twister was estimated as high as $5 million. There were no fatalities.

Snowfall Sunday prompted travelers warnings for parts of 12 states from northeast New Mexico across the Texas Panhandle and into Ohio and Maryland.

Blackout Darkens City, Leaving Chaos, Frolics

NEW YORK (UPI)—A large area of midtown Manhattan went dark Sunday night when electric power failures blacked out blocks of office buildings, disrupted radio and television broadcasts and affected subway and train service.

Four large neighborhoods were blacked out for several hours, Broadway's "Great White Way" flickered dimly, traffic was snarled and hundreds of extra police were called out in a near-freezing rain to unravel the chaos.

The power system was crippled from 7:12 p.m. EST until 11:42 p.m., when the last of the blacked-out area was restored to service. But when it was over, New Yorkers sighed with relief and compared their difficulties favorably with those caused by the Great Northeast Blackout of 1965. Impromptu festivities, mostly candlelit, sprang up in bars and other spots—as unlikely as the top of the Empire State Building—where people were stranded.

There were no injuries attributable to Sunday's blackout reported.

The Consolidated Edison Co., which supplies electricity to all of the city and some suburbs, said the situation was caused by a massive short-circuit in a 138,000-volt transformer at its Waterside generating station, located on the East River just south of the United Nations.

The short-circuit, a deafening, circuit-snapping crack described as an explosion by workers at the plant, enacted automatic switching equipment that immediately cut off power to two "grids" distributing electricity to the Times Square area and Greeley Square.

The problem was instantly apparent to millions of persons throughout the metropolitan area when their television sets went blank. The Empire State Building, which has transmitting antennas for nine television stations and 13 FM radio stations atop its 1,250-foot tower, was in the first area affected.

Because their television sets were not operating, many people in other parts of the city which had normal electricity thought their power was reduced or cut. Rumors about the extent of the blackout flew about the city.

Some people in the city found time to be jolly amid their difficulties. A group of local government officials from upstate New York gathered around a piano hotel lobby singing songs such as "The Sidewalks of New York." Many other knots of people weathered the blackout — and the cold, driving rain outside — in bars lit only by candles.

Mrs. John Richter of Pomfort, N.Y., was playing the piano in the cavernous lobby of the Commodore Hotel, accompanying herself for "Shine On, Harvest Moon" on a kazoo. Three candles threw light on the keyboard. "There's really no point in just sitting around in the dark, now is there?" Mrs. Richter asked.

When the Empire State Building's power went out, 40 tourists who were looking out over the city from the 86th-floor observation deck were stranded. That fact was verified by two policemen and a reporter who walked up all 86 flights of stairs. They completed the climb in 48 minutes, panting for breath, then walked up 16 more flights to the 102nd floor, where 25 people were trapped. "They're going to send us to the psycho ward," said Patrolman Harry Goulding.

The tourists, although astonished at the climbers' arrival, said they were not worried about their plight. An elderly woman from Ireland gave her opinion on the cause of the blackout —"If people wouldn't make toast, there'd be no power trouble." A couple necked in the corner.

But the problems in midtown Manhattan were severe. Office buildings went dark and those traffic lights that stayed lit were jammed, snarling the traffic and restricting the travel of emergency vehicles. Elevators were inoperative and a section of the subway system was shut down. Grand Central Terminal was darkened.

British Troops, Snipers Exchange Fire In Belfast

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI)—British troops fought gun battles with snipers in Belfast's streets today. To the south, explosions rocked two border stations.

An army spokesman said one soldier was slightly wounded shortly after midnight when a burst of seven rounds was fired at a military patrol. He returned the fire, hitting one and possibly two civilians.

Shortly after the incident on the Roman Catholic Falls Road area, troops intercepted a civilian being taken by ambulance to a hospital, the spokesman said.

Explosions damaged two customs posts near the border town of Newry, the spokesman said. At one post, two men with guns entered the building and ordered the customs men out moments before the explosion.

(In Dublin, an explosion early today wrecked a monument to the Irish patriot Wolfe Tone in St. Stephens Green opposite the Shelbourne Hotel. Police said all that remained of the hollow metal structure were two stumps representing Tone's boots.)

The spokesman said troops early today found the body of a man they believed to be an informer who had been executed by the outlawed Irish Republican Army (IRA), which advocates union of north and south. The man, found on Belfast's Ballyhill Road, had been shot through the mouth, the traditional method of IRA execution, he said.

The victim's pockets were stuffed with tiny Irish Republican flags.

Scattered incidents continued throughout Sunday night and into the early morning hours. In one incident, troops arrested four young girls who had been throwing stones, the army spokesman said.

Five children —all under age 12 —were among those arrested during Sunday's violence, he said.

Thieves Hit Guggenheim Collection

VENICE, Italy (UPI)—Police said today at least 15 paintings were stolen from the $12.8 million collection of Peggy Guggenheim Friday in what may have been the biggest art theft in Italy in recent years.

The missing paintings are believed to include a 1939 Pablo Picasso work, three by Jackson Pollock, one by Max Ernst and one by Eleanor Fini.

Miss Guggenheim was in London and the full inventory could not be determined. She was expected back later today.

The American art patron's collection at her palace on the Grand Canal was considered one of the greatest private collections in Europe.

Police said they believe the thieves climbed over a rear wall from a gondola.

A neighbor said Sunday she saw three men on or near the wall. They told her, they were looking for a key one of them accidently threw over the wall onto Miss Guggenheim's property.

The theft was reported by an employee at the palace, but the employee was unable to identify the paintings.

Miss Guggenheim, 72, has been a resident of Venice since 1947 and an honorary citizen since 1962. Her collection in the Palazzo venier Del LEoni has works by Juan Miro, Salvador Dali, Paul Klee, Georges Braque, Marc Chagall, Henry Moore and Jean Arp.

Killer Quake Hits Ancient Italian Town

TUSCANIA, Italy (UPI)—Survivors huddled in army tents thrown up in pastures around this medieval hilltop town today and surveyed the destruction of a killer earthquake that rolled across the countryside like an ocean wave.

It took just six seconds Saturday night to destroy the work of centuries and kill at least 18 people. As many as 270 persons were hurt and under treatment in hospitals around the region.

"There is the death of people, certainly," said Mario Moretti, superintendent of the Etruscan Museum in Rome. "But there also is the death of priceless things."

Moretti said the damage was "serious" but added that art experts would probably be able to restore much of the tombs, temples and other priceless gems of antiquity which suffered in the disaster.

Police sealed off the medieval quarter to prevent looting. Troops patroled deserted streets.

"The city inside the walls is 100 per cent uninhabitable," said fire department Col. Enzo Silvestrini. He said a house by house examination would be made this week to determine the extent of damage.

Of Tuscania's 7,000 odd residents, some 4,500 lived in the stricken medieval quarter in houses often handed down from generation to generation.t

The town had stood the times of the Etruscans, the pre-Roman civilization that made it their capital for a time. The earthquake caused damage to Etruscan tombs and to later monuments, such as the 8th century Church of St. Peter.

New York's 1969 Drug Toll: 1,100

NEW YORK (UPI)—Over 1,100 persons died in New York last year from narcotics-related causes. And the Medical Examiner's Office says the figure will rise when the final figures for 1970 are known, sometime this June.

Even though the narcotics-related deaths showed an increase of over 10 per cent over the 1969 figures, Dr. Michael Baden, Deputy Chief Medical Examiner said the preliminary figures indicate that the drug-related death toll may be leveling off.

The preliminary report for 1970 shows 1,154 total narcotics-related deaths, half of them of persons under the age of 23. In 1969 there were 1,031 similar deaths.

These figures compare with 330 total narcotic-related deaths in the city for 1966 and 184 deaths in 1970 in Philadelphia.

Among the 1970 deaths already confirmed as being narcotic-related five were of persons only 14 years old, Baden said. In 1969 the youngest victim was 12 years old.

In New York, the Medical Examiner's Office categorizes a narcotics-related death as one caused by acute reaction (including victims of so-called "overdose"), medical (including hepatitis and other drug-induced diseases) and traumatic. Traumatic deaths includes violent deaths related to drug use.

Arraignment Of Kissinger Plot Six Runs Into A Delay

HARRISBURG, Pa. (UPI)—The arraignment of the Rev. Philip Berrigan and five other antiwar activists was delayed for several hours today to permit a meeting of the defendants, charged with conspiring to kidnap presidential adviser Henry Kissinger.

The six, all of whom were expected to plead innocent, had been scheduled to appear before a U. S. Commissioner this morning. They also have been charged with plotting to blow up the heating systems of five government buildings in Washington.

Berrigan, 47, serving time in a federal prison at Danbury, Conn., for burning draft records, was brought to this state capital in strict secrecy. Security was strict at the 11-story federal building against a group of anti-war protesters who threatened to hold a "low-key vigil" outside.

The other defendants, all free on bail, were Sister Elizabeth McAllister, 31, of Tarrytown, N.Y.; two priests, Rev. Joseph Wenderoth, 35, and Rev. Neil McLaughlin, and Anthony Scoblick, 30, a married priest on leave from the Roman Catholic Church, all of Baltimore, and Eqbal Ahmad, 40, of Chicago, a Pakistani graduate student.

The defendants, dubbed the "Harrisburg six," were charged by a federal grand jury here with conspiracy to detonate explosives in heating systems in Washington Feb. 15 —the day George Washington's birthday will be celebrated —and to kidnap Kissinger the next day.

Eight attorneys from New York, Chicago, Baltimore and Newark, N.J., came to defend the six at the arraignment. Another 50 lawyers attended. The final trial defense team was to be selected from the whole group.

William Kunstler, flamboyant attorney who was chief counsel for the Chicago Seven, represented Berrigan. "There will be many people involved in many roles," he said. "There is so much to do in this type of case.

Francis X. Gallagher, attorney for the archdiocese of Baltimore who represents the three defendants from that city, said each of the lawyers would speak for himself.

"The matter of who will be on the final defense team really hasn't been finally resolved," he said.

Ghetto Cordoned Off; Two Die In Violence

WILMINGTON, N.C. (UPI)—A three-block area of the black ghetto, including a church where blacks were holed up, was cordoned off today in this city where two persons died in weekend racial violence.

Local police, some 600 national guardsmen and state troopers trained in riot duty moved around the area Sunday night in an effort to restore peace.

At the heart of the area was Gregory Congregational Church on Nun Street, a rallying point for blacks seeking changes in Wilmington's desegregated schools. Police reported that there were still many persons inside the church when the area was sealed off.

A highway patrol source said many of those in the church were believed to be armed.

Police Chief H. E. Williamson vowed Sunday night, "We're going to stop the trouble, whatever it takes—whether it means we go into a church, home or business. We expect to stop it."

It was near the church Sunday morning that a white man was shot and killed by a sniper's bullet and three other white men were injured. Gov. Bob Scott ordered in the troops following the death of 57-year-old Harvey Edward Cumber, the second fatality of racial violence in less than 24 hours, and city officials called a nighttime curfew.

Cumber was shot through the right temple while driving his pickup truck through the black section.

Saturday night a black youth, Gib Corbett, 17, was shot and killed by a policeman protecting firemen. Authorities said Corbett was carrying a shotgun at the time and that later investigation showed that the firing pin of the weapon had actually struck the shell in the chamber but it had failed to fire.

Three white men suffered minor facial wounds Sunday morning when they were fired upon with a shotgun and at least two cars were reported hit by sniper fire, despite a heavy downpour. Occupants of the cars were not injured.

Sausalito Staff Needs Due Study

A preliminary report on the number of staff members the Sausalito School District will need next year will be presented to the district board at 8 p.m. today in Bayside School.

Supt. Lawrence A. Lindberg, who prepared the report, said he anticipates some staff cuts next year because of a continuing drop in enrollment in the district.

A report on facilities use for 1971-72 will also be presented to trustees, according to the superintendent, who said no decision has been reached on which schools will be closed for budget reasons and which will remain open.

Lindberg said two community meetings to discuss facilities use for next year will be held this week. Both meetings will be at 7:30 p.m., one Wednesday in the Manzanita Center in Marin City and the other Thursday at Central School in Sausalito.

James T. Toliver Jr., special assistant for the district, will report on his recent trip to Africa with two Marin City teenagers.

$10,000 Damage In Fire On Ranch Near Marshall

Fire did approximately $10,000 damage to a 100-year-old farmhouse near Marshall yesterday, according to Louis J. Bloom, Marin County fire chief.

Bloom said the roof of the spacious farmhouse on the McMurray Ranch ignited about 2 p.m. because of a faulty chimney. The fire spread quickly through the attic and burned one room on the second story, the chief said.

Bloom estimated damage at $5,000 to the building and $5,000 to the contents of the house occupied by Mr. and Mrs. John Vertigan and their two-month-old child.

The couple noticed the fire while out in the yard, Bloom said, and Vertigan rushed to the second story to rescue the baby from a smoky bedroom. No one was injured in the blaze, Bloom said.

The house belongs to Dr. Ralph F. McMurray of 50 Shady Lane, Ross, Bloom said.

Four trucks from the Marin County Fire Department and one from the Synanon Volunteer Fire Department battled the fire, Bloom said.

More Fires In Sausalito During Year

Sausalito had 18 per cent more fires in 1970 than in 1969 — 154 blazes as compared to 126, Chief Charles E. Masten revealed in the Sausalito department's annual report.

And the chief said the cost of fire losses rose nearly $80,000, from $114,643 in 1969 to $193,545 last year.

The department answered fewer calls in 1970, including ambulance calls, rescues, accidents, lockouts, investigations, smoke checks and false alarms, according to the chief. There were 609 calls, compared to 624 the previous year.

A most distrubing rise — in the chief's eyes — was in false alarms, which totaled 73 last year, about a 50 per cent increase over 1969.

Some of them were accidental, the chief said, but most were malicious. "This is the most false alarms we've ever had in a year," Masten said. "We even had 14 telephone false alarms, a kind of false a l a r m that used to be very rare."

Masten said a false alarm "creates a dangerous situation by taking men and equipment out of the station."

Structural fires, including dwellings, businesses, piers and wharves, were up from 45 to 52. Dwelling fires increased from 26 to 34, fires in businesses were down from 15 in 1969 to 11 last year and grass and brush fires rose from 18 to 35. There were only two boat fires last year, compared to nine the previous year.

In the area of fire prevention, the department made a total of 745 fire inspections in homes, schools and businesses in 1970, about 100 more than in 1969.

Cigarette Consumption Going Up

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Cigarette smoking is on the increase again for the first time in seven years, according to the state.

Liquor consumption also is up.

The average man, woman and child in California will smoke 126.2 packs of cigarettes this year and next--an increase of one over last year. In 1969, the per capita consumption was only 123.4.

"The decline in per capita cigarette consumption, which began with the 1964 Surgeon General's Report and was accelerated by the 1967 (state) tax increase, appears to have ended in 1970," Gov. Ronald Reagan's new budget proposal observes.

The average Californian this year is expected to drink 3.79 gallons of hard liquor, compared to 3.70 last year. He will consume 29.30 gallons of beer, compared to 28.58 in 1970. Dry and sparkling wine consumption also is up, but sweet wine drinking is down.

The state notes that "per capita consumption of alcoholic beverages has been steadily rising" in recent years.

The state estimates it will collect $249 million in cigarette taxes for the fiscal year beginning July 1, an increase of $6 million over the current year.

It anticipates picking up $133 million in alcoholic beverage taxes, a rise of $5.3 million.

Fish, Game Budget Increased $1 Million

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —Gov. Ronald Reagan today proposed a state fish and game budget of $22.9 million with nearly a quarter of that going for warden enforcement.

The suggested spending program was about $1 million larger than the current expenditure. There were no new major programs.

Reagan called for spending $6.9 million for law enforcement, $4.3 million for wildlife management and $4.4 million for inland fisheries.

The governor predicted 17,300 persons would be found in violation of fish and game laws in the coming year.

The governor said $232,000 would be needed for the warmwater hatchery at Niland. Construction is near completion, and the facility is due to go into operation soon.

He also called for spending $130,000 because the Imperial Wildlife Area was "in danger of losing its capability as a feed producing grounds for waterfowl due to increasing salinity levels." The money, he said, would be used for tiling.

The governor also proposed spending $1.7 million for water projects and water quality during the coming year. This is slightly less than the current amount.

The state's fish and game program is not financed from the general fund but from revenue from the sale of hunting and fishing licenses, commercial fish taxes, grants of federal funds, reimbursements from other government agencies and court fines.

Long 'Temporary'

BATON ROUGE, La. (UPI)— A district court judge who was called to help clear a crowded court docket 10 years ago retired after extending his temporary duty until 1976. District Court Judge C. A. Barnett was assigned to the temporary duty by the Louisiana Supreme Court in 1960.

Farmers, Indians In Land Clash In Chile

SANTIAGO, Chile (UPI)—Angry farmers in Chile's breadbasket provinces of Cautin are charging that the Marxist-dominated government is not respecting its own edict of exempting small and medium landholders from its policy of reclaiming rural land for the state.

Indians in the province, allegedly stirred into action by leftist agitators, have so far seized 300 farms in the area, and the farmers claim the government is doing nothing to get the Indians off their land.

They say the government is violating its own avowed agrarian policy which aims to end private ownership of rural land "with the exception of present small and medium land holders."

The farmers fear that de facto expropriation will result from the illegal land seizures. Some even talk of armed resistance which is no idle threat in the countryside where few homes are without firearms.

But the attitude of Socialist President Salvador Allende's government towards the farmers could best be described as ambivalent so far.

National police in the province merely have been ordered to prevent conflicts between the farmers and the Indians. Seized farms are being "intervened" or managed by agrarian reform bureaucrats, most of them leftists, who are given virtually a free hand.

The government, however, has fired the Communist governor of the province's Lontue district for inciting the land seizures.

Because of the explosive situation in Cautin, Allende sent Agriculture Minister Jacques Chonchol to Temuco, the provincial capital.

Chonchol, a renegade Christian Democrat, was once a United Nations agriculture expert in Cuba whose agrarian reform has impressed Allende favorably.

Temuco, 450 miles south of Santiago, is a farm center of 180,000 inhabitants and the hub of Cautin province, a rich, rolling, green valley flanked by the Andes and the lesser coastal range.

The province produces one-fourth of Chile's wheat, accounts for 26 per cent of the milk supply and 18 per cent of the country's beef.

Politically, the province voted overwhelmingly for rightist presidential candidate Jorge Alessandri in the Sept. 4, 1970 election and relegated Marxist Allende to third place in the three-way race with Christian Democrat Radomiro Tomic.

Allende, who headed a Socialist-Communist-radical left coalition, received much support from Cautin's 180,000 Mapuche Indians, who are included in most of the province's 20,000 officially tabulated unemployed.

The Mapuches, fought Spaniards and Chileans to a standstill for 400 years, until 1881, when weakened by the white man's firewater, they finally were pacified.

The Mapuches have old scores to settle with the "huincas" or white men. After hostilities, lands awarded them by the government were usurped by "fence-moving" neighbors, bought for bottles of wine and stolen in title swindles.

Of Chile's 9.5 million inhabitants, 320,000 are Mapuche Indians. Some 320,000 of them live in southern Chile with another 200,000 facing assimilation in the cities.

Mapuches hold title to about 25 per cent of the cultivable land in Cautin and they are prevented by a 1961 law from selling to non-Indians. Yet, constant division through the generations has reduced the lands to small family plots, many unable to sustain the families.

Housing and health conditions of the mostly ignored Indians are deplorable. In Cautin, 134 of each 1,000 Indian children born die the first year.

$300,000 In Revenue Lost In Fuss

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —A labor-management dispute resulting in the cancellation of races at Santa Anita and Bay Meadows cost the state $300,000 in revenue, Gov. Ronald Reagan's proposed budget reports.

However, the governor's spending plan estimates that the state's overall take from the horseracing tracks will be up in the fiscal year beginning July 1 from $66 million to $74.2 million.

The disputes at Santa Anita and Bay Meadows and a rescheduling of races at Los Alamitos cost the state $7.2 million during fiscal 1969-70 and $300,000 for the current year, the budget said.

But eight more weeks of harness racing approved by the legislature for the California Exposition will generate $475,000 more in state revenue. Of the state's total take, $66.2 million will be deposited in the general fund for support of such programs as education and welfare. Of the remainder, $8.1 million goes to the Fair and Exposition Fund, and $750,000 for the Wildlife Restoration Fund.

Assault Begins On Ho Chi Minh Trail

"fully understandable" in light of alleged North Vietnamese violations of Laotian neutrality.

It remained to be seen how North Vietnam would react. U.S. and South Vietnamese troops launched a similar offensive against Communist bases in Cambodia last May and the North Vietnamese responded with a fullscale offensive deep into Cambodia that put heavy pressures on the Cambodian capital of Phnom Penh.

There are an estimated 70,000 North Vietnamese troops in Laos.

The South Vietnamese were carrying the brunt of the Laos offensive.

American ground personnel moved up to the border, but stepped aside to let the South Vietnamese make the actual move into Laos. The U.S. Command in Saigon emphasized that no American ground troops or advisers would take part in the operation, although the South Vietnamese will get massive air support and backing from U.S. artillery firing across the border.

The Laotian government protested the move and demanded that "all foreign troops immediately withdraw from Royal Laotian territory."

South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu went on the national radio to say "this is an operation limited in time as well as space, with the clear and unique objective of disrupting the supply and infiltration network of the Communist North Vietnamese troops." He pledged that when the operation was complete "the armed forces of the Republic of Vietnam will withdraw completely from the Laotian territory."

Nine thousand Americans and 20,000 South Vietnamese have been poised on the Laotian border since Jan. 30, but exactly how many of the South Vietnamese actually crossed was not announced. However, on-the-spot reports said thousands of them were seen crossing the Xe Don River marking the border and disappearing into the tangled jungle on the other side aboard tanks and armored personnel carriers, while hundreds of American-crewed UH1 Huey helicopters ferried others into Laos.

The object of the operation is to cut the Ho Chi Minh trail, a network of roads and trails that brings Communist men and material into South Vietnam and Cambodia. U.S. military sources in Saigon said if the trail can be cut, the estimated 81,000 Viet Cong and North Vietnamese troops in the area would not be able to fight a war.

"As far as food and clothing are concerned, the enemy is completely independent of the Ho Chi Minh trail," the sources said. "But for war material — guns, ammunition and the like —they are completely dependent on supplies from North Vietnam."

Field commanders said a major target of the operation would be the Laotian town of Tchepone, 27 miles from the border and a major staging area and junction of the Ho Chi Minh trail.

Field reports also said the six helicopters shot down were hit while bringing troops into hot landing zones in Laos — landing zones under fire. Pilots returning to he Khe Sanh outpost in South Vietnam five miles from the border said all of the crewmen were "extracted" but that five of the six downed choppers had to be abandoned.

The Laotian government blamed the North Vietnamese as primarily responsible since they already had troops in Laos but said "this does not constitute justification" for sending in the South Vietnamese troops.

"The Royal Lao government demands that all foreign troops immediately withdraw from Royal Laotian territory," a statement issued by the government said.

Some of the 9,000 American troops in the area stood watching beside a sign at the border saying "No U.S. personnel past this point" as armored personnel carriers with the South Vietnamese troops rumbled past. Several of the GIs flashed peace signs to the grinning South Vietnamese troops, who waved back at them, UPI correspondent Kenneth Braddick reported from the scene.

"We'll probably be coming in after you," one GI shouted, apparently unaware that the U.S. government has made it clear no American ground personnel are to be involved in the attack. However, the U.S. Command in Saigon said the United States would provide "whatever air power, combat logistics and medivac (medical evacuation), either fixed-wing or helo (helicopter), is required to supplement the capabilities of the Republic of Vietnam armed forces."

Col. Due Le Duong, commander of the South Vietnamese armored units, said a major target of the push would be the town of Tchepone, 27 miles across the frontier and a major staging area and junction of the Ho Chi Minh Trail.

Duong said the government troops planned to cut the trail in as many places as possible.

ROBOT

action after two weeks of hibernation for the frigid lunar night.

Over the weekend, a Soviet space scientist said their robot could do anything an astronaut could do except provide human impressions and that automated space flight was cheaper and safer.

The scientist, whose name was not given but who was identified as the designer of the Luna 17 spacecraft that took the robot to the moon Nov. 17, told the Communist party newspaper Pravda in a weekend interview:

"Automatons bow to human space explorers in only one respect. That is, they are not capable of bringing back human impressions and feelings from other planets.

"I dare say unmanned vehicles are capable of solving all the technical tasks which manned teams accomplish, and they would be solved considerably more cheaply and without risk to human life."

"As a result," it said, "those who have the greatest power to change the law —the white middle class —are best able to avoid its most severe consequences and are less motivated to do anything about it."

The report said the court action was "not a result of conscious discrimination. It is more typically the result of an honest effort on the part of the court to give a 'good kid' a break. Unfortunately, 'good kids' are usually those whose appearance, personality, or background strike a responsive chord in the judge."

The report recommended repeal of a section of the law specifically intended to allow detention of "incorrigible" children.

Suitcase With Drugs Trips Man

A 21-year-old Stockton man spent this weekend in Marin County jail because he checked with San Rafael police to ask if his suitcase had been found.

Police arrested William K. Guletz, of 1305 El Monte Street, Stockton, and reported they would now like to talk to his vanished friend, Charles Jeffrey, of 61 Canal Street, Apt. 2, San Rafael.

When Guletz picked up his suitcase at the police station Saturday, he was booked into Marin County jail on possession of marijuana and dangerous drugs.

Police said the suitcase, which had been turned in by a finder, contained a plastic bag with suspected marijuana and approximately 1000 pills.

A search of Jeffrey's apartment, according to police, yielded 18 plastic bags containing suspected marijuana, several bags with an unknown brown substance, bags and vials of pills and one bag containing an unknown powdery white substance.

PLAN

sions cost the society billions of dollars annually," the President commented.

He said that a staff study now in progress indicates the feasibility of a special charge on sulphur emitted into the atmosphere as a major step in "applying the principle that the cost of pollution should be included in the price of the product."

He said on completion of the studies, legislation would be submitted to Congress and that funds derived from the sulphur charge would enable the federal government to expand environmental improvement programs.

Among water reforms, Nixon proposed that the federal-state water quality program be extended to cover all navigable waters, their tributaries and ground waters.

In addition, he urged that federal standards be set to regulate the discharge of hazardous substances into waters.

He said that while the nation must continue to rely on pesticides for the foreseeable future, use of toxics should be subject to control through a registration procedure providing for designation of a pesticide for "general, restricted, use" or "use by permit only."

The message asked Congress to approve comprehensive noise pollution control legislation which would permit establishment of federal noise standards on transportation, construction and other equipment.

A highlight of Nixon's proposed program involves a national land use policy.

"While most land use decisions will continue to be made at the local level'," HE SAID, "we must draw upon the basic authority of state government to deal with land use issues which spill over local jurisdictional boundaries."

He added that the states were uniquely qualified to bring about land reform. Consequently he proposed to establish a policy to encourage states to plan for and regulate developments affecting growth and use of critical land areas.

He said $100 million in new funds would be authorized to states in those efforts.

Connally Wins Confirmation

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The Senate confirmed today without opposition the nomination of John B. Connally to be new secretary of the Treasury.

Connally, 54, will become the first Democrat in President Nixon's Cabinet and will succeed David M. Kennedy, who is becoming an ambassador at large.

Confirmation of Connally, former governor of Texas, came on a voice vote at the start of the Senate session with only a few members on the floor.

Teen-Agers Rescued On Cliff

Two teen-agers who became stranded while on a hike were rescued from the steep cliffs above Kirby Beach yesterday by the Sausalito Fire Department's rescue team, Chief Charles E. Masten reported.

Gaynal Bera, 18, of Vacaville, Solano County, and Hank Warren, also 18, of Berkeley, were hauled up the cliffs by Fireman Richard Bettencourt, who was lowered to the stranded teenagers by ropes. Fireman Fred Partridge and two other hikers in the party, Paul Fairchild and Gary Buzzell, both of Berkeley, assisted in the rescue.

Miss Bera was plucked from a ledge about 80 feet down the cliff and Warren was picked up from the beach. The youth, who had fallen to the beach in an attempt to get out, suffered minor scratches and bruises, the chief said, but Miss Bera was uninjured.

Kirby Beach is located just east of Kirby Cove on the Marin Headlands.

Novato Girl Threatened By Man

A 10-year-old Novato girl was threatened with a knife, handcuffed and partially disrobed yesterday in a bush area at the rear of 455 Entrada Drive by an unidentified man, Novato police have reported.

After partially disrobing her and trying to push her in the creek, he left, officers said.

The suspect was described as 21 to 25 years of age, 5 feet, 11 inches, thin, with brown hair, moustache and beard. He was wearing a rust colored shirt and brown pants.

Israel Eyes Cairo's New Peace Pitch

By U.P. International

Israel is using diplomatic contacts with Washington and other world capitals to seek clarification of Egyptian peace proposals before responding to them Tuesday, official sources in Jerusalem said today.

The sources said the government wants more details on Egypt's call for a partial Israeli pullback from the Suez Canal to allow reopening of the waterway.

Specifically, Israel wants to know what would happen in the territory vacated and whether Israeli ships would be allowed to use the reopened canal, the sources said.

It was announced after a cabinet meeting in Jerusalem Sunday that Prime Minister Golda Meir would give Israel's response to the proposal in a speech to the Knesset (parliament) Tuesday.

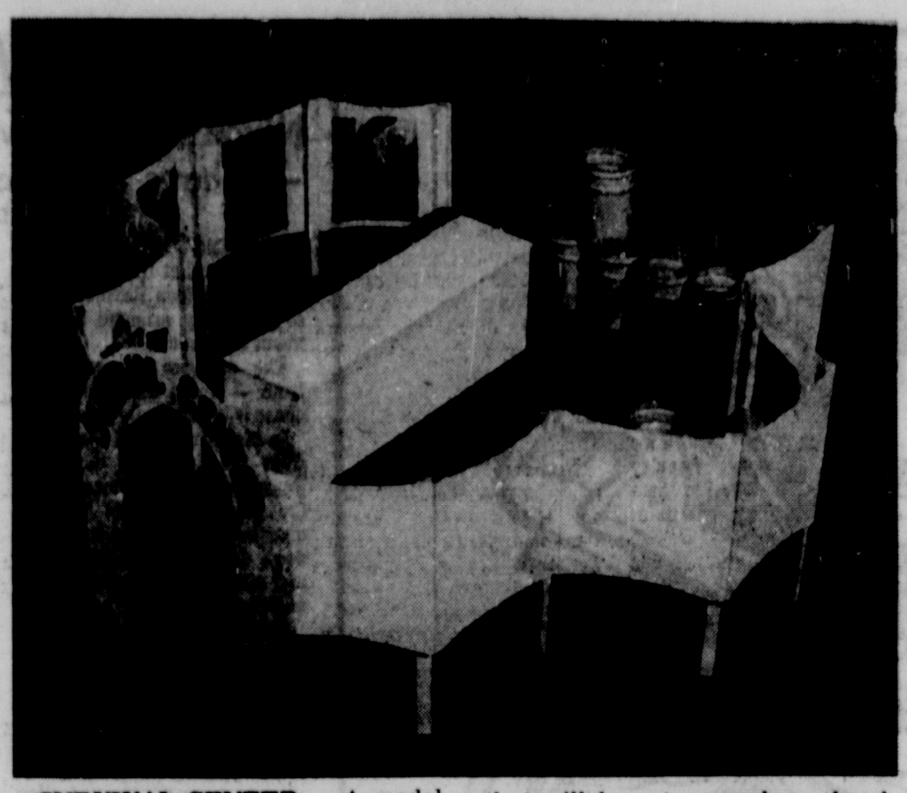
Mrs. Meir prepared her speech under pressure from the hawkish Gahal party to reject it and from members of her own Labor party to leave the door open for further negotiation by asking for clarification. Egyptian officials urged her not to throw away this "last chance" for peace.

Mrs. Meir said in a television interview Friday that there was little new in the Egyptian proposal and that it appeared to be an attempt to get Israel to withdraw its troops without peace agreement.

The semiofficial Cairo newspaper Al Ahram said Egypt's offer might cause a split between the United States and Western European countries. It said the United States wants to give unconditional support to Israel, while the other powers see the Egyptian initiative as a promising step toward peace.

Egyptian officials along the canal said dredging could be completed and the canal made operational in four to six months if Israel agrees to withdraw.

Foreign newsmen were taken in a tour of Egypt's canalside fortifications at Port Tewfik Sunday where steel helmeted troops remained on full alert despite the 30-day cease-fire



SURVIVAL CENTER — A model created by Survival, a new countywide ecological action group, shows design of recycling depots that will be set up each weekend at all high schools in the Tamalpais, San Rafael and Novato school districts.

OPERATION 'SURVIVAL'

New Ecology Group Planning Recycling Depots At Schools

A new ecology movement that calls itself "Survival" has arranged to operate recycling depots at seven public high schools in Marin every weekend, beginning Feb. 20.

The results, according to Dennis Baldwin, Survival spokesman, will be several:

Marin residents will always know where to find a recycling depot to take their newspapers, tin and aluminum cans and glass.

High school ecology and service clubs will receive half the proceeds from the recycling depots to help other ecological projects, and Survival will use its half to pay for transportation and a continuous public education program.

Survival has built seven portable "Survival Centers" where its members and high school students will gather goods for recycling and load them for hauling to Bay Area plants. The wooden-walled centers will be set up in high school parking lots each Saturday morning, and will be open for business from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m each Saturday and Sunday.

The high schools, in the Tamalpais, San Rafael and Novato Unified districts, are Tamalpais in Mill Valley, Redwood in Larkspur, Sir Francis Drake in San Anselmo, San Rafael, Terra Linda, Novato and San Marin.

A roofing company has donated unused pallets on which bundled newspapers will be loaded and Standard Oil Co. has given 100 oil barrels to hold the sorted glass, aluminum and tin cans.

Survival has commitments from Bay Area industries to buy the weekly collections of the Survival Centers. Some of the waste goods present problems, Baldwin admitted.

"There tend to be more newspapers than the company can handle from time to time. And we can't take magazines; there's a clay coating on the paper that spoils them for recycling."

Survival's plans call for more than just the recycling operations.

"We want to be a peaceful revolution, Baldwin said. "We are not politically oriented; we won't support nor advocate any boycotts" of one-way bottles, polluting substances or pesticides. "But, we will work with any interested company, group or person interested in using a survival center as a forum for their ideas to help the ecology," Baldwin explained.

Many man-hours of "high-energy thought, discussions, arranging and building" have gone into the Survival campaign so far, Baldwin reported.

One of the active participants was Roger Bockrath, one of two Independent-Journal photographers who took pictures of the Aug. 7 shoot-out at the Marin County Civic Center. Bockrath donated several hundred dollars from sale of his photos worldwide to buy the necessary insurance policy for young workers at the Survival Centers, to buy material to build the centers, and to begin production of educational pamphlets.

The recycling depopots will become "little white schoolhouses" every weekend, Baldwin said. There, the public will be offered pamphlets teaching how to stem the flow of wastes that "threatens to fill the land with garbage dumps, the Bay with pollutants and the air with smog."

Baldwin said Survival has planned pamphlets telling how to make compost heaps to turn family garbage into organic fertilizer, how to garden without chemical pesticides, how to substitute biodegradable products for pollutant detergents, and on how to reduce smog through such ideas as using bicycles more and autos less.

Survival plans to act as a liasion between concerned citizen-consumers and the producers of such goods as chemical insecticide devices. The group's role will be to make the manufacturers aware of public concern over safety to man and environment, Baldwin added.

The new organization hopes to help other groups in creek clean-ups and other special projects.

Survival also will answer questions on how to separate and prepare products for recycling. Its telephone is available from information operators as a new listing. Baldwin said the number will be listed under "environmental services" in the next Marin County telephone directory.

Publishers Pass Censure On Alioto For Marin Visit

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— Delegates to the California Newspaper Publishers Association Convention have returned home after a severe censure of Mayor Josepn Alioto for his support of three union officials involved in the San Rafael Independent-Journal printers' strike.

CNPA directors passed a resolution this weekend deploring the mayor's protest over the jailing of the labor leaders on contempt of court charges.

They were Jack Goldberger, president of Local 921 of the Newspaper Drivers; Leon son, president of Local 21 of the International Typographical Union; and Donald Abrams, vice president of Local 21.

The three had elected to serve jail terms pay fines for violating a superior court order limiting picketing at the newspaper which has been struck by the ITU for more than a year.

Last Wednesday, Alioto personally chauffeured Goldberger to jail in Marin County. The mayor told a crowd waiting outisde that "jail never solved a labor dispute and never will."

The directors unanimously adopted the censure at the final session. They rebuked the mayor for:

"His uncalled for politically motivated intrusion and highly irregular comments in a matter which does not involve either the city of San Francisco or himself personally."

". . . Respect for juctice and law in a viable democratic society requires that when a court has issued an order, that such an order shall be obeyed," the resolution said.

Alioto promptly fired back, saying the CNPA was demeaning "its own profession by issuing a personal attack on me without bothering to check its facts or hear my side of the story.

"I went to Marin County because I was concerned about a very serious strike spreading to other Bay Area communities.

Why Citizens Become Watchdogs Of Courts

Organizations to "watchdog" the courts are springing up around the Bay Area.

In Alameda County, Citizens for Law and Order was organized last May by four businessmen. It now has some 200 members, and for several months has been making itself heard through assessments of the working of the law in its home county.

In San Francisco, police have decided to "watchdog" the courts. The San Francisco Police Officers Association announced plans last week to set up a central complaint depository for information on "any judge who is consistently too lenient."

"If we receive the name of one judge repeatedly, we will review the cases. If there is justification we will then request the state Commission on Judicial Qualifications to review these cases," said the police association in its official organ, the Notebook.

THE POLICE PAPER was quite outspoken. In an editorial, it declared: "Every petty, two-bit hood in the city knows from recent developments that it's easy to beat a rap."

The Oakland-based Citizens for Law and Order has adopted a less emotional approach. It has five task forces monitoring the performance of judges, the news media, legislative bodies, schools, and the support of police. But it is the first of these, dealing with judges, that has received the most notice.

WHAT SORT of judicial actions stir police and businessmen alike to censure the courts?

A case cited by the Citizens for Law and Order provides an example.

Gary MacPherson was convicted of the murder of an Oakland motorist, Ulrich Hoischen, and sentenced to death. Because of a U.S. Supreme Court ruling that the jury had been improperly selected, he was re-tried and again convicted. A second trial on the penalty followed before Judge Lewis Lercara in Alameda County Superior Court.

After the jury had been out an hour, it reported it was deadlocked 9-to-3 in favor of the death penalty. Judge Lercara thereupon dismissed the jury and sentenced MacPherson to life in prison.

The CLO in its bulletin sharply criticized the judge for his hasty dismissal of the jury after a long, costly trial and urged readers to write in protest to newspapers and to the presiding judge of Alameda County Superior Court.

A CASE SOMEWHAT similar occurred last December in Marin County.

Marc C. Osuna had been convicted of the murder of Mario Ferrari during the Labor Day, 1965, holdup of the Mission Inn in San Rafael, and sentenced to death. The same supreme court ruling resulted in retrial of the penalty phase of his case.

The trial began Nov. 9 and continued until Dec. 18. On that day, the jury retired at 9:45 a.m. and reported at 2:15 p.m. — four and one-half hours later — that it was deadlocked 9-to-3 in favor of the death penalty. Judge Joseph G. Wilson, over the objections of the deputy district attorney, Ernest C. Zunino, thereupon dismissed the jury and sentenced Osuna to life in prison.

THERE IS DANGER that "watchdog" organizations may seek to warp the judicial process by pressure on judges. Such danger appears greater when the "watchdog" group is composed of police, as in San Francisco.

But judges must be answerable for their actions. And cases such as those involving sentencing of MacPherson and Osuna illustrate why citizens around the Bay Area feel compelled to keep watch on the courts.

"Oh, yes, sir. They're very nice Moon rocks, thank you, sir"

Oil Firm's Cleanup Efforts Praised

In this era of sophisticated electronic equipment it is difficult to understand how a tragic accident could have occurred as it did between the two Standard Oil tankers. No one wanted this accident, least of all Standard Oil. Accidents do seem to happen, and the lives of all of us have been affected sometime with the results of an accident.

The company is the target for this human error, and it is most popular to criticize the Standard Oil Co. It is unpopular to give the company credit for the monumental effort they have made. Crews of men have been brought to the beaches, and have worked tirelessly in the cleanup operation. The company has paid for much heavy equipment, clothing and food for the volunteers. They have brought in truckload after truckload of small tools, chain saws, sleeping bags, countless drums of mineral oil, straw, lumber, installed phones, and many other things.

Each request seems to get attention. We feel that Standard Oil has gone far beyond the call of duty, and should be given credit for this great effort on the part of the company in Bolinas.

Gutter Approach Taken To News

Your biased and inflammatory story concerning Redwood basketball coach Richard Hart shows again the low, gutter approach your editors take toward the news.

When you will not print any letters written anonymously in the letters to the editors column, here you print in a news story a letter without a signature and in the content of the story, no reference is given to any fact.

What a nice way to stir up the masses? Just by printing hints of racism without any facts is just another way of showing the yellow journalism the I-J can be noted for.

Maybe the real racist is the I-J.

Supervisors Don't Decide On District

In her letter to the Editor published Jan. 25, Mrs. R.F. Schneider of Sleepy Hollow complained of lack of due process in the steps relating to the proposed Sleepy Hollow Community Services District.

The procedures for formation of a new district by means of a reorganization are prescribed in every detail by state law. A petition such as the proposal for the Sleepy Hollow district may be submitted by any group of registered voters in the area. If this group numbers more than five per cent of all the voters, the Local Agency Formation Commission must consider the petition . . .

The public hearing by the Local Agency Formation Commission was held in the Ross Town Hall and was attended by those both favoring and opposing the proposal. The subsequent board of supervisors' hearing was set and noticed in accordance with state law. All property owners received a copy of the notice. The proposed reorganization now goes on to the voters of the community with the election scheduled for April 20, 1971.

California law indicated the considerations which the Local Agency Formation Commission and the board should make at their respective hearings on reorganization. The LAFC must consider the governmental services which an area requires and the most appropriate governmental agencies to provide these services. The board of supervisors must consider whether the proposed reorganization will be for the interest of other districts, landowners, present orfuture inhabitants of the area, as well as reviewing the considerations of the Local Agency Formation Commission. Neither the LAFC nor the board of supervisors is expected under state law to make determinations of popular acceptability of the proposal. On the contrary, the law requires reorganization proposals to be referred to an election of the registered voters of the area.

It is my opinion that the Board of Supervisors felt that an election was the best way to resolve this issue which seriously divides the community and therefore voted to submit this proposal to the voters without further delay.

Story On Recall Violated Trust

An elected official has little opportunity to privately discuss with his fellow trustees ideas that constructively effect their relationship. The Brown Act is specific in restricting what type of discussion can be held outside an open meeting. One legal avenue available to communicate with them is by mail.

In your article of Feb. 2 regarding the events surrounding the possible recall of Gordon Wright, I feel you violated a privacy that has resulted in making a then-pending solution to recall impossible. The letter you quoted was knowlingly not a press release for public consumption but an honest effort to moderate a difficult and unfortunate situation.

A "brickbat" to the paper for violating a trust.

Bagley, Behr Don't Fare Badly As Committees Parceled Out

By PAUL E. PETERZELL

Marin's two state legislators, considering their political liabilities, fared better than should have been expected when committee assignments were doled out.

Assemblyman William T. Bagley and Sen. Peter H. Behr, both R-San Rafael, suffer first from the fact both belong to the wrong party. We mean they belong to the minority party in both houses.

Both also have party loyalists back home who are convinced the two are in the wrong party as well, but that's another matter.

BAGLEY, as the veteran lawmaker who last year rode at the top of the heap when his party led the Assembly, had the farthest to fall. But he managed to keep a strong voice by getting the chairmanship of the welfare committee and memberships on key committees.

The welfare committee traditionally deals not with power but with those who have little of it. But given the fiscal and political crunch over welfare this year, it will be heard from far more than in the past.

And Bagley will need all of his considerable abilities to avoid being caught between the parties and the Reagan and Nixon administrations as they all struggle to find someone else to pay for welfare.

Bagley retained a seat on the revenue and taxation committee, which he chaired in the past two sessions, and got a seat on the powerful ways and means committee, which passes on all money bills. He only got a vote in the minority party in each committee, but his expertise in revenue and taxation will give him a leg up on most of the Democrats.

And he was put on the constitutional amendments committee, reportedly to give the committee the needed vote to approve a measure allowing 18-year-olds to vote in state and local elections.

Bagley clearly landed on his feet.

BEHR, AS A freshman senator, could only accept whatever was given him. His cordial relation with the Democratic Senate president pro tempore, James R. Mills of San Diego, did not hurt.

Behr, of course, could not expect a chairmanship so soon, but he was made vice chairman of the public utilities and corporations committee. This committee touches some of the state's most powerful interests, and Mills said he would steer rapid transit measures to this committee instead of to the transportation committee as in the past.

Behr also got on the health and welfare, local government and water resources committees, all his primary choices. The water resources committee gives Behr a voice in the California Water Project, a point certain to disquiet the project's friends. Behr is not known as an ardent friend of the project.

With the bloody business of committee assignments done, a sensible legislator could get down to serious business — like changing the locks on his office door.

At least one Democrat did just that as soon as he got his new chairmanship.He was so fearful that his Republican predecessor was part of an imagined plot to usurp his new power that he immediately changed the locks on the doors.

REMEMBER WHEN?

10 YEARS AGO

Feb. 8, 1961

The body of a man found shot to death near Devil's Gulch on Mount Tamalpais was identified as that of Jerry Keith Sangster, 25, an itinerant carpet layer who vanished three weeks earlier.

A cost squeeze threatened to price Marin City redevelopment project units out of reach of those for whom they were intended, declared Rep. Clement W. Miller, D-First District.

20 YEARS AGO

Feb. 8, 1951

Embargo on mail was ended after President Truman ordered the Army to take over operation of American railroads if necessary to end a "sick call" rail workers' strike.

Women of Marin County were asked to register their skills and job experience with the Marin County Power Survey, for call-up in event of war emergency.

Nixon's 'New Revolution' Political — That's How To Make It Work

By ROSCOE DRUMMOND

WASHINGTON — Some are suggesting that the President's "New American Revolution" is so politically oriented it can't mean very much.

The opposite is nearer the truth — it can mean much because it is politically oriented.

In his efforts to lift the nation from the depths of the Great Depression, F.D.R. once said to the American people: "I am a quarterback; if some strategies don't work, I'll call others" — and often he changed signals in mid-play.

Public opinion is frequently ahead of leadership opinion. What's wrong in responding to the convictions of the American people as to what most needs to be done? This is what Nixon's "New American Revolution" aims to do and it is my feeling that the President is more firmly headed in the right direction today than at any time since his election.

He agreed to do things — some pretty big things that he felt couldn't be done before. He can do them now because the Vietnamese war is being turned down and spending is being turned up.

OF COURSE there is politics in the President's legislative program. It is true that he and his advisers have been working for many months on the "six great goals" he set out in his "State of the Union" address, but it is no secret in Washington that there was no change in the White House tight holddown on next year's budget until after the November elections which showed most voters felt things weren't going well.

Then the President promptly gave the go-ahead to all the major measures he had been preparing.

We can't know how far the "New American Revolution" is going to carry the nation until we know what Congress is going to do with it. But it is already evident that it is carrying Mr. Nixon appreciably to his own left.

The Republican ultra-right is pained and outraged by much of what the administration is doing. Human Events, one of the most influential spokesmen of the conservative right, is printing anguished editorials wondering what is happening to the man whose conservatism it was confident would never bend.

On the other hand, the Democratic left seemed surprised, somewhat stunned, momentarily speechless at the "State of the Union" address. They didn't know whether to applaud because the President was beginning to do some things they had long said should be done or to despair because he was stealing their clothes. They are doing a little of both, but mostly waiting and seeing.

TO THE EXTENT that the terms "left, center and right" have meaning, the substance of the new Nixon program is mostly on the left. It has liberal Republican and Democratic origins. It is activist and pragmatic, not doctrinaire.

The $229.2 billion budget, high deficit spending to stimulate the economy and reduce unemployment, the health-care program, more federal aid to education — these programs and others certainly head Nixon to his left. But these are things which many moderates support. The revenue-sharing program — aimed at reversing the flow of political power toward Washington and at putting more money and more decision-making in the hands of people near to where the problems are — is profoundly conservative.

While Mr. Nixon is moving somewhat to the left, he still remains at the political center because the political center has itself moved somewhat to the left.

Obviously there is nothing sacred about every detail of the President's program.It can be altered; it can be improved; if there are better ways to achieve the same ends, let's have them. But if the Democratic stand-patters keep attacking Mr. Nixon instead of attacking the problems, they will be the ones who will get politically hurt.

BY NO MEANS NEUTRAL

Moribund Anti-War Movement Stirs Feebly

By ERNEST B. FURGURSON

WASHINGTON — The leaders of the legions who set out to pacify the world by lungpower have been stung deeply by what they consider premature reports of the death of their movement.

Jumping aboard the latest Cambodia-Laos headlines, they are trying now to prove there is life left in them despite the Nixon administration's efforts to Vietnamize the war and withdraw American forces in orderly fashion.

SHORT WEEKS AGO the major antiwar organizations of the recent past lay moribund while rumors mounted of military activities in Southeast Asia which they earlier would have considered a brazen challenge from the administration.

The relatively moderate Vietnam Moratorium Committee, which sponsored mass peace rallies in 1969, disbanded nearly a year ago. The New Mobilization Committee to End the War, which also led the big rallies of previous years, was in a factional shambles after arguments over what to demonstrate about next, and how.

There was a movement among students and dropouts — not to march, but to worry about their own private things, to hassle if at all about whose turn it was to do dishes in the communal apartment, to swap expertise about macrobiotic foods and even to hark back to yesteryear by cramming for exams.

For the movement's leaders, who get no publicity while their legions are bemused by group sex, bean curd or Sociology 404, this was intolerable. So when Mr. Nixon accommodated them with his latest flirtations with the international boundary lines in Indochina, those leaders got cracking again.

THEY CALLED a meeting at the Rayburn Building on Capitol Hill — a site whose use was legitimized by the proxy participation of Congress people Shirley Chisholm and Ronald Dellums — to announce that they were going to have more meetings and, when the weather turns warm, more mass rallies like those they remember so fondly.

It was small-scale, indoor, non-guerrilla theater, but since it was the only such show in town it was heavily reviewed. Maybe 40 newsmen, camermen and sympathetic spectators showed up, and now and then a nostalgic "right on!" came out of the audience.

It had a mixed-up sex appeal, contributed by Kate Millet, the women's liberation author of "Sexual Politics." She told them about "Dictator Nixon" and how he had extorted the people's money to commit murder in Southeast Asia and how Americans had slaugtered hundreds of Cambodians in a schoolhouse all night long. She offered no documentation.

NEITHER, OF COURSE, did anybody else. Certainly not Jerry Gordon, the Cleveland lawyer and co-ordinator of the National Peace Action Coalition, which is the way this particular manifestation of the movement styled itself. He said the administration's Vietnamization program had failed completely and that the current "escalation" was part of a scheme to encircle China and maybe even take armed action against it. Atomic weapons could not be ruled out, he informed us.

But such inside information about strategic plans was not what Gordon wanted to tell the world. Even his admirers seemed hardly to register when he made such revelations.

The clean-cut young men who represented the concerned officers and enlisted men against the war, the would-be draftee who spoke for repealing the draft, the black Washington school board member with the Frederick Douglass beard all clearly had heard it all before.

What Gordon wanted us to know, and what they came to express their endorsement of, was the news that as soon as the crocuses bloom the movement, too, is going to be resurrected. Two weeks from now comes a planning session at Catholic University here, then a mass observance of Martin Luther King's death from April 2 to 4, then climactic marches April 24 on Washington and San Francisco.

WHEN SOMEBODY asked whether the warmup session marking Dr. King's death was an effort to bring more black participants into the faltering peace movement, the sponsors were fuzzy. But the answer was obvious.

It is faltering and it will continue to falter because the general public can see that the war is winding down. The people can read the casualty figures.

I-J REPORTER'S NOTEBOOK

By MARY LEYDECKER

Finding In 1951 Collision Probably Will Be Repeated

"Both vessels had their radars in operation during a dense fog.....The investigation further revealed that the majority of (ship) accidents were directly due to human failures."

A quote from the Coast Guard inquiry into the Jan. 18 tanker collision just off the Golden Gate Bridge?

No, these lines come from a September, 1951, publication of the Coast Guard sent in by Goerge Ingram, a San Anselmo reader.

The vessels in the quotation referred to are the Mary Luckenbach and the Benevolence, which collided in 1950 outside San Francisco Bay with the loss of 23 lives.

WHILE IT WILL probably be several weeks or possibly months before the Coast Guard reveals its conclusions about the collision of the Oregon Standard and the Arizona Standard, it is very possible that the 1951 findings can simply be reprinted.

While there were no lives lost in the January accident, the collision has received great attention because of the huge oil spill in San Francisco Bay which fouled beaches and killed wildlife.

A week's hearing conducted by the Coast Guard in San Francisco left the onlooker with only one conclusion: plain, old, simple human error (or rather a series of errors) caused the tragedy.

Both ships had radar sets which were in good operating condition and should have provided sufficient information for the tankers to pass each other, even in dense fog, without colliding.

Both ships also had VHF radios — which should have allowed the crews to contact each other with any questions about each other's whereabouts.

Despite the equipment, the tankers collided. It seems certain that the Coast Guard will find that human beings erred in using the radar and the radios.

THE COAST GUARD probably will also conclude that humans being what they are, some additional type of traffic control in the San Francisco Bay is needed.

Despite efforts by conservationists to the contrary, there was no indication at the hearing that Standard Oil bore any particular responsibility for the collision.

Both ship captains testified that Chevron Shipping Co., the Standard subsidiary which owns the two tankers, has never put any pressure on captains to sail when they did not think it was safe.

Furthermore, there are no bonuses or other rewards or penalties for being early or late, they said.

IN FACT, the efforts of a conservationist lawyer to pin the blame on Standard seemed a little childish. After all, leaving ecology completely aside, it is ridiculous to imagine that the oil company would not do everything possible to prevent such a disaster.

Even if company officials had absolutely no feeling about birds or beaches, they surely must not want to spend hundreds of thousands of dollars on such a calamity.

One final note on the collision: we learned during the Coast Guard investigation that one of the ship captains is suffering from a probably fatal illness — and seemingly will never sail again.

Lindbergh Hits At Super Jet

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Charles A. Lindbergh, whose historic Atlantic solo flight took 33 hours, says it would be a mistake to continue development of a supersonic transport (SST) that could make the same New York to Paris flight in five hours.

Lindbergh, a consultant for Pan American World Airways who in recent years has become an active conservationist, said the technology was available to build the plane, but it was unsound from an economical and environmental viewpoint.

WASINGTON WINDOW

Yes, We Can Tell A Lie: George Was Born Feb. 15

By FRANK ELEAZER

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Virginia has reluctantly agreed it can tell a lie about George Washington's birth. Also Stonewall Jackson's—and even Robert E. Lee's.

So you can see that the new federal "Monday holiday" law is catching on.

The law took effect the first of the year and in most places, including his home state, we can forget about revering Feb. 22 as the birth date of our first President and celebrate this event approprately on "the third Monday in February."

That means Feb. 15 this year. And although the great day will move around from year to year, never again will it fall on Feb. 22.

Up to now, Lee and Jackson have been unaccountably overlooked as far as federal holidays are concerned. But Virginia, in the spirit of the new "Monday holiday" law, will memorialize Lee (born Jan. 19) and Jackson (born Jan. 21) jointly on the 18th—which is reasonably close to both birthdays and, more importantly, also a Monday.

The "Monday holiday" law was passed by Congress more than two years ago, to take effect in 1971. It switches three of eight existing government holidays each year to Mondays and creates a ninth, Columbus Day. Also to be commemorated on Monday, it will fall on the second one in October.

The law applies only to federal agencies and employes and the District of Columbia, and of course the mailman, who won't bring you even a bill between Friday and Tuesday. But many state legislatures, like Virginia's, have acted to bring local jubilations in line.

The result is that in most places, for most people, there will now be at least five three-day holidays weekends each year.

IN ADDITION to telling an annual whopper about Washington's birthday, we will hereafter extol Memorial Day on the last Monday in May, instead of May 30; Labor Day (as usual) will be the first Monday in September; Columbus Day (and you can forget Leif Ericsson) will be noted on the second Monday in October; and Veterans Day (formerly Armistice Day) will be moved from Nov. 11 (when it meant something) to the fourth Monday in October (when it won't mean anything but another three days off the job).

Travel agents are among those happiest about the new law, and there may be more business in it also for auto repairmen, morticians and ambulance drivers.

Some middle-aged fogies (well, there is me at least and possibly Rep. Richard Poff, R-Va., who took it especially hard about Washington) fear now that nothing is sacred and that the next thing, they'll be moving Christmas.

So far, we are assured that is out. Christmas will continue to fall on Dec. 25.

Also, New Year's day, in spite of all, will continue to be regretted on Jan. 1. Thanksgiving will still be celebrated on the fourth Thursday in November. (Congress can recall how President Roosevelt burned his fingers fooling with Thanksgiving).

And as for the Fourth of July, there wasn't a thing they could do about that.

Children's Play Planned By Hub

The San Anselmo Recreation Department is sponsoring a theater workshop for children 9 through 12.

The workshop will produce a series of mystery plays called "The New Adventures of Sherlock Holmes."

Rehearsals are on Saturdays from 9:30 a.m. to noon and Mondays from 3:30 p.m. to 5:30 p.m. at the Robson Mansion, 237 Crescent Road.

Applicants may sign up at the recreation office at 1020 Sir Francis Drake Boulevard.

Council To Eye Animal Control

The Tiburon City Council, meeting tomorrow at 7:30 p.m. at city hall, will consider on second reading an animal control ordinance similar to the uniform ordinance adopted by most cities in Marin.

The ordinance would require dogs to be under control of their masters, but not necessarily on leashes.

The council also will consider granting permission for Angel Island State Park Rangers on Paradise Drive for berthing of the park's new 66-foot boat.

Inventory Tax Fight Under Way

Marin County officials and lawmakers have gone to bat to save the county's property owners from being bitten for $55,836 in taxes.

The amount, according to County Auditor-Controller Michael Mitchell, is the difference between tax income lost because of the 30 per cent exemption the state has granted on business inventories for 1971 and the amount the state has agreed to pay the county in reimbursement.

Mitchell said the 30 per cent exemption will lower county revenues by $404,838, but the state has computed that it will only repay $349,002 reimbursement. The board of supervisors has asked Sen. Peter H. Behr, R-Mill Valley, and Assemblyman William T. Bagley, R-San Rafael to help rectify the difference through a special bill.

Bagley and former Sen. John F. McCarthy had to win passage of similar legislation last year. The state granted a 15 per cent inventory exemption in 1970 but did not grant full reimbursement until forced to by Marin's action.

"The state is in effect fooling the public," Mitchell charged yesterday. It "creates a tax relief proposal which it publicly and politically says will be reimbursed to the counties from other state funds," Mitchell added, "but fails to appropriate the equivalent to the business inventory exemptions. The deficit must be covered by other people paying higher taxes."

Two Suspects In Forgery Probe Nabbed

Two Novato residents were arrested Friday and charged were filed against a third Novatan reportedly implicated in a rash of check forgeries.

The district attorney's office yesterday filed charges of burglary, forgery, passing forged checks and receiving stolen property against Bruce Alan Tucker, 22, of 919 Scott Street, Apt. 1. He was to be arraigned today.

Tucker was arrested Thursday and held on $6,250 bail after nine bad checks totalling $315 were passed in Novato and Petaluma, Novato police said.

The checks, police said, were taken in a burglary Jan. 27.

Police said those who passed the checks forged the signature, then made the checks out to themselves.

Arrested Friday on suspicion of forgery and conspiracy to defraud was James Orville Davis, 19, of 557 McClay Road. He posted $1,250 bail to appear in Marin municipal Court today.

A juvenile was arrested with Davis and taken to Juvenile Hall. A second juvenile was arrested Thursday with Tucker.

Chest X-Ray Service Due Temporary Halt

The chest x-ray (minifilm) service at 920 Grand Avenue in San Rafael will be halted temporarily the last half of this month so that new x-ray equipment can be installed.

Dr. Carolyn B. Albrecht, county health officer, said the service will be interrupted from Feb. 16 through Feb. 28. The service will resume March 1 with hours from 10 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Monday, Wednesday and Friday and 1 to 6 p.m. Thursdays.

BCDC Sets Hearing On Cove Apartments

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — A controversial proposal to build an apartment project on Strawberry Cove has been set for a hearing by the Bay Conservation and Development Commission at 2 p.m. March 4 in the State Building, 455 Golden Gate Avenue.

The commission's staff promised last month that when the proposal was reset for hearing it would not be allowed any further postponement. Developer Paul J. Broman of Peacock Gap originally had his proposal set for a commission hearing in November, but has postponed the date repeatedly without explanation.

Broman told the Independent-Journal Wednesday that he would submit revised plans to the Marin County Planning Commission to cut the number of units from 102 to 90. The BCDC, which cannot act on a permit until after a proposed project has all county approvals, will consider only the 102-unit proposal.

Broman intends to seek county approval of the reduction in the number of units as a separate plan, thus a 90-unit proposal will not be before the BCDC on March 4.

Broman's application for a BCDC permit said that the only bay fill for his project would be pilings to support a public pedestrian walkway along the shoreline in front of his project.

The BCDC's jurisdiction over a 100-foot-wide band of shoreline is concerned with the question of public access, thus the commission will consider whether the access Broman proposes would be adequate.

Also at issue will be the Strawberry Recreation District's court action to bar the project on the ground it would deny established public access to the cove across the 6.5-acre parcel. The commission could find that it could not act unless the suit were settled in Broman's behalf, or could condition its approval of a permit on his subsequently winning the suit.

Financing Transit Plan Due Study

Financing rapid transit at a cost up to $987 million will be tackled by the Golden Gate Bridge District's finance committee at 10 a.m. Wednesday in toll plaza offices.

Plans for various transit systems all call for a combination of federal grants, bonds backed by property taxes and district funds.

The least costly of five systems being considered is a $495 million bus rapid transit, which district consultants estimated would require a 2 per cent hike in property taxes throughout the six-county district.

The knotty issue of where to locate the Central Marin ferry terminal will be before the transportation committee at 2 p.m. on Wednesday. The Independent-Journal incorrectly reported Friday that this meeting would be at 10 a.m. Tuesday.

The transportation committee also is scheduled to consider site selection for bus facilities, seating specifications for buses and a proposal by a Peninsula inventor for ferries pulled by an underwater cable.

The full board of directors' regular meeting will be at 10 a.m. Thursday, preceded by the finance-auditing committee at 9:30 a.m. The regular meeting will be one day earlier than usual because Friday is Lincoln's birthday, a legal holiday.

Residential Plan Due Hearing

Plans for a 642-unit residential development near Koch luggage in East Corte Madera will be discussed tonight by the Corte Madera Planning Commission.

The commission, which will meet at 7:30 p.m. at town hall, accompanied the city council and board of design on a tour of properties developed by E. C. Harter and Odenthal Investment Co., which is proposing the development.

Last month, the concept of the development was outlined for the commission.

The commission will also consider rezoning of property in the newly annexed Meadowsweet Drive area and informal discussion with John C. Oglesby for annexation of his property on Lucky Drive to Corte Madera. The land is now part of Larkspur.

Kaplan To Speak At Olney Hall

Dr. Harvey Kaplan of Planned Parenthood-Alameda County will speak on contraception for teenagers at 8 p.m. Thursday in Olney Hall at the College of Marin — first in a series of special programs.

Kaplan's lecture will be the first of a series of College of Marin lectures focusing on "Spaceship Earth: Love It or Leave It."

Population and politics will be the theme for the Feb. 25 lecture at 8:30 p.m. featuring Rep. Paul McCloskey, R-11th District, who is scheduled to speak on "The Government's Role in Population Planning."

The Marin Ecology Center will present the March 11 program at 8 p.m. with discussions on alternative life styles and recycling projects.

Harold Gregg, executive director of the Marin Conservation League, will conduct the program March 25 at 8 p.m. on citizen involvement in protection of the environment.

It takes half a million gallons of water to produce one ton of raw sugar on the island of Maui, says the National Geographic.

Police Program Is Facing Fund Cut

The state is threatening to cancel its grant to Marin's police-community relations program because the Marin Human Rights Commission severed its ties with the project.

The separation culminated a feud between Bella Aaron, human rights commissioner and head of the project, and the human rights commission. Mrs. Aaron and the executive director of the human rights department resigned during the name-calling which followed a charge that Mrs. Aaron was too independent.

In an effort to put the pieces back together, County Administrator Alan Bruce said county officials would meet today with representatives of the California Council on Criminal Justice, which contributes $70,000 a year to the police program.

Cancellation now would lose the county $30,000 dues before the end of April.

"We are hopeful that some arrangement can be made to continue the program," Bruce said.

The Human Rights Department split with the police-community relations project Jan. 21; consequently Robert H. Lawson, executive director of the Council on Criminal Justice, announced the agreement was void.

Bruce noted that the council's contract is with the supervisors, not with the Human Rights Commission. He said the rift between Bella Aaron's project and the commission should have no bearing on state funding.

$66,000 In Taxes Refunded

Cigarette taxes totaling more than $66,000 have been refunded Marin County and the 14 Marin and Southern Sonoma cities, State Controller Houston I. Flournoy announced.

The distribution represents 30 per cent of the revenue deposited in the cigarette tax fund during December.

A breakdown of the refund shows: Marin County, $6,132; Belvedere, $599; Corte Madera, $4,170; Cotati, $618; Fairfax, $1,943; Larkspur, $2,721; Mill Valley, $3,814; Novato, $8,274; Petaluma, $8,435; Rohnert Park, $1,577; Ross, $604; San Anselmo, $3,667; San Rafael, $19,095; Sausalito, $3,471 and Tiburon, $1,931.

Search For New Home To Be Asked

The Marin Senior Coordinating Council, which operates from 914 Fifth Avenue in San Rafael, will ask county supervisors tomorrow for help to find new quarters.

Edward T. Ryken, executive director of the group, said their building will be demolished by the owners, and money will be needed for new headquarters.

County supervisors will also hear from the County Administrator Alan Bruce on what can be done about state cutbacks in aid for nursing homes.

Other items on the supervisors agenda include:

HUMAN RIGHTS - A report from Bruce on the threatened termination of the state grant for Marin's police-community relations program.

GNOSS FIELD — Fixed base operators at the county airport will ask for reduction in the amount of insurance they are required to carry.

FIREHOUSE — Architects Gerson and Overstreet will submit revised plans for a new firehouse-sheriff's substation on Drake Avenue in Marin City. The revised plans show a cost cut from the $118,000 originally estimated last December to $75,000.

HEARINGS — Gus Niederholzer will protest the planning commission's reduction of proposed building density on his 3.4-acre property next to Ross General hospital; Clean Machine Inc. will ask for gasoline pumps as an accessory to a car wash planned on the Highway 101 frontage road at Strawberry; and William Praun of 35 Rancho Drive will protest five apartments that Dr. George Sugarman plans to build in Bel Aire.

The principle of the pneumatic tire was patented by Robert William Thomson of England in 1845.

10 Fifer Ave. - (Lucky Dr. Exit) Corte Madera

Why thousands of Americans will spend $6,700 for a Mercedes-Benz that's three feet shorter than American luxury cars.

At Mercedes-Benz, we define luxury a bit differently than most automobile makers.

To our way of thinking, size for the sake of size is not luxury. It is waste.

If adding an inch to a Mercedes-Benz won't contribute to some function, Mercedes-Benz engineers won't add it.

Eric Dahlquist, in a recent issue of Motor Trend, commented on the size of the American luxury car.

"Stunned by such mass, the passenger enters to find that size does not equate with room..."

The Mercedes-Benz 250 Sedan is three feet shorter than the shortest of the domestic luxury sedans.

Yet it is a curious fact that the 250 concedes almost nothing inside.

"Though not a particularly big car, the accommodation is well-planned and quite roomy enough for consideration by the chauffeur-driven executive." —Motor

The engineer is king

A Mercedes-Benz is as different from a domestic luxury car as automobiles, each with four wheels and an engine in front, can be.

Mercedes-Benz is one of the few automobile makers left in the world where the engineer is still king.

Design decisions are made by an engineer, not a styling whiz or a marketing wizard. At Mercedes-Benz, the engineering department still tells the sales department when a new model is ready.

The result is an automobile that has been built to an engineering ideal.

And an automobile that is fundamentally different than any built in the States.

From oddity to necessity

To the uninitiated, this approach may appear to have disadvantages.

Your first time behind the wheel of a Mercedes-Benz is likely to produce a vague sense of disorientation.

Mercedes-Benz engineers believe both hands belong on the wheel. So they built four critical controls into a single stalk and positioned it a finger's length away.

In its recommended position, the seat seems too far from the wheel. And it's too unyielding to be called "luxurious."

But that strange seat position lets you drive with the wheel at arm's length and your back firmly against the seat's. And that gives you better control.

The "unyielding" seat, it turns out, was designed by orthopedic surgeons to give firm support. You'll appreciate it more after seven hundred miles than you do after seven.

If you press the floor switch to get your high beams, you'll get a squirt in the windshield instead.

That's because a curious-looking stalk, positioned precisely a finger's length from the wheel, embodies four different controls.

High and low beams, turn signals, windshield wipers, and their two-speed control all can be operated without taking your hands from the wheel. Or your eyes from the road.

Such oddities, admittedly, take some getting used to. But there's a reason for every one. And, before you know it, the oddities have become necessities.

No domestic sedan...

It is at the wheel a man discovers the performance characteristics that make Mercedes-Benz unique among the world's motor cars. Mercedes-Benz engineers believe that a car's abilities should be limited only by road and conditions—not by its own design. Every Mercedes-Benz has fully independent suspension front and rear. A design concept used, without exception, on 200-mph grand prix cars.

It provides the maximum possible cornering power over a variety of road surfaces.

No domestic sedan has it.

Every Mercedes-Benz is equipped with four massive disc brakes. Standard, not optional. Because, to our way of thinking, it's unthinkable to relegate the best brakes you can build to the option list.

No domestic sedan has them on all four wheels.

And every Mercedes-Benz has a steering system so precisely balanced that the car seeks a straight path on its own.

No domestic sedan can match it.

Even the Grand Mercedes 600, a three-ton limousine, notes Motor Trend, "...will outrun and outmaneuver many sports cars."

Join the club

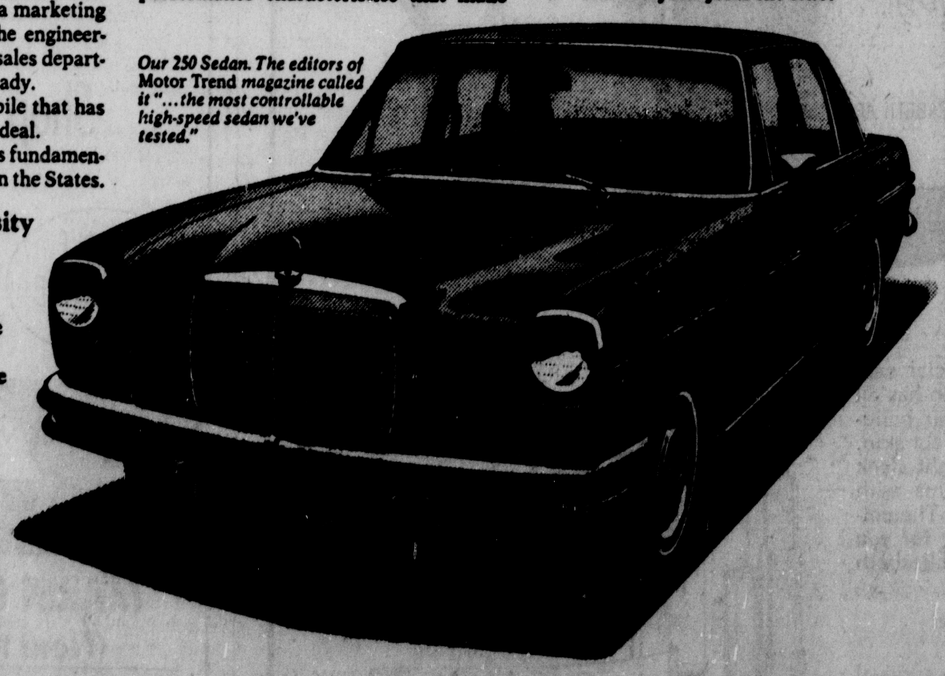
But the final word on the distinction between Mercedes-Benz and domestic luxury cars belongs to a group of Mercedes-Benz owners.

Owners so enthusiastic that they've formed thirty-two chapters of the Mercedes-Benz Club of America.

Each year they hold more than 60 local competitions and 3 national rallies.

It's their opportunity, in performance events, to extend their cars to the limits of which a Mercedes-Benz is capable.

Not everyone joins the club.



Our 250 Sedan. The editors of Motor Trend magazine called it "...the most controllable high-speed sedan we've tested."

Mercedes-Benz owners who rally their cars are a relatively small share of our owners. But, then, no domestic luxury car even has a club.

$6,700?

Our pursuit of engineering ideals has placed Mercedes-Benz automobiles among the world's most costly.

The suggested retail price of the Mercedes-Benz 250 Sedan, with automatic transmission, is $6,343†.

With such popular options as power steering, white sidewall tires, and radio with rear-seat speaker, you can spend over $6,700.

And thirteen of our models cost more, including the 300SEL 6.3—dubbed by Road & Track "merely the world's greatest sedan..."—at $15,958†.

But if your tastes do not run to the conventional luxury car, we think you'll find Mercedes-Benz automobiles well worth the price you pay.

Any luxury car can look good in the country club driveway. Mercedes-Benz looks good in places like Lime Rock, Road America and Laguna Seca.

And if you'll fill out the coupon below, we'll send you our least expensive production. A full-color Mercedes-Benz brochure, absolutely free.

DRESS SHOP OWNER AND MANAGER

By PAT BALMES

The race track is dark and cold every morning at 5:30 a.m. when Carol Hanson in rubber boots walks along the shedrow aisle before the long line of box stalls. In the tack room near 10 stalls awarded to her Sunseeker Farms, the fragile-looking blonde puts coffee on before beginning her morning routine of grooming spirited thoroughbred horses.

Carol, who owns a dress shop at Strawberry Town and Country Village, is a partner with her trainer in the racing stables.

"I can't understand what thrill those owners get who just watch their horses from the stands," says the feminine groom, pitching damp straw out of a stall.

THE CALL, "Hot horse!" announces that trainer and exercise boy have returned on steaming thoroughbreds from their gallop on the track where the trainer rides his experienced "pony" beside each young race horse to calm him and watch him run.

Carol runs to hold the excited two-year-old's reins, as the small man dismounts and reports on her filly's run. She pulls off the light saddle and ties the filly to sponge her long legs with hot, sudsy water.

"In warmer weather I give them a full bath after a gallop," explains Carol, never stopping work while she talks. "But in winter the younger horses particularly have a tendency to catch cold."

Blanketing her sweating filly, Carol leads her to the walking wheel, which resembles a revolving maypole. Three hot horses are tied there already, to cool. They turn the overhead arms as they walk in a circle.

"SOMETIMES I have to run around three times when I'm leading an unmanageable horse before I can catch an arm to tie my horse to," says the slender blonde, who doesn't need to diet because of her strenuous work.

"Once a horse reared and hung himself up at the top of the walking wheel. Not stopping to wait for help, I rushed out to save his life and nearly lost mine!" remembers Carol.

She has learned that handling young thoroughbreds in close quarters is dangerous. An ambulance is stationed at the race track's gate.

She refuses to go into the stall with one of her thoroughbreds, Bad Dog.

Carol explains, half joking and half serious, "Someday I'll have the courage, but not today," because the fractious young horse threw his exercise boy the previous day.

I'VE SEEN too many people taken out from the shedrow by ambulance during the two years I've been working with these horses!"

Carol's head was once cut by a rearing thoroughbred.

"I've got scars all over from being bitten and more black and blue marks than I care to mention," she says.

The first time Carol took a horse to the saddling paddock before a race, Sunseeker, sensing the excitement, dashed before her completely out of control.

"It was lucky I was the first one there. Otherwise I would have wiped everybody out," she relates, remembering her terror.

Assistance came in the form of a restraining halter and lead rope from the men in the barn, but not in time to prevent a very embarrassing moment.

Returning to the walking wheel, Carol unties a cooled horse and leads him back to the shedrow. With the pick she wears on a long string attached to her belt loop, she cleans mud out of the hoofs and bathes and lubricates them. Over and over throughout the brightening morning, Carol repeats her routine (cleaning stalls, saddling, grooming and bathing) while one horse after another is taken to the track for a mile's gallop.

TAKING A rare break, Carol sprints to the track to watch a timed work; a half mile run at almost racing speed to qualify her horse for a race of certain specifications. Carol jogs through other stable areas where girl grooms and women trainers are working.

"Girl grooms are often preferred on the track because they are more conscientious. I take pride in scrubbing out water buckets and keeping the shedrow raked," Carol explains.

At the track, exercise girls are galloping racehorses, their braids bouncing under metal crash helmets. Like Carol, they wear little makeup and workman-like Western pants or chaps. Many of these young women have been reared on race tracks, according to Carol. She also knows of women jockeys, trainers, veterinarians, a woman who has a horse-vanning business and a woman outrider at Bay Meadows, who leads horses to the post.

Carol leaves the track at 10 a.m., but the work with the horses, averaging two hours daily per horse, goes on in the afternoon.

"They get better care than people," says Carol, explaining that the soft bones of the young horses are injured so often that ninty per cent of the race horses at the track have leg problems. Each afternoon the grooms wrap the legs in standing bandages, give medical treatment, fight horses to standstill in turbulator tubs and walk them again at the walking wheel.

DURING THE race meet, which starts Feb. 15, Golden Gate Fields may handle over a million dollars a day, according to the horsewoman.

"The people in Albany became concerned when a track strike threatened because a large percentage of the profits go in taxes for schools," remarks Carol.

"If you have to scratch (withdraw), the vet comes to make sure you're not faking. If a horse with a following, like dapple-gray Sunseeker, is scratched from a race, the track might lose thirty to forty thousand dollars in bets," says the woman who seldom places a bet.

"Being called before the stewards is like being sent to the principal's office," says the owner. "Stewards can suspend you for a year or rule you off the track for life."

PREPARING TO leave the track for her Strawberry shop, Carol relates, "The trainer wouldn't allow me to come to the track in December because I was working late every night at my shop. I missed the horses. I felt like I lost my family."

Hair straight and clothes dirty, Carol goes home for a quick shower before driving to the Strawberry shopping center.

"If it wasn't for hot rollers I'd be in a lot of trouble!" she says. She sets her hair at home and combs it out in the back of her dress shop, completing her daily transition from groom to glamour girl.

Explaining events which lead her to this double life, Carol says that she left home on a farm in Minnesota when she was 17 with $15 advance on the cream money in her pocket. She worked as a secretary in Minneapolis for 10 years.

"ONE DAY I just got tired of it. I had taken enough shorthand!" Carol recalls. She came to San Francisco in 1964, determined to earn enough to start her own business.

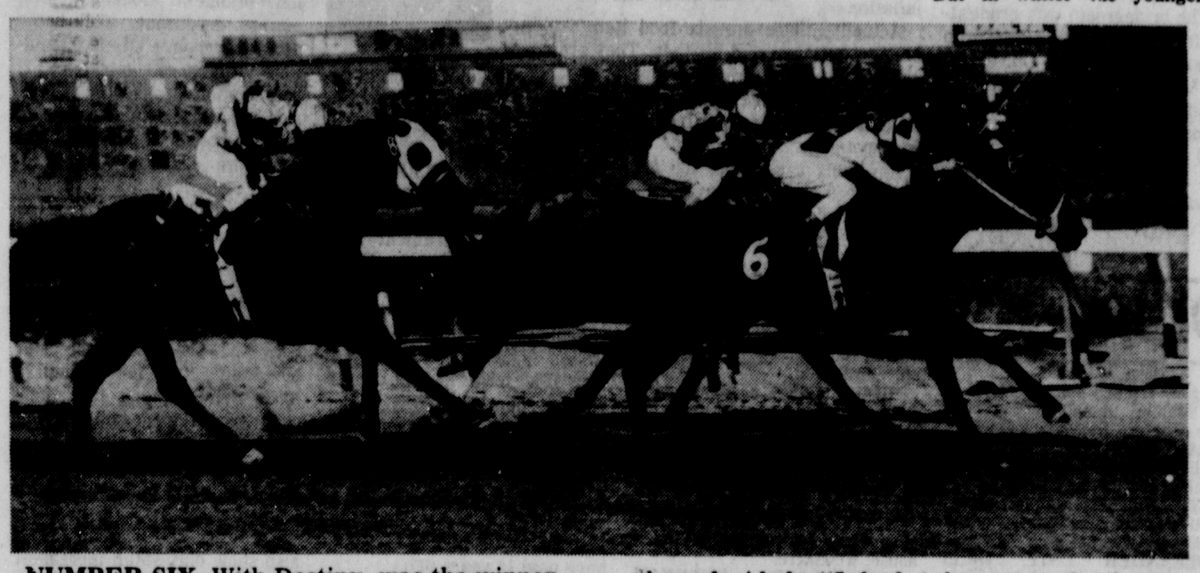
"I took a job as secretary from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. and worked at Bimbo's Night Club from 6 p.m. to 2 a.m. as a hat check girl, to see how long I could do it before I died," she jokes, revealing that a wig helped her make the speedy change. "It was an experience I will never forget."

Within a year, Carol had earned enough to buy the franchise for the junior size shop.

Three years later, Carol claimed her first race horse and went into partnership in Sunseeker Farms. And now she owns her shop independently.

"I knew nothing about managing a dress shop or handling race horses. It was 'ignorance is bliss.' But I had a lot of help learning both businesses," says Carol.

Regarding her profits, the groom and shop manager quips, "The stable is erratic and the shop is stable."



NUMBER SIX, With Destiny, was the winner of a race at Bay Meadows last September when the thoroughbred horse was owned by Sunseeker Farm. A partner in the horse racing stable, Carol Hanson worked as a secretary in Minneapolis for 10 years and then decided, "I had taken enough shorthand," and came to San Francisco. She worked at two full-time jobs, bought into a dress shop and now the stable. About business profits, she says, "The stable is erratic, and the shop is stable." (I-J photo)

CAROL HANSON'S dangerous work in race track stables contrasts sharply with her fashions career as owner-manager of a junior-size dress shop in Strawberry Town and Country Village. A partner in Sunseeker Farms racing stable, Carol hurries to the track before dawn each morning to care for her thoroughbreds, before coming to her shop.

Marin Women

Auxiliary Takes An Active Part

It all began with a tea 25 years ago because Sunny Hills, then a home for orphans in San Anselmo, needed a group to help with the children at the home and to raise funds.

Tomorrow the Sunny Hills Junior Auxiliary will celebrate the anniversary of their founding by honoring many past presidents and welcoming 10 new members at a meeting at the Outdoor Art Club in Mill Valley.

Prior to the auxiliary's formation much of the orphanage's financial support had come from the Grape Festival and the Charity Ball, held annually since 1931 the night before the festival.

THE AUXILIARY took over the work of putting on the formal ball, and in 1946 had more than 600 persons for an evening of dining and dancing at the Meadow Club in Fairfax. Sunny Hills Juniors continued to sponsor the ball until last year when it was decided there was not enough interest in formal balls, and a dominoes tournament was held instead.

House tours, fashion luncheon series, boat trips, Christmas ice shows and car shows in conjunction with fashions have been held through the years as ways of raising funds, but as the times change so have the auxiliary members constantly setting new goals and challenges for themselves.

The auxiliary has always placed an emphasis on direct services to the children at Sunny Hills. In the early years they often packed up picnic lunches and loaded the children into station wagons for outings.

The Sunny Hills Home saw a need to change and in 1956 became a residential treatment center for adolescents with severe emotional problems. The orphans had been easy to entertain, but older children required specialized treatment. Direct volunteer relationships required special training.

For a time auxiliary members slipped back into fund raising esclusively, supplying the money for Valentine and graduation parties, Christmas and graduation gifts and Christmas trees for each cottage at Sunny Hills. They have continued to supply funds for these extras by sponsoring horse shows and other fund raisers but at the same time expanded services to the day treatment program begun last year when the Sunny Hills on campus school was completed.

Day treatment youngsters are referred to Sunny Hills by Marin County school districts or by private referrals because they do not fit into any county school program. They attend school at Sunny Hills from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. From 3 to 5 p.m. they either attend an after school recreation program or receive counciling similar to that of residential children.

Parents of these children are charged a fee according to their ability to pay, and the Junior Auxiliary has set as its goal the object of raising funds for day treatment scholarships to pick up the deficit. Members have also extended involvement to include direct volunteer services with the day care adolescents.

Ten auxiliary members meet at Sunny Hills once a month to learn about care of these young persons and then report back to the full membership. This training has allowed members and their husbands to take Sunny Hills children horse back riding, to ball games and cultural events, dinners in restaurants, on bicycle rides, boat trips and to the circus.

Members are also called on to drive the children to medical appointments.

It is difficult to remember when the Sunny Hills Junior Auxiliary last had a tea. —J.L.

SKIRTING THE ISSUE

There are several ways to wear short shorts without being quite so obvious. One is to cover them with an overskirt. This was designed by Glaudia and presented by George Halley in New York. (UPI telephoto)

HELEN HELP US!

By HELEN BOTTEL

If Family Dawdlers Depend On Your Prodding Don't Quit Now

DEAR HELEN:

My wife says I have an anxiety complex because I would rather be early than late. She even wrote to you about it. Remember the letter concerning the husband who got ready half an hour ahead of time and paced until his family "went up the wall?"

Well, I took the hint. The other night I made sure she knew when we were supposed to meet our friends. Then, after I was dressed, I quietly read a book. I did not pace. I did not point to the clock. I did not go out and start the car while she was getting on her girdle. I was calm and patient —and we were half an hour late.

But instead of learning her lesson, do you know what she told our friends? It was all my fault, she said, because she depended on me to prod her and there I was sitting relaxed and easy so she figured she had plenty of time.

Moreover, my change of character darn near did me in. A born pacer does not take easily to the "sit and be late" role.

Tell me, Helen, in the battle of the sexes, does the male ever win? — BACK TO ANXIETY

DEAR B TO A:

Not unless the wife is suddenly struck dumb.

Moral: Don't change character in mid-life, if your family has come to depend on prodding. Those dawdlers need you. Actually, this is a good combination (and I speak from experience): Mr. Early married to Mrs. Late means they hit a compromise and arrive on time. — H.

P.S. Read on:

DEAR HELEN:

My husband is a Worrier — Capital "W." Or was. That's what bothers me. Do you suppose he has found someone else?

If I was maybe three hours late from shopping (you know how time flies) I'd come home to find him frantic, thinking I'd been in a wreck or something. Should an evening club meeting last longer than expected, I'd better call or he'd be calling the hospitals. When I'm out of town, he has to know when I'll be back, or he imagines me kidnapped and ravished by the roadside. (Or did)

Well this fretting gets one down, so we had words. Capital "W."

Now suddenly he has stopped worrying. I called one night last week two hours after I was supposed to be home, and Helen, he was actually irked because "I waked him out of a sound sleep." Another time I telephoned and didn't even get an answer. I rushed right home and there he was in front of the television, but his hands were cold. Had he just come in?

Moreover, he smiled and called me "fussbudget" when he was late from work yesterday. (He's never late getting home).

Could it be my husband doesn't love me any more? — NOW WORRIED

DEAR NOW:

More likely: Could be your husband is teaching you a lesson.

So now you know: It's great when someone cares enough to worry about you . . . and a phone call home when you're late is a wonderful way to say, "I care enough to get in touch." — H.

DEAR HELEN:

Thank you for printing the address of "Singles Information Service." I received the organization's useful bulletin on computer dating, and want to add my vote to that of many others: Let's make S.I.S. a national group, so that the ever-growing number of single people can find assistance for their special problems —i.e. where singles clubs are located, which are on the square; housing information; tax hints, etc. — MR. T. T.

Chicken, Bananas, Orange Juice Are Cheaper Than 14 Years Ago

By ARTHUR E. ROWSE

WASHINGTON — In these trying times, would you believe that there are any living costs still below what they were between 1957 and 1959?

Well, there are, and if you could exist only on things like fried chicken and bowling balls you would have no cause to complain about inflation.

Actually, there are six food items selling below what they sold for then. They are fried chicken, bananas, fresh orange juice, frozen orange juice, frozen lemonade and frozen french fried potatoes.

Assuming a score of 100 for the 1957-59 period, the averages for these six items in order for October, the latest month detailed by the Bureau of Labor Statistics, were 91.2, 97.2, 90.4, 89.9, 96.2 and 93.3.

A few other items have risen less than 10 per cent while the average for all food items surveyed by the government went up 33 per cent. These are chicken breasts 107.5, ice cream 104.7 cookies 107.8 canned pineapple-grapefruit juice 106.9, Italian salad dressing 106.1, eggs 106.3 tea 107.4 and canned chicken soup 102.6.

BASED ON these government figures, it is thus theoretically possible to fill a shopping bag — but not all nutritional gaps — with these 14 food products and pay no more than you would have paid 14 years ago.

Averages are misleading figures, and there are indications that the government's Consumer Price Index does not show the full extent of inflation. But comparisons between products are accurate and can be useful.

Price reductions have also occurred on non-food items and some services. Using 100 as the price in 1957-59, the average price of all appliances surveyed was down to 87.6 in October.

Individual appliance items were down to 81.8 fo canister-type vacuum cleaners, 88.1 for electric refrigerator-freezers and 93.1 for electric automatic washing machines. Gas and electric ranges were listed at 101.6.

Other appliances listed as being up only slightly in price since December, 1963, are electric automatic clothes dryers 103.2, portable electric room heaters 102.6 and garbage disposal units 108.8.

THE ONLY other non-food items with lower prices are nylon seamless stockings 99.6. aerosol deodorants 97.0, home permanent wave kits 98.8, multiple vitamin concentrates 92.2, prescription drugs 90.0, television tubes 97.5, television sets 80.4, radios 76.4, portable tape recorders 90.7, stereo phonograph records 97.8 and super 8 zoom-lens movie cameras 81.2. The base period for some of these items was December, 1963.

Among non-food items that have risen less than 10 per cent over the years are polyester blend slips 108.9, cotton diapers 105.3, wrist watches 104.2, new cars 108.7, aerosol shaving cream 103.9, 35mm color film 100.3, golf balls 105.2, bowling balls 103.5 and domestic cigars 108.9.

Furniture and bedding prices also show only small increases. But the base period was June, 1970, for some items. Based on 1957-59 figures, the index for soft surface rugs was up to only 103.7. Since December, 1963, the index for bed pillows of kapok or polyester went up to 108.0.

An example of a misleading price index is the one for prescription drugs. By taking only certain drugs at a time near when they were introduced, the index fails to show the substantial increases listed by drug manufacturers themselves in prices of nearly all drugs to pharmacists.

For the full details, ask for a free copy of the Consumer Price Index for October from the Bureau of Labor Statistics, Washington, D.C. 20212.

Today is Monday, Feb. 8, the 39th day of 1971.

The moon is between its first quarter and full phase. The morning stars are Mercury, Venus, Mars and Jupiter. The evening star is Saturn. Those born on this day are under the sign of Aquarius.

On this day in history:

In 1587 Mary, Queen of Scots, was beheaded after being charged with plotting the murder of Britain's Queen Elizabeth I.

In 1940 every 10th person in two villages near Warsaw, Poland, was shot in reprisal for the deaths of two German soldiers.

In 1963 Premier Karim Kassim of Iraq was overthrown by a military coup. He was executed the next day.

In 1964 Princess Irene of The Netherlands renounced her right to the throne and was married to Spanish Prince Juan Carlos.

A thought for the day: Benjamin Franklin said, "There never was a good war or a bad peace."

HOW TO PLAY

WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Sometimes Silence Is Golden During Bidding In Tourneys

When a hand obviously belongs to the opponents, should you enter the bidding or should you keep quiet? The advantage of making an overcall is that your partner may be able to suggest a paying sacrifice bid; or that he may make a favorable opening lead. The disadvantage of bidding is that you may tell the opponents where the few missing high cards are. This disadvantage was fatal in one of the hands played a few weeks ago in a match between teams representing Houston and Dallas.

NO TROUBLE

Brad Gentry, one of the leading Houston experts, had no trouble making six diamonds with the South hand. He felt sure that East held the king of hearts for his overcall of two spades. This was enough information to chart a winning course.

Declarer drew two rounds of trumps, led a heart to the ace and returned the low heart from dummy. East played low with a good, casual motion, but South put up the queen of hearts without a quiver.

This was, of course, the winning play. Since Gentry didn't lose a heart trick he could afford to lose a spade. If East had put up the king of hearts, he would have won the heart trick, but there would be no spade trick for the defense; South would cash the queen of hearts to discard the losing spade from the dummy.

GUESSES WRONG

The contract and the opening lead were the same at the other table of the match, but the outcome was different. South drew two rounds of trumps, led a heart to the ace and returned the low heart drom dummy. East played low very casually, just as at the first table.

The difference was that East had not bid at the second table. South had no way of guessing which opponent had the king of hearts. South decided to try a finesse with the ten of hearts instead of playing the queen.

SILENCE GOLDEN

West won with the jack of hearts, and South eventually lost a spade trick as well. At the second table, East's silence during the bidding and his correct casual play in hearts pushed declarer in the wrong direction. Silence may be golden at the bridge table.

DAILY QUESTION

As dealer, you hold:
♠ - Q J 9 8 7 4 3
♥ - K 8 7 4
♦ - 5
♣ - 7.

What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid three spades if you are not vulnerable, especially if the opponents are vulnerable.

If your side is vulnerable, you should pass at rubber bridge; but a shutout bid of three spades may still produce good results at tournament bridge.

Posey Evokes An Inner Excitement

By MARY LOU STRIBLING

SAN FRANCISCO — It is a good feeling to see a fine exhibit and leave with that sense of inner excitement which can perhaps best be described as "inspiration." The one-man show of paintings by Ernest Posey at the California Palace of the Legion of Honor provides such a rare experience.

Most of the works are monumental in size, some composed of several sections mounted together in a single frame. But size alone does not account for their immediate stunning impact. They appear to be self-lighted by mysteriously fluorescent pigments, and it is only after examining them closely that you discover the effect is achieved by bouncing vibrating colors against each other.

You have the eerie sensation of looking through the windows of a room suspended in space, and feel an urgency to see everything at once before the scenes change or drift out of sight.

Several of the paintings have astronomical themes. In "Eclipse," two overlapping black moons are silhouetted against a halo of white light in a sky flaming with melting colors. "Star Charts" is a composite of glistening pinwheels which seem to be woven of gossamer threads radiating out from tiny points of light.

Several pieces derived from analytical studies of the compositional structures of paintings from earlier periods in art history. "The feast of St. Frances" is a reverential work with the order of some of the Renaissance portraits of saints, where the primary figure was placed in a position of central importance, with angels and other celestial symbols symmetrically arranged around it.

The segmented patterns and textures of "The Heart of San Anselmo" have the decorative quality of an aerial night view of a city. According to the artist, it was inspired by Egyptian drawings, which in turn he translated into a maze of hub-like intersections, curving streets, and twinkling lights from traffic signals, stores, and houses.

Posey, who is a resident of San Anselmo, sees his present style as the result of a series of logical stages. He attended an industrial art school for several years, where he learned to use an air brush and other mechanical devices, and acquired a respect for good craftsmanship. Later, while he was studying fine arts in Louisiana, he worked periodically as a float painter for the Mardi Gras parades.

His interest in certain theatrical color effects possibly originated there, but it has been disciplined and recycled into pure drama.

Emergency Job Plan Is Urged

WASHINGTON (UPI) —With unemployment the highest in 10 years, Sens. Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis., and Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., called today for an emergency program of public service jobs.

The two lawmakers asked the mayors of 16 of the nation's largest cities to testify on an emergency employment bill that would earmark $750 million in federal outlays this year to ease unemployment.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics said last Friday there were 5.4 million Americans —6 per cent of the work force — without work in January, the highest number since 1961.

Nelson and Javits rounded up 32 co-sponsors from both parties for their bill. They said they hoped "to rush the bill through the legislative process," but set no timetable.

Under the bill, governors, mayors and other public agencies would be authorized to hire the unemployed for local public service jobs in recreation, health, law enforcement and education. The federal government would pay 80 per cent of the cost, including wages.

President Nixon vetoed a public service employment bill last year, contending it would lock people into "dead end, WPA" type jobs. But he suggested a transitional, short term program of public service jobs might be useful.

Dazzling Debussy In Pair Of Small-Scale Concerts

Two smaller scale concerts in Marin yesterday — each a gem in its own class — were the Paul Palmer piano recital last night in Dominican College's Angelico Hall and the Marin Arts Quartet second concert of its season yesterday afternoon at the Outdoor Art Club in Mill Valley.

Palmer, a young newcomer to the Bay Area, gave a superb performance. Without personal showmanship or distracting mannerisms, he was totally involved in the music and made it say everything. Exceptionally admirable was the clarity of texture due partly to his touch and partly to beautifully controlled pedaling so necessary in Angelico to avoid excessive resonance.

Though he was not note-perfect in the opening Bach-Rachmaninoff Suite in E Major — a common flaw often caused by initial nervousness — Palmer revealed a dazzling command of pianistic resources in his second number, the awesome Brahms variations and fuge on a Handel theme. Noted were the young pianist's lovely cantabile tone, driving power and keen sense of rhythm.

It is quite remarkable to hear a pianist who is master of styles requiring the utmost ethereal delicacy as well as impassioned power. His "Reflets Dans L'Eau" and "Jeux D'Eau" were among the most exquisite Debussy I have heard, and equally impressive was the percussive dynamism of his Prokofiev Sonata No. 3 in A Minor and the glittering impressionism of the contemporary Argentine composer Alberto Ginaster's sonant which made a brilliant finale.

Palmer also played three brief Kodaly pieces that were charming. Though the concert was long, I regretted I could not stay for encores.

Highlight of the Marin Arts Quartet concert was harpist Anne Adam's performance of the Debussy sacred and profane dances for harp and strings. Of course the harp is ideally suited to full realization of the shimmering beauty of the Debussy idiom, and Miss Adams's technical fluency combined with the artistry of the quartet produced a ravishing tonal fabric of muted opalescent colors.

The quartet, composed of violinists Charles Meacham and Michael Gerling, violist Lucien Mitchell, and cellist Jean Mitchell, is a well matched and balanced group, especially since Mitchell has taken over the viola part.

They gave a smooth performance of the opening quartet movement in C Minor, a posthumous Opus B by Schubert, and went on to the piquant Quartet No. 2 of the Mexican composer Silvestre Revueltas. I could, however, see nothing characteristically Mexican about it — perhaps because of distortion baused by its contemporary dissonance, though that was not extreme.

Major work of the afternoon was the romantic Dvorak Quartet in F Major, a highly satisfying piece lyrically and rhythmically by that often unjustly denigrated Czech composer.

Wyss Introduced; A So-So Concert

By MAYBELLE SPECKMANN

Saturday night's program in the San Francisco Symphony's four-concert Marin series introduced the orchestra's assistant conductor, Niklaus Wyss, to Marin music lovers, with not entirely satisfactory results.

Personally, the young Swiss maestro captivated the audience that did not quite fill the Terra Linda High School gymnasium, but musically Wyss was something of a disappointment. Though ingratiating and undoubtedly very talented, he seems to lack at this point the inspiration and force of personality to take full commanf of an important orchestra in major works.

Not getting to hear Zino Francescatti in the great Brahms violin concerto, as heard in the San Francisco regular series last week, was disappointing but understandable, since a second performance by a world famed virtuoso would be prohibitive financially. But the substitution of the Mozart G Minor Symphony No. 40 was disappointing because its potentials were not fully realized.

Ideally, this symphony, a rare departure from classical serenity in Mozart insturmental works, should have a feverish intensity, even brilliant exuberance in the finale. Instead the performance was pedestrian partly because of too slow tempi.

Idiosyncrasies of Wyss's conducting style were most apparent in this symphony and the opening Beethoven overture to "Prometheus," which should express Beethoven's boldly original and fiery creative spirit. Tossing and wagging motions of Wyss's left arm and hand seemed to lack specific focus and significance, and he directed most of his attention to the violins with consequent weakness in bass sonority. The effect was too diffuse and formless.

After the intermission the situation improved greatly, first with a sparkling and effervescent performance of Hugo Wolf's "Italian Serenade," followed by a quite exciting suite from Stravinsky's popular ballet "Petrouchka."

In the serenade Wyss was completely at ease, and I wondered if this kind of light-hearted work may be his special forte. The high point for me was the beautifully lyrical English horn passages played by Raymond Duste — no surprise, since Duste, who is leader of the Bach-to-Mozart Chamber Group, has long been a prime favorite with Mill Valley candlelight concert series audiences.

"Petrouchka" was often scintillating, with many opportunities for admirable individual instrumental soloes, particularly the piano. However, I had the feeling that the orchestra itself was in command and that the dramatic impact would have been much greater with Seiji Ozawa at the helm. He will be for the next two concerts on March 27, when Marin's own violist Rolf Persinger and young pianist Andre Watts will be solosits, and on May 22 for the "Four Views of Romeo and Juliet."

Louisiana has been nicknamed the Child of the Mississippi River.

Invasion Of Privacy Is Probe Issue

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The government has started an investigation to determine if there is an invasion of privacy in the use of Social Security numbers by retail stores, credit agencies, police departments and others.

The use of such numbers as a convenient method of keeping track of people has become widespread in recent years, even though the identification numbers were supposed to be kept secret when the program was set up in the 1930s.

Sen. Sam J. Ervin, D-N.C., said his subcommittee on constitutional rights has received numerous complaints that the system is being abused.

He released a letter today from Secretary Elliott L. Richardson of health, education and welfare, in which Richardson said he was "concerned that if the Social Security numbers were used too broadly such widespread use and dependence upon the number might lend itself to abuses of individual privacy."

Richardson ordered the Social Security Administration to review its policies on the use of the number.

In 1947 the War and Defense departments and the Air Force were combined in the Department of Defense.

Two Union Leaders Get Work Leaves

Two of three union officials jailed last Wednesday for contempt of court in connection with a Valentine's Day riot at the Independent-Journal, were released from Marin County Jail today to report to their San Francisco office.

Leon Olson, president of San Francisco Typographical Union 21, and Donald Abrams, a vice president of the union, were released on the county's work furlough program.

Jack Goldberger, president of Periodical Drivers and Helpers Local 921, remained in jail, ineligible for the program.

Jesse Johnson, work furlough officer with the Marin County Probation Department, said Olson and Abrams were admitted to the program because they work regular hours, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Goldberger's hours were not regular, Johnson said, and his whereabouts could not be know at all times.

Olson and Abrams will be released at 7 a.m. each weekday and are to report back to the jail at 7 p.m. each day.

The three were sentenced to 15 days in jail by Judge Thomas F. Keating of Marin Superior Court, who found them guilty of violating an injunction he issued Jan. 28, 1970, limiting picketing and forbidding violence by the unions against the I-J, its employees or customers.

Olson and Goldberger were fined $1,500 each. Abrams was fined $750. Payment of fines has been deferred pending a superior court hearing Feb. 24.

The newspaper was struck Jan. 7, 1970, by the typographical union.

Probation For Printer In I-J Case

I-J Special Report

FAIRFIELD — A 60-year-old San Francisco printer today was placed on probation for three years and ordered to spend three weekends in jail for firing a bullet through a window of the Independent-Journal building in San Rafael last June.

Judge Ellis R. Randall of Solano County Superior Court also told Henry Arthur Stacy to make $230 restitution for the damage he caused.

Judge Randall noted that Stacy, a member of San Francisco Typographical Union 21 which has been on strike against the I-J since Jan. 7, 1970, was a "hard working man" who had been a mostly law-abiding citizen until this arrest. (His only two previous arrests had been some years ago for bookmaking.)

"Nevertheless," the judge said, his being "emotionally disturbed" by the strike did not warrant his "using a firearm in a manner that someone might have been hurt."

Marin Deputy Dist. Atty. Ernest C. Zunino said today that he had recommended that Stacy be sent to jail for six months. The Solano County probation department had suggested a 10-day jail sentence, but the judge imposed a lighter judgement.

Stacy will serve his jail time in Marin County.

Stacy had earlier pleaded guilty to a felony charge of shooting at an occupied building. At the time of the guilty plea, a misdemeanor count of having a loaded gun in his car was dismissed.

Stacy was arrested after police were called to the I-J building about 4:45 a.m. on June 20 by a security guard who had seen a car drive around the plant several times moments before a .38 caliber bullet went through the window.

Police found Stacy in a car parked in a municipal lot a block away. A .38-caliber revolver was found on the seat of his car.

His case was transferred to Solano County after his attorney won a change of venue on the grounds he could not receive a fair trial because of publicity in the I-J.

Townhouse Pitch Due Discussion

The Novato Planning Commission will consider an application by Standards Growth Properties to construct 88 townhouses on the south side of San Marin Drive, east of San Carlos Way, at 8 p.m. today at the Novato Community House.

Commissioners also will consider precise development plans for the 900-unit second phase of the Western Oaks townhouse development at the south end of Novato Boulevard. The developer is Western Hosts.

POLLUTION TRAINING

Learning Smog's Smells

By FRANK FARRARA

RICHMOND — It was the kind of school that made one wish one had a cold.

Noses were saturated with the smells of smog as people whiffed and sniffed the odors of common air pollutants at the John F. Kennedy High School in Richmond Saturday.

They were attending the "smell school" conducted by the Stop Smog Committee of Richmond and intended to improve accuracy in identifying pollutants.

"We're trying to get people to know what they are smelling so they can give quick accurate reports to the Bay Area Pollution Control District," said Committee Chairman Katherine Lord of Richmond.

At the first table, a kindly lady gave us a sniff of high sulphur crude oil that cleared our sinuses and snapped our head back several inches.

The program said: "Fumes of crude oil can cause dizziness to those who smell it," and we believed it.

Lined up in tin cans were the smells of the Richmond area, crude oil, gasoline, tar and asphalt, which Mrs. Lord described as "the background smells . . these things that are always here."

Visitors, arriving clear-nosed from the outdoor air, made faces and grunted "ugh" when they got a concentrated whiff of the familiar odors.

By contrast the smell of gasoline seemed mild, but the program warned: "Gasoline fumes breathed over a long period of time can have an adverse effect on the liver."

Those who survived the first stop were ushered to a laboratory where a warning sign said anyone suffering from emphysema, allergies, respiratory or heart ailments shouldn't enter.

For those people there was a postscript which read: "You probably shouldn't be living in Richmond."

Inside a high school chemist uncorked a small tube and out came nitrogen dioxide, a chief factor in photo-chemical smog, which drifted up in a brown cloud, similar to the thin brown line seen hovering over the Bay Area on smoggy days.

It had an odor similar to that of chlorine and the program said it comes from power plants, steam boilers and chemical plants.

Elsewhere in the room, a volunteer sprayed a mist of ammonia past visitors' noses, his companion burned small pieces of rubber and a fourth man offered a smell of sulphur dioxide, which smelled like sulphur burning.

Then a breath of air and into another laboratory, where the pervading odor was hydrogen sulfide, best described as the smell of rotten eggs.

It even overpowered the odor of mercaptans, chemicals which give odor to natural gas which is odorless and have the smell of rotten onions, and carbon disulfide, which had the smell of rotten cabbage.

It was time for another walk in the air because by then the smells were all mixed up in our nose.

The finale was a visit to a small tank of chlorine gas, in a compartment opened only briefly for a quick smell.

It didn't have a strong odor, but the program warned it was "a most dangerous, choking, suffocating, highly toxic agent. It was the first gas used to kill men during the first World War."

On the way out, we took a whiff of oxygen offered by two Richmond firemen, but passed up the cologne the committee had at the exit for those who wanted a change of odor.

We picked up a certificate of proficiency signed by Irving of Pinole, who described himself as a supreme warlock. It certified that we were a "sniffing smog dog," and "therefore qualified to guide the nasally-deprived to chimneys spewing noxious industrial air-sewage."

All the committee hopes is that the visitors, about 150, became acquainted with the pungent odors and can make accurate reports when they complain to the Bay Area Air Pollution Control District.

Suicide Prevention Center Lacks Funds

Marin's hatchling Suicide Prevention Center faces a crisis nearly as serious as those it seeks to prevent.

A cadre of two dozen volunteers completed a series of weekly training sessions Saturday. The many women and a few men expressed intense eagerness to get to work.

The center has an office for the volunteers to work in, and an organized board of directors to guide the operation.

But the center has only a few hundred dollars in the bank. The directors face the decision whether to go ahead on the "God will provide" theory that a working center will save lives and attract gifts. Or, should the board seek enough funds to install expensive telephone equipment and guarantee the salary of a professional director, before open for business?

The crossroads may be reached at the directors' next scheduled meeting, Feb. 17 in a meeting room at St. Paul's Episcopal Church in San Rafael.

Mrs. Walter Lyons, president of the center and a veteran of such work elsewhere in the Bay Area has resigned after seeing the Marin nucleus of volunteers through the training. She said, as she announced her resignation Saturday, that she hopes the remaining directors can find a way to open the center soon.

The board so far has taken a conservative approach to funding, she noted without criticism.

The suicide prevention center has applied for several grants. Members of older, operating centers in San Mateo, San Francisco and Berkeley spoke to the volunteers Saturday. All reported that grants and continuing governmental support usually only materialize after antisuicide centers have been in operation for some time, often more than a year.

Mrs. Lyons and other speakers voiced fears that the original cadre, trained but frustrated by idleness, might fade away if a center cannot open soon.

Dr. Fred Phillips, one of two psychiatrists who had helped train the volunteers, held another viewpoint.

He warned the center would need a regular income "or else we're in a very unfortunate situation." He said the fiscal picture was "more hopeful than in the past," but warned against trying to open the center without adequate funding to remain in operation.

He suggested that other organizations such as the Marin Association for Mental Health could put the suicide prevention center's volunteer manpower to good use for the interim.

Phillips and Dr. James Bakhtiar have explained the psychiatric background of suicide attempts to the trainees. The volunteers have put in shifts at the antisuicide center in Berkely, observing and listening to calls.

Some calls, they reported, came from persons in crisis, actually attempting suicide. Others were from lonely souls, and yet other calls seemed to come from persons seemingly wanting ego reassurance through playing a sort of game with the sympathetic volunteers.

Gas Pump Crash Ends In Arrest

A 26-year-old Fairfax man was arrested Saturday by Corte Madera police on suspicion of possessing marijuana and narcotics and drunken driving after he crashed into a gas pump at a Nellen Avenue service station.

According to police, Bruce Thomas Badaracco of 77 Live Oak Avenue, sped into the Corte Madera Enco station at 200 Nellen Avenue at about 35 miles per hour.

Narrowly mising an attendant and parked car, Badaracco's vehicle crashed into a pump causing undetermined damage, officers said.

Officers said Badaracco refused to take a road-side sobriety test and a subsequent search turned up a plastic bag of suspected marijuana and about 20 tablets of suspected dangerous drugs.

Badarocco was released on $1,250 bail to appear tomorrow in Marin Municipal Court.

Transit Route On Board Agenda

The Mill Valley School District board, meeting today at 8 p.m. at Park School, will reaffirm its opposition to a rapid transit corridor along the Northwestern Pacific Railroad right-of-way through Mill Valley.

The board will hear a report from Trustee William P. Everts Jr. on a hearing in Mill Valley Jan. 28 on the Golden Gate Bridge district's five transit alternatives.Persons at that hearing generally agreed with the board's position.

The board also will readvertise for bids on the 1.68-acre Harvard Avenue property, which the district is selling. A single bid opened Jan. 25 was rejected because it was too low.

Sign On Agenda

An application by Standard Oil Co. for a free-standing sign at its station at 90 Corte Madera Center will be discussed today when the Corte Madera Planning Commission meets at 7:30 o'clock in town hall. The planners will also discuss residential parking problems.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Chances For Cold Vaccine Dim Because Many Viruses Involved

A common cold has been defined as an infectious runny nose. The discharge contains a virus which is passed along when breathing, sneezing, blowing the nose, or via contaminated fingers. So many different viruses are capable of causing the common cold that a successful vaccine seems unlikely.

COLDS RARELY are limited to the nose because the membranes lining the passageway are continuous with those that line the sinuses, throat, windpipe and bronchi. This is why headache, sore throat, or bronchitis often coexist. Viruses cannot keep out the bacteria so bacterial involvement, such as ear infection or pneumonia may follow.

Curing the common cold is not simple because viruses set up housekeeping and damage the cells of the nasal membranes. Reversing this damage is not practicable. Mark time and the cold cures itself. What we need is a medicine or drug to prevent viruses from multiplying within the cells.

INTERFERON is a naturally occurring substance that prevents almost any known virus from multiplying. It is difficult to work with because the substance is effective only on cells from which it originated. The product is easily made from chicken cells but these do not prevent infections in human cells. Research is being conducted on interferon-inducers. The substances get into the cells and trigger off the mechanism so that the cell starts producing interferon. In other words, the individual makes his own interferon to protect himself against almost any virus infection.

Many physicians are asked, "What do you do when you have a cold?" The majority grin and bear it, so long as there is no fever or marked symptoms. They take aspirin, a decongestant or antihistamine to improve the feeling of well-being or relieve the pain of a raw throat. But some doctors use the infection as a good excuse to spend a day in bed, sleeping, inhaling steam, or catching up on their reading.

(Questions on medical topics will be answered by mail if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to the Independent-Journal.)

ANTI-APPETITE PILLS

G.N. writes: When I take diet pills, my vision becomes blurred. Do you think I'm allergic to these tablets?

REPLY

No. Unpleasant side reactions follow the use of many drugs. However, bring this symptom to your physician's attention because you may have a coexisting eye condition.

FLU SHOTS AND COLDS

L.A.R. writes: Is it safe to take a flu shot when you have a cold?

REPLY

Is it better to wait a week or 10 days until the cold has subsided. Otherwise you might have a reaction with chills, fever and headache.

IMPULSE TO STEAL

X.T. writes: How are kleptomaniacs treated?

REPLY

They are given psychiatric care consisting chiefly of long discussions to uncover past experiences that might account for their odd behavior.

SURGICAL CYSTITIS

B.I. writes: Does bladder infection always follow an abdominal operation?

REPLY

Not always but it often occurs when the individual has been catheterized.

Poet, Singers Plan Benefit For Indians

Poet William Everson, formerly Brother Antoninus, will read his works in a benefit for the Alcatraz Indians at 7:30 p.m. Sunday at the Community Congregational Church of Belvedere-Tiburon.

Joining the Stinson Beach poet in the program will be folk singers Gary and Harriet Carter. Paintings by Olav Coln will be on display.

Bill Would Protect The Right To Study

CONCORD, N.H. (UPI)— State Rep. Malcolm J. Stevenson has filed a bill to guarantee students the right to study without interference from campus disruption.

The measure, in the judiciary committee of the New Hampshire House today, would allow any five students to seek court action if a building is taken over by a group of dissidents, if study is disrupted or if classes are canceled as a result of strikes and boycotts.

'New Politics' Group Elects New Chairman

Thomas H. Thorner of Kentfield, an attorney practicing in San Francisco, has been elected chairman of The Marin Alternative.

The "new politics" organization was formed after the November election by a group of Marinites critical of both major political parties.

Other officers elected were Arlene Hansen of Kentfield, secretary, and Joan Seminario of Kentfield, treasurer.

The organization's steering committee announced it will hold regular public meetings on the last Wednesday of each month in Room A in the College of Marin's Student Center.

Tam High Race For President

Two students will compete for the post of student body president at Tamalpais High School in a special election tomorrow at the school. The candidates are senior Brian Bajor and junior Nicholas Harris.

Joseph Petterle, director of student activities, said the election was called because the current student body president, Ann Folker, was graduated at midterm.

The new president's term will run through the end of the school year, he said.

TV REVIEW

A Blase Nation Looks On

By RICK DU BROW

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Watching the two televised Apollo 14 moonwalks that ended during the weekend, one couldn't help thinking what a blase nation we are. Although there have been only a handful of these lunar walks, there seemed little word-of-mouth excitement except for the matter-of-fact comments about how wonderful it all was.

It was more than wonderful, of course. It was spectacular and emotionally overwhelming when one forced oneself to concentrate fully on the reality of what was happening so far from earth. And yet, from a television point of view, the coverage problem was that, aside from the viewer having to bring his or her personal interest to the event, there was little new visually to provoke fascination among the more blase members of the citizenry.

Well, there was color, of course—for the first time. And that was really something, generating a whole new reaction to our first images of the moon in black-and-white.

But, alas, our senses are pounded with promises of the new and the spectacular so much every day here at home, on earth, that we find it difficult to be thrilled very long with almost anything. I his "Devil's Dictionary," the incomparably skeptical writer Ambrose Bierce offered this definition: "Once: Enough." He was very American.

We go to bed at night with our senses keyed up to the last minute by late-hour television movies or talk shows. We wake up in the morning and flip on the early video news, or a radio that pounds away at us. No wonder there are tranquilizer commercials-advertisements in the various media. The latest movies promise to go beyond any predecessors. The latest books promise the same. The problem is, they often do. So how can any routine, historic moonwalk, not very different from its predecessors, compete successfully to provoke our satiated senses?

At any rate, for those still capable of feeling excitement, the splashdown of Apollo 14 is scheduled for Tuesday afternoon, and video watchers will be able to see the story, as it happens, on the networks.

The public broadcast service's "Net Playhouse," which is in the midst of presenting a six-part series looking at the 1930s through the works of playwrights and filmmakers, has made a major switch in this Thursday's program, which was to have examined Hollywood of that era.

The study of Hollywood in 1930s now has been rescheduled to Feb. 18. And this coming Thursday, "Net Playhouse" will present the 1932 film "Once in a Lifetime," A spoof of the foibles and excesses of Hollywood, based on the George S. Kaufman-Moss Hart play, and featuring Jack Oakie as "a zany supervisor who brings something less than foresight and expertise to a motion picture studio trying to adjust to the advent of talking pictures."

Sex Movie Ban For Filipinos

MANILA (UPI)—The government's board of censors for motion pictures announced Sunday that all sex movies, will be banned from now on.

The ban is designed "to redirect the trends in the production of motion pictures which for the past two years have tragically dealt on one dominant theme alone, that of sex," board chairman Guillermo C. De Vega said.

De Vega said the ban followed a public outcry against sex films, locally known as "bombas" (bombshells), because of their explicit depiction of sex in all forms.

INDEPENDENT-JOURNAL

Judy Brown Loves Teaching.

(more important, she loves to see kids succeed)

Judy Brown is director of the new Marin County Sullivan Reading Center. She's taught in Marin County for several years, and for the past two summers she helped establish reading clinics. Judy Brown knows kids. She understands their learning problems.

"There are lots of reasons children can't read. Once we recognize the problem, we can tackle it. For the most part, the children just need more individualized instruction and they lack confidence in themselves. Well, the Sullivan Reading Program builds confidence as it improves their reading skills."

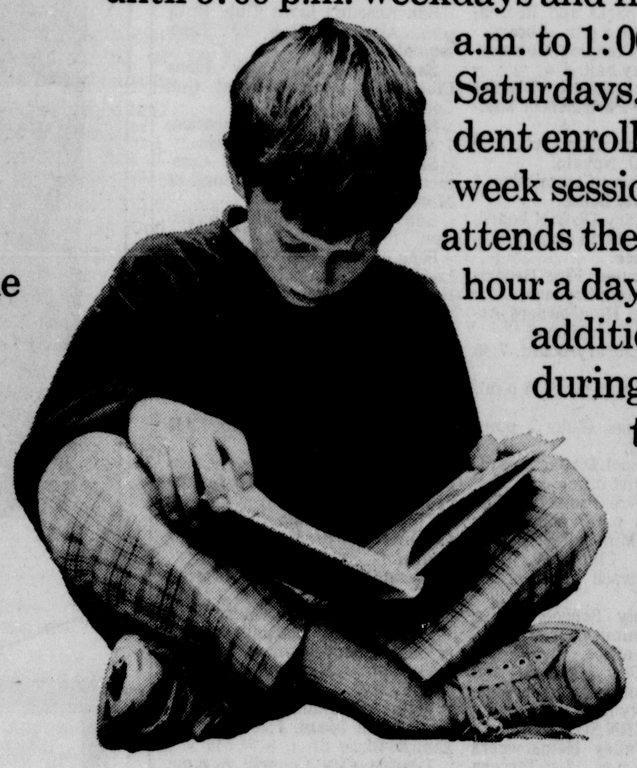
Why Johnny and Ginny and Judy and Jimmy Can Read. The Sullivan Reading Program has been improving children's reading skills for years. In fact, more than five million school children have used nationally acclaimed Sullivan Reading materials to supplement their reading courses in school. Now, Sullivan Reading Centers are being established to expand learning opportunities for children at all levels.

The new Marin County Sullivan Reading Center, fourth to be opened in the Bay Area over the past year, offers personalized reading instruction and self-paced small group instruction for each student. Classes are small — maximum of five students in each class and they are supervised by highly trained reading specialists selected for their genuine concern for each student's personal progress. The step by step Sullivan teaching program is built on this highly personalized relationship between student and teacher.

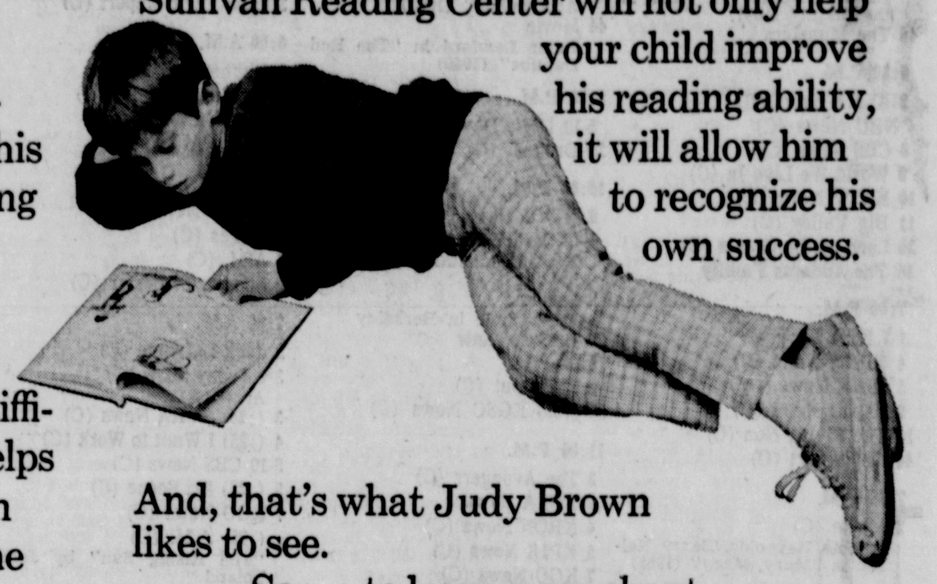
The child builds on his own success. Students with individual reading needs first undergo a series of tests to determine their levels of ability and to provide bench marks for measuring continued progress. Each student works at his own pace, experiencing success and strong reinforcement as his reading improves.

If certain word-sounds are easy for him, he works and progresses through the books rapidly. If he finds a difficult word-sound, his reading specialist helps him immediately. Each page of text is an upward step in his learning process. As he gets answer after answer right, he will learn to read simple words quickly and easily — and with confidence in his own ability.

Convenient times for Mother and Child. The New Marin County Sullivan Reading Center is open from 10:00 a.m. until 6:00 p.m. weekdays and from 9:00 a.m. to 1:00 p.m. on Saturdays. Each student enrolls for a four-week session and attends the Center one hour a day. If he needs additional time during the course to make sufficient progress, he is given the extra time at no additional cost. Initial testing and all materials used by students are also included in the $60 fee for the four-week course.



More than a reading program, the Sullivan Reading Center will not only help your child improve his reading ability, it will allow him to recognize his own success.



And, that's what Judy Brown likes to see.

So . . . to learn more about the Marin County Sullivan Reading Center, just call 479-5318; oh, and ask for Judy Brown.

VICTORY BOUND — The College of Marin Tars broke a two game losing streak Saturday night with a 69-68 victory over Skyline Junior College in Kentfield. At left, Floyc Jackson, (23), a new addition to the Tars, went up for a rebound over teammates Ed Herrnberger (44) and Charlie Flynn (14) and a couple of opponents. At right, Marin's Roosevelt Green hit an easy layup while Steve Kirby of Skyline stood by helplessly, and Jackson watched in the background.

Tom Shaw Again Beats Former Idol

Arnie Fades In Hawaiian Golf Finish

HONOLULU (UPI) — Tom Shaw slumped into a chair, fanned his sunburned face with his big straw hat and started to describe how it felt to win the Hawaiian Open.

"How do I feel? I don't feel a thing because I'm in a state of shock," he said.

And no wonder.

The smiling swinger from Clackamas County, Ore., had just won $40,000 and beaten his idol, Arnold Palmer, for the second time in three weeks.

Shaw's brilliant victory made him the only double winner on the tour this year and placed him at the top of the money list with $69,752. The earlier win was in the Bing Crosby clambake, where he beat Palmer by two strokes.

At the seaside Waialae Country Club here, Shaw shot rounds of 68, 67, 69 and 69 for a sizzling 15-under par total of 273. Opportunist Miller Barber took second at 274, Georgian DeWitt Weaver was third at 275 and Palmer ended up in a three-way tie at 277 after his most disappointing round of the tournament..

Shaw started the final round tied for the lead with old master Palmer, who he once said was his idol, and Weaver, a strongarmed slugger from Atlanta.

The Oregonian, whose hometown is Milwaukie near Portland, served notice he had come to win by taking the lead with a birdie on the first hole.

He held it until No. 12 when the methodical Weaver knocked in his second straight birdie putt to pull into a tie and then lost the lead to the Georgian by blowing a three-foot par putt on No. 14.

Right there, Shaw said, he thought he had had it.

"I figured that if I could play the remaining holes in one under par I could possibly win or get into a playoff. I started flying the ball at the flag after that bogey. . ."

He flew it to within 15 feet on 16 and 8 feet on 17—and with fans ringing the greens six to eight deep he coolly knocked in both putts to move back in front again.

Weaver then killed his chances by bogeying the short 17th and lost second place to Barber who birdied both 17 and 18. Palmer had a frustrating day on the greens, starting with a couple of bogeys early in the round. He had hoped to win his 56th tour title.

The 41-year-old Palmer finished in a deadlock with Lee Trevino and young tour rookie Hubert Green, who made a run at the championship but threw away his chances when he blasted from one bunker into

WARRIORS DUMPED

Lakers Extend Victory Streak

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (UPI)— The streaking Los Angeles Lakers put together a combined scoring effort of 61 points by Jerry West and Happy Hairston Sunday night to sweep to their fifth consecutive victory and a commanding lead in the Pacific Division.

The Lakers dropped the lapsing San Francisco Warriors 119-104 in a contest that remained nip and tuck until two minutes into the third quarter.

Boosting their winning streak to five games in a row, the Lakers ripped off 24 out of 35 points early in the quarter after San Francisco had tied the score at 60 apiece.

Nate Thurmond and company were outrebounded 19-9 in that quarter as the Warriors could make good on no more than six of 17 field goal attempts.

Los Angeles, winner of 13 out of its last 17 games, moves to Cleveland Tuesday night to open a three game road trip.

In Sunday night's contest West collected 37 points and Hairston hit on 24. High for the Warriors was Nate Thurmond with 24 and Jeff Mullins who had 19.

San Francisco fell seven games behind the Lakers in the all-important loss column and has only 21 games remaining on its schedule. The Lakers hold a five-game lead over the Warriors.

Thrilling Win Snaps Marin's Skid

Joe Smith, the man to whom the College of Marin Tars look when they desperately need a basket, came through with a baseline jump shot five seconds before the final buzzer Saturday night, and Marin defeated Skyline Junior College, 69-68 in Kentfield.

The 15-foot, lefthanded shot, which gave Smith 17 points for the game, redeemed the Tars after they blew a six point halftime lead and trailed by that much in the final three minutes. It also broke a two game losing streak, and set their Camino Norte Conference record at 5-3.

After upsetting Contra Costa Wednesday night, Skyline was sky high going into the game. And on top of their momentum, they had a motive for revenge; the Tars defeated them, 64-58 in the league opening game last month.

"They're a vastly improved team from the last time we played them," said Tar coach John Panagakis. He noted that, oddly enough, the Trojans seemed to play better without 6-foot-8 center Earl Wilson, who lost his eligibility during the semester break.

Behind the torrid shooting of guard Matt Kriletich, who led all scorers with 27 points, the visitors made their second half stand look good right up until Smith's heroic shot. But Roosevelt Green, Marin center, countered Kriletich's performance with 19 points, and manhandled Wilson's heir, Bob Baldasseroni; it has been the trend this season that, as Green goes, so go the Tars, and he went well in this one.

If the Trojans were improved, Marin was too with the addition to the roster of forward Floyd Jackson. Playing his first game since becoming eligible, the former Tamalpais High School star hit for 13 points and gave the Tars added

Mazeroski, Russell Win Astrojet Golf

PHOENIX, Ariz. (UPI)—Bill Mazeroski's thinking is questionable.

"On a putt, I am always thinking about the ways I'm going to miss it," the Pittsburgh Pirates' second baseman said Sunday after sinking a five-foot putt that gave him and Andy Russell of the Pittsburgh Steelers the $10,000 first prize in a sudden death playoff of the American airlines Astrojet Golf Classic.

Mazeroski's clutch putt, after a drive into the trees and a five-iron shot to the green, gave the 10-handicapper a natural birdie and the team a net eagle on the first playoff hole, the 379-yard, par four, 17th of the Goodyear Golf and Country Club course.

Russell, a linebacker for the Steelers, had put the two into the playoff by getting a par on the regulation 18th for a net bird.

"There is too much time to think in this game," said Mazeroski, admitting he felt the pressure. "In my game and in Andy's you're always moving. This is more nerve wracking."

Mazeroski said he knew his team had to better the par recorded by Del Unser and Ed Podolak before them. "I thought if we didn't make it here, we wouldn't make it," he said.

Defending champions Ron Santo of the Chicago Cubs and George Andrie of the Dallas Cowboys, six strokes off the pace entering the final round, charged into the early lead in the clubhouse with a 54-hole total of 22 under par 194, then watched four other teams tie them.

They finished second, earning $2,500 each, when Santo sank an eight-foot putt on the playoff 18th to edge Hall of Famers Joe DiMaggio and Otto Graham who earned $1,000 each.

A Tragic Climax In Drag Racing

POMONA, Calif. (UTI)—The growing sport of drag racing reached a tragic climax at the 11th annual National Hot Rod Association's Winternationals Sunday with the deaths of a driver and the wife of a racer.

The victims were Lew "Sneaky Pete" Robinson, 37, who succumbed early Sunday from injuries he suffered in Saturday's qualifying, and Mrs. Kathy Russell, 21, wife of San Diego driver Dave Russell. She was killed when a car making a test run in the pit area went out of control and struck a parked truck in which she was sitting.

Top honors in the competition went to Don Garlits, Seffner, Fla., who won the top fuel eliminator prize, and Ronnie Sox of Burlington, N.C., who won the pro stock eliminator battle.

Robinson, from Atlanta, suffered his fatal injuries Saturday in a crash attributed to an innovation he had installed on his Ford-powered fuel dragster, an air scoop under the rear wheels.

Robinson had just crossed the finish line at 199.54 miles an hour in his trial when the air scoop tore loose and dug into the asphalt pavement at the Pomona Fair Grounds.

The dragster spun into a wall, burst into flames and bounced 150 yards down the track. Robinson was removed from the wreckage unconscious with massive internal, head, neck and spine injuries. He died six hours later at a hospital.

Mrs. Russell was struck by a rebuilt roadster driven by Ron Bolz, 27, Omaha, Neb., who lost control of his vehicle when the throttle stuck. She was dead on arrival at Pomona Valley Hospital.

Robinson was the 1966 NHRA world champion and was a favorite to capture the fuel dragster competition. The veteran driver had installed the scoop in order to create a vacuum which he felt would give his car more speed.

Robinson was an engineering graduate from Georgia Tech and is survived by his widow, Sandra, and a 4-year-old daughter, Kelly.

Garlits used a revolutionary rear engine Dodge-powered double A fuel dragster to beat five Californians Sunday in match races. In the finals, he merely had to run over the course when the Chrysler-powered dragster of Ken Safford, Van Nuys, Calif., did not start. Garlits won $8,625 for his victory. On his fourth match, Garlits was timed in 6.70 seconds for the quartermile for his fastest run.

Sox captured the pro stock eliminator competition in a 1971 Plymouth Barracuda. In his final run, he defeated Wally Booth of Lincoln Park, Mich., in a 1970 Camaro with an elapsed time of 9.86 seconds and went 141.28 miles an hour.

Red Wings Blast Seals,5-2

OAKLAND (UPI)—Afternoon sunshine doesn't do any more for the California Seals than nighttime darkness.

For the second time this season, the Seals played a Sunday matinee at the Coliseum-Arena and for the second afternoon this season they were beaten. Gordie Howe and the Detroit Red Wings perpetrated the latest dirty deed with a 5-2 victory before 4,744 fans.

Howe, who enters the George Blanda age aura of 43 next month, scored two goals and assisted on another against the Seals. Those were Howe's 780th and 781st goals of a long career on ice skates.

The win broke a five-game winless string for the Red Wings and sent the Seals down to their fifth loss in a row. It also was Detroit's third victory in five games with the Seals this season. One more game remains between the teams.

Meanwhile the Seals were scoring early and late while drowsing through a three-goal middle period for the Red Wings. Bill Hicke of the Seals tallied the game's first goal 2:12 after the opening whistle and Gerry Ehman netted the other Seals goal 23 seconds into the final period.

While the old men were showing their proficiency for Detroit, coach Fred Glover was thinking already of next year and rebuilding.

"Somewhere along the line you have to start a rebuilding program," said Glover. "And that's what next year is going to be for us. We have to start with young players."

In line with this, the Seals peddled ailing veteran defenseman Harry Howell to the Los Angeles Kings on Friday.

Thirteen All-Americans and a supporting cast that would make any professional scout drool will be on the court at 8 o'clock tonight when the East and West collide in the College All-Star Basketball Classic at Terra Linda High School.

Tickets to tonight's game will go on sale at the gate at 6:15 p.m. Admission is $1.50.

Despite the appearance of 13 All-American and seven players who have already been drafted by the pros, it is the presence of a single player who has yet to complete college that has caused the West to be installed as a slight favorite.

"Darnell Hillman should give the West a slight edge," commented Hal Fischer, coach of the defending champion AAU cagers. "He'll be a cinch super-star with the pros next year."

Hillman has already stated publicly that he will not sign with either league for less than $150,000. The 6-8 center claims that he will return to San Jose State where he has two years eligibility remaining if he does not get his price.

A 7-2 high-jumper, Hillman was the MVP in the 1970 World Games in Iran and was the second draft pick of the Indiana Pacers of the ABA several weeks ago.

Expected to join Hillman in the West's starting lineup are Bruce Sloan (Kansas) and Jim Fox (Drake) at forwards and Art Wilmore (USF) and Don Crenshaw (USC) at guards.

Probable starters for the East are Charlie Greer (North Carolina A & T) at center, Larry Bauer (Illinois) and John Guyton (Mississippi State) at forwards and Jim Oxley (West Point) and Brad Luchini (Marquette) at guards.

Tonight's contest, which is perhaps among the biggest sports events in Marin county history, will be the first basketball game ever played in Marin under international rules. With the use of 30-second clocks and the decrease in foul shooting, local fans can expect a wide-open, high-scoring game.

A 6:30 preliminary game between the league-leading San Rafael High freshmen and the Terra Linda frosh will be played.

Ex-San Jose Coach Hired By Marshall U.

SAN JOSE (UPI)—Joseph H. McMullen, former head football coach at San Jose State, has a new post today as athletic director at Marshall University.

McMullen, 46, replaces Charles Kautz who was among 74 Marshall football players, coaches, fans and crewmen killed in a plane crash Nov. 14.

A graduate at Brown, McMullen took over as head football coach at San Jose State in December 1968 and promised to rebuild the football team. The Spartans posted a 2-8 record on the gridiron in 1969 and were a disappointing 1-2 last season when McMullen resigned abruptly and was replaced by Dewey King.

Then nothing was heard from McMullen until the announcement of his appointment at Marshall.

"Marshall is fortunate to gain the services of one who has had extensive experience in college athletics," said Dr. John Barker, president of Marshall.

NFL Investigation Back In Courtroom

CLEVELAND (UPI)—The investigation by a federal grand jury of possible antitrust violations by the National Football League, which began last November, was to resume today after a 25-day recess.

During the recess, some records of the NFL Players Association were subpoenaed by the U.S. Justice Department's Antitrust Division.

Expected to be called as a witness this week is the president of the association, Baltimore Colts tight end John Mackey, who led the players strike at the beginning of last season.

Also expected to be called soon to testify is Cleveland Browns owner Art Modell, who previously offered to appear voluntarily. When the investigation first opened, Modell issued a statement denying the league violated any laws.

Before the investigation was recessed Jan. 14, the jury heard testimony from New York Jets quarterback Joe Namath and New Orleans Saints owner John Mecom Jr. Namath said he was sure the NFL has broken antitrust laws.

Mecom said, however, players who have complained of being "blacklisted" were "marginal performers."

THE ONDINE FIRST ACROSS FINISH LINE

RIO DE JANEIRO (UPI)— The Ondine was the first yacht to arrive in the Buenos Aires-Rio regatta Monday.

The winner of the race will be determined only after other boats arrive and handicaps are calculated.

The Ocean Spirit, leading the Capetown-Rio regatta, was reported becalmed Sunday night only 100 miles from Rio and has still not been sighted.

The Ondine beat the record for the Buenos Aires-Rio race which it set three years ago, when it made the race in 7 days and 23 hours. This year it took 7 days and approximately 12 hours.

Marin Youths In Hockey Win

The Marin Amateur Hockey League's Bantam team defeated Sun Valley of Walnut Creek yesterday 3-2 at the Oakland Coliseum, in an exhibition game prior to a National Hockey League game between the California Seals and the Detroit Red Wings. Mike O'Hara scored the winning goal for the Larkspur team.

In a game Saturday at Larkspur, the Marin Pee Wees slaughtered Hayward, 17-0 on three-point hat tricks by Pat McPartlan, Sean Mitchell and Ken Conroy. Scott Anderson registered his fifth shutout of the season.

Hull Ties Record, Then Suffers Injury

CHICAGO (UPI)—Bobby Hull proved the Chicago Black Hawks could win with him in another record-tying performance, and then the Hawks proved they could win without him.

Midway through the first period of Sunday night's game with the Pittsburgh Penguins, Hull muscled the puck past goalie Les Binkley for the 544th goal of his National Hockey League career.

It was an historical score, because it tied him with the Montreal Canadiens' Maurice "Rocket" Richard for the second-highest number of goals in NHL history.

Years ago Richard's goals stood alone as a number probably out of reach of any other player. But that was before Detroit's Gordie Howe continued on his 20-year career in the league, passed Richard and now with more than 700, has a lead of more than 200 on both Hull and Richard.

Still Hull's performance stood out by the number of goals and by the fact that it was the second straight night he has tied Richard. Only Saturday night he tied Richard's record.

That was his 26th hat trick, attained on the road against Minnesota, and it deadlocked Hull and Richard for the most hat tricks ever in the NHL.

Hull's goal Sunday night was all the Black Hawks got, but it was enough for a 1-0 victory over the Penguins. And the Hawks proved they could win without Hull since in the 6th minute of the second period, Hull crashed into the boards at the end of the rink after taking another shot on Binkley and had to be helped off the ice.

After the crash, Hull slowly worked to his knees and then signaled for help. He had to be helped from the ice and before the game ended, he was on his way to a hospital for X-rays.

Dr. Myron Tremaine said Hull suffered a severe bruise behind his hip on the right side, but there was no fracture. "He could be out a week to 10 days," Tremaine said, "but it's possible he'd be back sooner."

After Hull left the game, goalie Tony Esposito played sensationally to earn his fifth shutout of the season, stopping 28 Pittsburgh shots for the win.

The injury to Hull was the fifth in recent games which put Black Hawk players on the sidelines. Earlier defensemen Bill White, Jerry Korab and Keith Magnuson were hurt, as was wing Lou Angotti. However, coach Billy Reay said White and Magnuson probably could return for the next game.

Blues' Al Arbour Back On The Ice

PHILADELPHIA (UPI)—Al Arbour expects to return to the St. Louis Blues' playing line "as soon as I'm in shape" to aid the team's chances for the Stanley Cup.

Arbour, the Blues' soft spoken coach, asked general manager William "Scotty" Bowman Sunday to return him to the ice to help the team in its stretch drive. Bowman agreed to assume the coaching duties.

"This is something I have been thinking about for a while," Arbour said, "And I feel that you can't play and coach at the same time in the National Hockey League."

"I will return to playing as soon as I'm in shape," Arbour added. "I've been working out with the club for awhile and I don't think it will be long before I return."

Bowman predicted Arbour would rejoin the lineup "by next week."

Arbour, 37, was named coach at the end of last season. He was the Blues' first captain after being chosen by St. Louis in the National Hockey League's expansion draft.

Arbour will resume as captain of the Blues, taking over for Red Berenson, who was traded to Detroit Saturday with Time Ecclestone in exchange for Garry Unger and Wayne Connelly.

Bowman said "The (Berenson) trade was a management decision" and not the only factor in Arbour's request to be relieved of coaching responsibilities. Bowman indicated Arbour felt the team needed him more than ever as a player with Berenson gone.

"Now is the time we must all pull together in our endeavor to bring a Stanley Cup to St. Louis," Bowman said.

The Blues are in second place in the NHL's western division, trailing Chicago.

Unser, of the Washington Senators, and Podolak, of the Kansas City Chiefs, took fourth place and split $2,000. Joe Horlen of the Chicago White Sox and Craig Morton of the Dallas Cowboys—the second round leaders—finished fifth, earning $500 each. Horlen, the best golfer in the tournament playing to a six handicap, watched a 15-foot putt which would have won the tournament hit the back of the cup and bounce out on the regulation 18th. He and Morton, playing in the last foursome, had teed off on the par four final regulation hole with a one-stroke lead but had to settle for a bogey.

Mazeroski has been a winner in three of the five Astrojet Classics. He shared the 1967 and '68 titles with Paul Krause of the Minnesota Vikings. This marked the first time that a team comprised of a professional football player and a professional baseball player from the same city have won the event.

depth where they sorely needed it — under the boards. "He was a little nervous," said Panagakis, "but he really helped us."

Panagakis agreed that the win was a big one for the Kentfield team, whose season record now stands at 20-4. "It got us back on the winning track," he said, "and the next two games (against comparatively weak Canada and Solano) should help us."

While he was pleased with the overall performance, Panagakis pointed out that, as has been the case in nearly all their conference games, the Tars played well at some times and badly at others. But he said, "It showed that at the times we stick to our offensive pattern, we can score."

Graham, victim of a torn ligament in his right knee, missed the entire 1970 National Football League Season.

"It'll be tough not playing," Graham said, "but I'll be a good fan."

Graham played college ball at the University of Virginia where he has enrolled for graduate school. He joined the Eagles in 1963 and, as a rookie, moved up to starting position. The following season a knee cartiliage operation kept him idle.

Graham started the final 10 games during the 1966 season when the Eagles finished with a 9-5 record.

Sonoma State Quint Suffers 17th Loss

The Sonoma State College Cossacks' fortunes took a turn for the worse — if that's possible — Saturday night when they got whipped by Sacramento State, 109-62 in a Far Western Conference basketball game in Rohnert Park.

The Cossacks, who now have lost every game they have played this year, 17 in number, had not been beaten that badly since the last time they faced the Hornets in the state capital. The score then was 102-64.

The issue Saturday night was never in doubt; in fact, the Hornets got more points in the first half than the Cossacks got in the whole game. At one point, the score was 22-2.

Six players, led by Maurice Woodard, racked up double figures for Sacramento State, which with the win evened its conference record at 3-3. Woodard collected 24 points, followed by Bill Steinetz with 19.

Larry Austin, the lone bright star in the Cossack's lineup, hit for 19.

Swim Win For UCLA

STANFORD (UPI) — UCLA swept all six freestyle events and got a clutch performance from Sonny Gossick who won the diving event Saturday for a 59-54 swimming meet victory over Stanford.

Frenchman Robs Palmer In Slalom

MUERREN, Switzerland (UPI)—Jean-Noel Augert of France showed his team's come-from-behind spirit to rob America's Tyler Palmer of victory in the men's slalom at the 36th Arlberg-Kandahar ski classic Sunday.

Trailing by 0.11 seconds after the first heat, Augert flashed down the 66-gate course on the second run for a total time of 100.30 and an 0.48-second advantage over Palmer.

Augert's teammate Patrick Russel was third at 102.51 in the race, which counted toward the World Cup.

Russel's third place was also good enough to secure him the Arlberg-Kandahar combined crown, ahead of Italy's Roland Thoeni and Rick Chaffee of the United States.

Following the Kandahar races, the top four racers in World Cup standings are Gustav Thoeni, Italy, with 110 points, Jean-Noel Augert, France, 107 points, Henri Duvillard, France, 103 points, and Patrick Russel, France, 100 points.

WEST COAST BASKETBALL

Oregon Thinking About Upsets

By United Press International

Oregon has its eye on the back door of the throne room.

The hot-shooting Ducks from Eugene find themselves in a perfect position this week to upstage national powers UCLA and Southern California, thereby throwing the Pacific-8 Conference basketball race into a tizzy.

The Los Angeles teams play a pair of games in Oregon this weekend, starting Friday night with UCLA at Oregon and USC at Oregon State. There's just the slightest chance the Bruins might be a little flat after their rousing 64-60 comeback win over USC Saturday night and Oregon could spring an upset.

Behind the shooting of Stan Love and Larry Holliday, the Ducks have shown they can stay on the same court with any other Pac-8 team. They proved it by knocking off highly regarded Oregon State twice, 64-62 and 67-57, over the weekend in a pair of non-conference tussles.

And the Ducks know there will be no better time than Friday night at home to make a run at UCLA and the Pac-8 lead. Currently, the Bruins top the conference with a 5-0 mark and USC is runnerup at 4-1. But right behind are the Ducks at 3-1 and Oregon State at 2-2.

However, coach John Wooden of the Bruins feels his club is improving and they will be ready for Oregon.

"We'll have to avoid a letdown after this game, but we should be up after this victory," said Wooden.

The Bruins came from a nine-point deficit, 59-50, with 9:35 remaining to stun the Trojans. Field goals and a free throw by forward Sidney Wicks, the game's outstanding performer with 24 points and 14 rebounds, plus baskets by Steve Patterson and reserve Terry Schofield helped the Bruins on a 14-1 tear to close out the game of the year.

"I thought Sidney had his best game of the season and I also thought we had our best team play," said Wooden.

Now UCLA and USC, both 16-1 overall, and Marquette (18-0) will launch a battle of the ballots this week for the top national ranking.

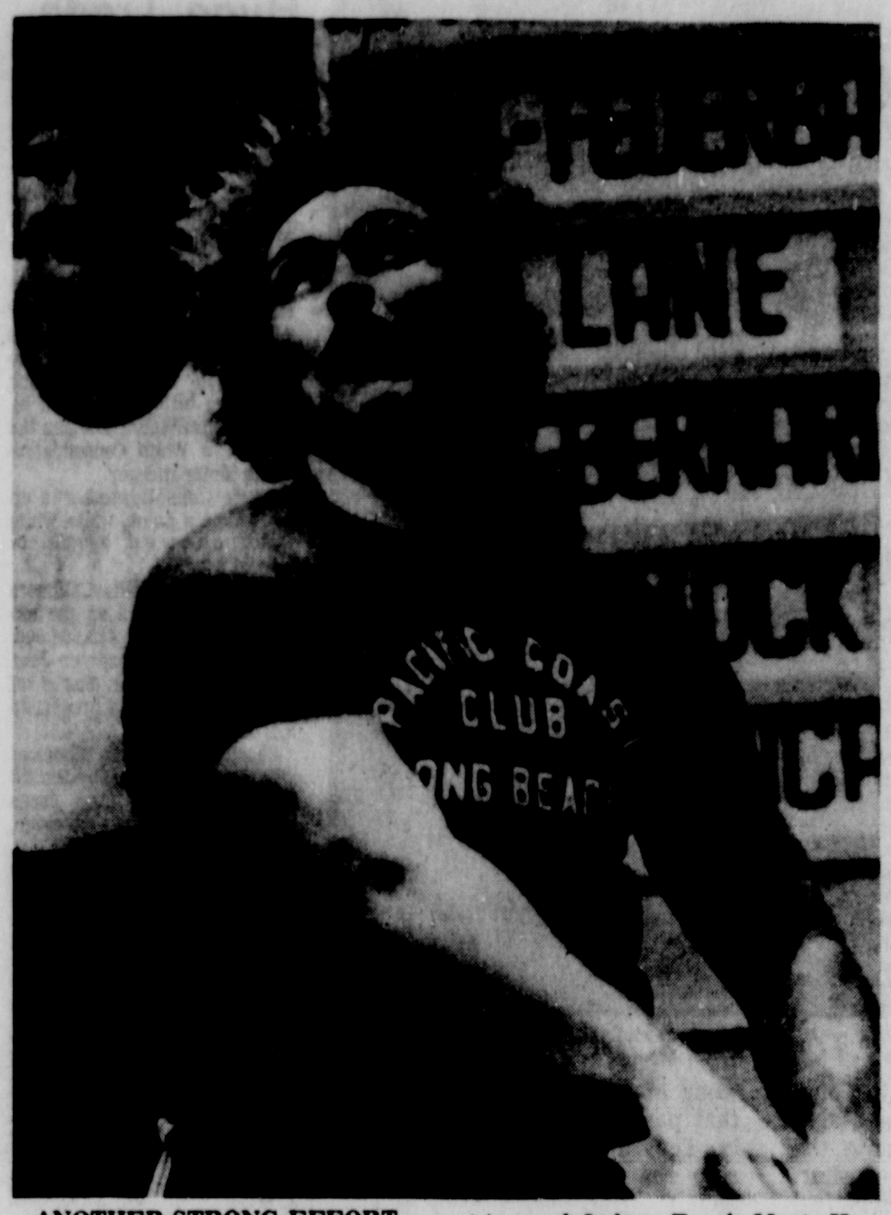
In other Pac-8 games over the weekend, California evened its conference record at 3-3 by defeating Stanford (0-6) 100-84 to sweep the two-game series with the Indians, and Washington State (1-4) won its first conference game by upsetting Washington (2-3) 90-79 with the help of Dan Steward's 24 points.

Cal completed its first series sweep over Stanford in 11 years with a balanced scoring attack which saw every starter hit in double figures. Jackie Ridgle swished 23 and Phil Chenier added 22 for the Bears. Claude Terry paced Stanford with 25 points.

In the West Coast Athletic Conference, Pacific moved a half-game ahead of Loyola into the top spot by downing the Lions 85-66 as the Tigers' 6-10 junior center, John Gianelli, got a slight edge on Loyola center Jim Haderlein in their first meeting of the season.

Gianelli pulled down 24 rebounds, blocked six shots and scored 18 points. However, Haderlein, a 6-8 senior, missed 10 minutes of the second half with a cut chin and finished with 16 points and 10 rebounds.

Surprising San Francisco hit its season high in routing Nevada-Reno 114-82 to remain in third place in the WCAC with a 4-2 mark. Nevada-Las Vegas pulled away in the second half for a 75-64 win over Santa Clara and Pepperdine's Jeff Hendrix scored seven points in the final four minutes to help the Waves edge St. Mary's 82-79.



ANOTHER STRONG EFFORT — Al Feuerbach, who last month set a world shotput record in San Francisco, Saturday broke the meet record at the Seattle Invitational Indoor Track Meet. He tossed the shot 65 feet, four inches three feet, seven inches off his world mark.

8:27.1 CLOCKING

Blistering Two-Mile Run

SEATTLE Wash. (UPI)—The timers' watches said Australia's Kerry Pearce set a new world record for two miles indoor—but the record books will show that he only tied the old mark.

Pearce was timed in 8:27.1 in a magnificent winning effort Saturday night at the Seattle Invitational indoor track meet. This was one-tenth of a second better than the present mark Pearce holds along with George Young of the United States.

But meet officials said it will go into the record books as 8:27.2 because indoor times over 3,000 meters are kept only in fifths of a second.

The run was Pearce's fourth two-mile race in nine days.

A hometown favorite, Doris Brown, had the wind flying through her hair as she unleashed a strong finishing kick to tie the women's 880 indoor mark, 2:07.3, set by Madeline Manning in 1969.

The 8,000 fans at the Seattle Coliseum were hoping to see a world record shot by Al Feuerbach, who set a new mark of 68-11 in San Francisco last month.

But Feuerbach, who had competed in a meet in Texas Friday night, said he was tired and "my coordination wasn't there." His winning toss was 65-4.

Other winners included Sweden's Kjell Isaksson with a pole vault of 17-1 1-4, John Mason with a 4:02.0 in the mile, Reynaldo Brown with a high jump of 7-0 and India's Mohinder Gill with a 52-10 3-4 triple jump.

Bouncy Moore took the long jump at 25-3, Warren Edmundson the 60-yard dash in 6.2, Edesel Garrison the 440 in 49.4, Chuck LaBenz the 880 in 1:53.9 and Poland's Andrzej Badenski the 600-yard run in 1:11.1.

Sims Ties Mark For 60 Yards

NATCHITOCHES, La. (UPI) —Alcorn A&Q's Jerry Sims tied the world record in the 60-yard dash over the weekend with a clocking of 5.9 seconds in the Northwestern Louisiana Invitational Indoor Track Meet.

Sims' time in the Saturday night meet equaled the world mark set by Jack Phillips of Grambling College. The performance earned Sims the outstanding athlete of the meet award.

In team events, Stephen F. Austin won the mile relay in 3:26.4.

Tulane set a new meet record in the two-mile relay with a 7:51.3 clocking.

Homers Pace Alumni

STANFORD (UPI)—Catcher Jim Hibbs belted a two-run homer and Bob Boone followed with a solo shot Saturday to pace the Stanford Alumni to a 4-2 baseball win over the varsity.

Unique Training Method

FORT WORTH, Tex. (UPI)—Tom Von Ruden said Sunday much of the credit for his first sub-four-minute mile should go to Jim Crawford, who was pushing him all the way.

The rest of the credit goes to Von Ruden's unique method of training for the Saturday night race, in which he posted a 3:59.4 mile.

The former Oklahoma State star, now running under Pacific Coast club colors, had won the 1,000-yards at Toronto, Canada, Friday night. He celebrated at a post-race party that lasted until early Saturday morning, then flew to Fort Worth and grabbed a three-hour nap before his Fort Worth Coaches Indoor Games mile run.

"Sometimes being tired will relax you," Von Ruden said, "but it'll catch up with me."

Crawford, a one-time Harding College distance star now teaching school at Richardson, Tef., grabbed the lead at the final lap and was clocked at 4:01.4 in second place.

"Jim really made the pace hot," Von Ruden said. "I didn't have any choice but to go after him."

Von Ruden ran a 59-flat opening quarter, a 2:02.5 half and 3:02.8 three quarters. Then with Crawford and the roar of 6,323 fans pushing him on, he clocked 56.5 seconds in the closing quarter.

He had lost to Sam Bair in Los Angeles as both were clocked at 4:01.1, and was beaten by Mary Liquori in New York when the Villanova ace ran a 4:00.6 to Von Ruden's 4:02.1.

Bob Seagren won the pole vault at 17-0 1-4, but Olympian Dick Fosbury failed to place in the high jump, which was won by Oklahoma freshman Johnny Blakley with a 6-10.

Robert Mitchell of Houston, who had posted a meet record 30.6 in the prelims, won the 300-dash in 31.1; Marvin Mills was credited with beating brother Curtis Mills, the world 440-dash record holder, in the 60-yard dash in 6.2, and the Mills brothers helped Texas A&M win the mile relay in 3:17.5.

Portland Wins Fourth Straight

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

Somebody forgot to tell the Portland Trail Blazers that expansion teams aren't supposed to run up long winning streaks.

The red hot Blazers surged to their fourth consecutive victory Sunday night, downing the Cleveland Cavaliers 112-102. Rookie Geoff Petrie poured in 24 points and had 10 assists and Gary Gregor had 19 points before being banished for throwing a punch to lead the Portland attack.

Archie Clark poured in 33 points and Billy Cunningham had 28 to help Philadelphia beat New York and move to within 3 1-2 games of the Knicks in the Atlantic Division.

The 76ers ripped off 11 consecutive points in the third quarter to break open the game, taking an 88-62 lead.

Elvin Hayes scored 32 points and Calvin Murphy added 25 as San Diego bombed the Sonics. Hayes sparked a 26-12 outburst in the last quarter that gave the Rockets the victory.

John Havlicek scored 32 points including a 30-foot jump shot and two free throws in the final seconds to help the Celtics beat Chicago. The Bulls pulled to within two points before Havlicek hit his basket and free throws to protect the lead.

Earl Monroe'e 25-point performance helped the Bullets beat Detroit and Lou Hudson's 27-point effort lifted Atlanta over the Royals.

Miami's Richardson Hole-In-One Champ

PHOENIX, Ariz. (UPI)—Willie Richardson of the Miami Dolphins won a 1971 Ford Pinto in the hole-in-one contest at the American Airlines Astrojet Golf Classic Sunday.

Richardson was five feet from the pin on his tee shot on the par three, 137-yard 16th hole, the closest any golfer came during the three day event.

Last Frame Victory

SAN JOSE (UPI)—On his final ball, lefty Larry Lichstein of Windsor Locks, Conn., got a strike to beat defending champ Dave Davis, 234-227, Saturday and win the $10,000 first prize of the $75,000 Ebonite Open bowling tournament.

SUCCESSFUL INVESTING

Bond Conversion Impractical Now

By ROGER E. SPEAR

Q. I hold Gulf & Western 5½ per cent convertible debentures as a result of their take-over of Associates Investment. It is my understanding that my 9 bonds are convertible into 1.50 common, now trading near 23½. If I convert now, my $9,000 in bonds would be worth only $3,525. Furthermore my income would be reduced from $495 to $75 annually. Is my figuring correct? What would you advise me to do? — N.W.

A. Although the face value of your holding is $9,000, at current trading levels you would realize only $5,940 from the sale of these debentures at this time. A convertible issue commonly sells at a premium over its conversion value; however, the unusually wide premium in this case also reflects the support level provided by bond interest.

Conglomerates have long been in the "doghouse," although investor interest in the group appears to be accelerating. Gulf & Western shares have moved up sharply since the May, 1970, low of 9½. Further recovery appears possible in light of the improvement being experienced by most of the company's operating groups.

For you as a bondholder, improved earnings not only add to your margin of security but could also lift bond trading levels. I see no jurisdiction for conversion at this time.

Q. I have been holding shares of United Science Fund for 9 years, hoping for income gains. This goal has not been met. Should I dispose of shares; or does the future look better? — L.H.

A. United Science is a specialized fund whose primary investment objective is long-term growth of capital, not income, which you desire. In fact, over the past nine years the average annual yield on your fund has been only 1.3 per cent —a rather modest return on your cpaital.

United Science's performance as a growth fund has been about average. However, since it does not meet your investment needs, sale is justified for purchase of either a high-yielding stock or an income fund such as Investors Selective or Channing Income.

Pan Am Losses: $48 Million

NEW YORK (UPI) — Pan American World Airways reported a $48,032,000 loss for 1970, compared with a $25,888,000 loss in 1969. The fourth quarter loss was $46,762,000, compared with a loss of $18,932,000 in the final 1969 period.

The loss for all of 1970 is stated after payments totaling $8,025,000 under an airline mutual assistance agreement, compared with receipts amounting to $1,688,000 in 1969.

Pan Am's operating revenues last year rose by 7.7 per cent to $1,125,989,000 from $1,045,047,000 in 1969.

BIG ENOUGH TO STOP BOULDERS

At the Northgate Mine in County Tipperary, Ireland, massive chains are used to regulate the flow of ore being fed to a crusher. The links' contour and the chains' flexibility make them resist the wear of tons of falling boulders that pass through this chute daily. They are strong enough to stop the flow of boulders completely

Electric Rate Hike

DES MOINES (UPI) — Iowa Power & Light Co. has usked the Iowa State Commerce Commission for a 9½ per cent electric rate increase effective March 1. The company said the proposed hike would affect all residential and industrial customers.

Rate Request Halt

MESA, Ariz. (UPI) — Talley Industries, Inc. said its new aircraft starting system for small to medium size gas turbine engines will be marketed shortly by the power equipment division of Lear Siegler, Inc. Huge Trade Of Shares Sets Record

NEW YORK (UPI) —Stocks were mixed on heavy turnover through the first two hours today.

Helping swell volume was an early 3,248,000-share block of Allis Chalmers changing hands at 18, up 5-8. The block, the biggest in New York Stock Exchange history, was sold by White Consolidated to clear the way for a White Consolidated-White Motor merger.

White Consolidated was up more than a point, while White Motor showed a gain of around 2 3-4.

In value, the Allis Chalmers block ranked no. 2 on the all-time high list at $58,464,000, topped only by a trade on June 13, 1968 of 730,312 shares of American Standard preferred "A" at $76,135,026.

Shortly before noon, advances were leading declines by around 150 issues. The Dow Jones industrial average, however, was off more than a point.

Prices advanced in active trading on the American Stock Exchange.

Sherman Clay Store Is Opening Another Shop, The Guitar Shack

Increased sales and the need for room to expand at the Sherman Clay store at Fourth and C streets has resulted in this company moving its musical instrument department to another location one block away and across the street in downtown San Rafael.

Under the management of Robert Longenecker of Petaluma, who has been with the store about a year, this department will be known as the Guitar Shack, at 1408 Fourth Street.

Sherman Clay, which now carries three makes of organs Hammond, Kimball and Conn — and has added the Japanese-manufactured Kawai piano to its lines, had sales last month equal to 50 per cent of its sales for the entire year of 1964, according to Margo Margossian. That was the year he took over as San Rafael manager, when the store was on C Street.

A NEW SURPLUS STORE, called Mike's Surplus, will open Wednesday at 70-N Woodland Avenue, San Rafael.

This will be a division of a recently formed corporation, West Coast Purchasing Contractors, Inc., headed by Michael F. Ross of San Rafael.

Ross has been in the business of buying and selling surplus materials and his corporation is described as "buying anything for anybody." It too will be headquartered at the Woodland Avenue address.

The store will handle materials acquired in comparatively small quantities or as "one of a kind" — hardware, tools, marine supplies, automotive and mechanical equipment. Hours will be from Mondays through Saturdays from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m.

GUNNAR ANDERSEN of Mill Valley has opened his own architectural office at 812 Howard Street, San Francisco. Since 1962 he has been a principal in the architectural firm of Andersen and Palmer, which was dissolved at the end of last year.

GLENN CHEETHAM of San Rafael has been assigned by Del Monte Corp. as international sales administrator for the Orient, southeast Asia and the Pacific Islands. He was previously a unit supervisor in foreign sales accounting, having worked his way up from a business trainee when he joined Del Monte in 1966. He will continue to be headquartered at the San Francisco office.

Polyzois

DEAN P. POLYZOIS of Greenbrae has been promoted to assistant manager of Wells Fargo Bank's purchasing and supply department in San Francisco. Formerly purchasing officer, he has been in that department since 1964 when he joined the bank with 13 years previous business experience.

SAN RAFAEL OFFICE of Laurentide Finance Corp. is offering a new booklet, "Planning Your Financial Future," dealing with establishing a family budget, how consumer finance companies operate, truth in lending and outlines of three financial programs offered by Budget.

REAL ESTATE: FRANK HOWARD ALLEN AND CO. Newsletter reports a sudden return of the "high priced buyer" since the first of the year and predicts a record year for 1971.

Grubb and Ellis Co. volume for 1970 is recorded as being 32 per cent over 1969 sales and more than double the 1968 total.

Polly Moore of Ross has joined the sales staff of Kay Noah and Associates, Realtor in Tiburon. She was formerly with Gumps in San Francisco and has had an extensive background in personnel and decorating.

Lufthansa Personnel End Strike

FRANKFURT, Germany (UPI)—Ground personnel who crippled West Germany's Lufthansa airline with a 10-day work stoppage returned to their jobs today.

A Lufthansa spokesman said technicians servicing the company's air fleet were at full strength from midnight and white collar workers who also took part in the stoppage were back at their desks and counters.

Strikers from the airline's subsidiary, Lufthansa Services GMBH, which takes care of other airlines using West German airports as well as catering for Lufthansa passengers, also were back at work.

The Lufthansa spokesman said he expected the airline to be back to normal by Wednesday.

He said 72.6 per cent of striking workers organized with the public transport services union in a poll conducted Saturday and Sunday voted for accepting the airline's offer for a 15 per cent pay boost to its 15,000 ground personnel retroactive to last Nov. 1.

Federal Transport Minister Georg Leber told the airline ground workers their 25 per cent pay hike demands were "impossibly high."

Armco Steel Has 41% Profit Drop

MIDDLETOWN, Ohio (UPI) Armco Steel Corp. has slashed the quarterly dividend by 37.5 per cent after reporting a 41 per cent drop in profits for 1970.

INCOME TAX FACTS

By PETER J. WIKEL

There Is A Trap In Installment Selling That Catches Taxpayers

New rules for installment sales:

The installment method may be used only for reporting profits on certain sales of real property or casual sales of personal property where the sales price is in excess of $1,000 and the buyer agrees to pay the seller the sales price in two or more installments in two or more years.

Under the old law, this method was available only if the payments received by the seller in the year of sale (not counting debt obligations of the purchaser) did not exceed 30 per cent of the selling price. Under the new law, certain debt obligations are to be treated as payments received in the year of the sale. Thus, these types of obligations constitute payments to the seller in the year of the sale and must be so treated by the seller, for example, when determining the 30 per cent requirement.

Under the new law, registered, coupon or readily marketable bonds (other than those in registered form which a seller establishes will not be readily tradable) or other evidences of indebtedness, issued by a corporation or governmental body, including bonds that are payable on demand, are to be considered as payments received in year of sale.

These payments must be taken into account by a seller when determining whether the payments received in the year of the sale exceed 30 per cent of the selling price.

This provision is effective with respect to sales and other dispositions occurring after May 27, 1969, except when the sale or other disposition is made under a binding contract entered into on or before that date.

There is a special rule that when you sell on the installment basis that if the purchaser assumes the existing mortgage on the property you can exclude the amount of the mortgage from the sale so that you do not have to include it in determining whether or not you received more than 30 per cent in the year of sale. This is a general rule and there is one big exception

If the mortgage taken over is in excess of the basis of the property, that is your cost or other basis, then the excess of the mortgage over basis is considered a year of sale payment and has to be taken into consideration in determining whether or not you received more than 30 per cent in the year of sale.

Many a taxpayer has been caught in this trap. So if you are thinking of making a sale on the installment basis, be sure that the mortgage is less than your basisor that the excess of the mortgage over your basis plus the amount received in the year of sale does not exceed 30 per cent.
